REFRESHING COOLNESS.

Young Ladies Serve Ice Cream to Perspiring Humanity.

When the temperature is above ninety degrees, ice cream is especially enjoyable, and so it was at the strawberry and ice cream festival in the chapel of the First Presbyterian Church last evening. The room looked very pretty with the artisticly decorated booths and the charming waitresses and other assistants. The committee in charge was chairmaned by Mrs. H. A. Pope, and her energetic efforts were seconded by Mrs. William Dunn, Mrs. Jennie Abbott, Miss Blish, Miss Bittenbender and Miss Flora Petrie.

The booths were under the direction of the following: Flower table—Misses Nora Williams, Edith Lane, Luella Mills.

Lemonade well—Miss Etta Blish.

Candy table—Misses Wood, Benson, Bessie Blair, Pansy Herring.

Fan table—Misses Lillian Glenn, Edith Pruden.

Six booths representing each day of the week were filled with articles for sale appropriate to the day.

They were as follows: Monday—Miss Bond; Tuesday—Miss Kittie Glenn; Wednesday—Miss Nellie VanWinkle; Thursday—Miss Maag; Friday—Miss Estelle Bittenbinder; Saturday—Miss Lizzie Bittenbinder.

The committee was in charge of the kitchen, while the good things were passed by the following—Misses Eleanor T. VanDeventer, Grace E. Overton, Helen Boice, Margaret Cave, Evelin Searing and Jessie Pruden.

Despite the extreme heat, quite a number were present and a most enjoyable evening was spent.

An Interesting Service.

Dr. John Saadi, a missionary, will be present at the service of Grace Church on Sunday at 4:30 p. m., and will deliver an address in place of the usual services. He will speak upon "Mohammedanism; its origin and its doctrines as compared with Christianity". Dr. Saadi is a Syrian medical missionary, who has been prosecuting his studies in Philadelphia, and who expects to return to the East in the Fall and to continue his work in Morocco. Dr. Saadi was one of the interpreters to Gen. Wolseley on the expedition for the relief of Gordon in the Soudan and bears medals both from Queen Victoria and from the Khedive. Dr. Saadi will wear the costume familiar to the followers of the Prophet Mohammed, and will be assisted by two young men in the eastern costume.

Can't Wear Shoulder Straps.

A law was made by legislators of New Jersey last Winter making punishable by a fine of $500 the wearing of shoulder straps by any organization except the National Guard or State Militia. It was enacted for the reason that bicycle clubs, and in fact all sorts of clubs were wearing them. It also affects the organization of the Sons of Veterans, and they have been compelled to remove them.

It is hoped that next Winter the Sons of Veterans will be allowed to replace them, and an effort will be made to secure the enactment of such a law.

Very, Very Dear

is that experience which people pay for when they purchase eye glasses from those who know nothing about their adjustment; every penny of such investment may mean the future outlay of many dollars. To save expense and injury to your sight, be sure to get your glasses of an experienced optician, such as you are sure to find in daily attendance at Collier's, 103 Park avenue.

Rapid Transit for Elizabeth.

Elizabeth will have rapid transit a week from next Monday, when the traction company will begin to operate its system in the city with electricity. The inauguration of this important change will be celebrated with a big feast to which prominent citizens of Newark and Elizabeth will be invited, together with the city officials of both places.

About Plainfield.

Geo. W. Hand, editor of the Mount Holly News, attended the National Circuit meet in this city on Thursday, and writes as follows to The Press about Plainfield: "I found it to be the prettiest place which I have ever seen in this country. A wheelman residing in Plainfield is certainly in paradise, and your roads are all that could be desired."

Honest Man.

Horace Huff, bookkeeper for Garrett Q. Packer, found a check on the street yesterday belonging to Theodore J. Pruden. He promptly returned it to the owner.

TO OPEN DUER STREET.

J. C. Dyer Will Make No Effort to Defeat the Plan.

A determined effort will be made to secure sufficient signatures among borough residents to permit the opening of Duer street from the Babcock Building to Craig place. The work of circulating the petitions is in the hands of John Vetterlin, who will commence the work next week.

The work has been deferred in the past owing to the objections made by J. C. Dyer, who owns the house on Craig place that will have to be removed to allow the extension to be made.

Mr. Dyer was seen by a Press representative this morning, and he said that he should interpose no objections to the opening being made, except that he should want reasonable compensation for the removal of his house and purchase of the property. He said he had come to this conclusion after having found that with all the people he had talked with about the matter, all had advised him not to attempt to defeat the proposed opening, for it would be a good thing for borough and city.

NOTES BY THE WAYSIDE.

Haddenham Advocates That Main Sewers Be Built By the County.

[BY HADDENHAM.]

All this pother about sewerage, which by the way grows in extent, is suggestive. We have passed the time when Municipal Government was mere patching and tinkering, and have reached the day when it must be recognized as something to be based on scientific principles. It has always seemed to me that the main sewers of the counties should be done by the State. All that a town would need to do then would be to drain within its own limits, and carry its outlet to the most convenient channel. It would be cheaper and in all respects more complete than the present system. The chief difficulty rests on the lack of legislators with honesty enough, and brains enough to carry it out. But is that inseparable?

I was called upon a short time ago by a young girl, about sixteen years of age, who wanted to collect a bill. She was bright, and is said to be one of the foremost pupils in a Grammar School, not far outside the limits of Plainfield, where she has been through all the grades. As the account was small, and I happened to have a few pennies in my pocket, I asked her to receipt the bill. After some gymnastic exercises, which seemed necessary to get a good light and then a firm grip on the pencil, she wrote: "payed New Jersey"! Can anybody offer me a reasonable explanation of such a phenomena? Twenty years ago, perhaps, the late Richard Grant White often discussed with me about our public school system, in which we both took interest, as estimated by results. He once told me he had been trying for two or three years to find out how it was that most of the children could never be got to spell or to speak correctly, and he had given up the task in despair. It is equally true and nearly as puzzling today.

Heat Too Much for Horses.

A party hired a team and wagon from Kayton's livery in New York yesterday and drove to Plainfield. When they reached this city the horses were very much affected by the intense heat, and one of them was overcome. They stopped at Boyce's Hotel on Somerset street and sent for Dr. Pocock, who was able to bring the animal around all right. This morning he was improving and the party hope to be able to return to the city today. The horses were harbored in William Campbell's barn on Duer street.

Music For Young Men.

The young men's symphony orchestra, conducted by Prof. Conde, has been secured for the men's rally to be held at the Y. M. C. A. Building on Sunday, June 2. E. L. Suffern will deliver the address. A welcome is extended to all men.

Street Improvements.

The excellent work that is being done on Somerset street by Borough Street Commisioner William Emmons is highly commendable. Yesterday the crushed stone was rolled down, and is fast getting in good condition.

Electrical Experiments.

A. B. Clemens, formerly of Plainfield, and now of Newark, will make some electrical experiments for the members of the Junior Department of the Y. M. C. A., and their friends at the Association Building on Monday, June 3, at 7:15 p. m.

—The funeral of Melinda Marcile will be held at her late residence on Westervelt avenue this afternoon at 4.

WILL CONTEST.

Effort to Set Aside the Will of Sarah M. Adams.

Sarah M. Adams, a maiden lady, residing at Martinsville, died last March leaving considerable real-estate and personal property. She made three wills during a period of a very few months, and by the last one left all of her property to three heirs. There were fifteen heirs in all, and when they learned that she had made a will in that manner they opposed the admitting of it to probate, on the ground that she was mentally incapacitated to make a will; it was claimed that two years before her death she had an attack of paralysis, and was obliged to remain in bed in a helpless condition, and as a consequence was very forgetful. At times she was unable to converse intelligently and attend to ordinary business matters.

Those opposed to the will employed Reed & Coddington to file objections to it and yesterday it came up in the Orphans Court at Somerville. There was a very large number of witnesses on both sides. The case will probably occupy several days. J. A. Griggs of Somerville represents the executors. It is also claimed by those in opposition that there was undue influence exercised in the making of the document.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Councilman Harry Stockton left this morning on a trip to European climes.

Dr. C. M. Field arrived home las evening from an extended visit in the West Indies.

Miss Margaret Swain, of Craig place, has returned home after visiting in Brooklyn.

A young son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Proud died yesterday. Interment will be made today.

Mrs. Sarah Willet and Miss Mabel Willet, of Somerville, are the guests of friends in the borough.

Mrs. Angleman of Bayonne is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Cox of West Front street for a few days.

Counselor Charles A. Reed, of the firm of Reed & Coddington, left today for a few days rest at Virginia Beach.

M. H. Roberson, of Pittstown, N. J., spent Decoration Day with Mr. and Mrs. J. C. VanDyke of East Front street.

Miss Mary A. Luckey, of East Fifth street, returned yesterday after spending several days with her cousin, Miss Rider, of Brooklyn.

Miss May LaForge, of New Brunswick, has returned home after visiting her cousin, Miss Mary VanFleet of East Third street.

H. B. Clark and family, of New York, have moved into the house belonging to Mrs. Joseph Gilbert on Woodland avenue, where they will remain for the Summer.

Henry Bachman a former resident of Plainfield was in town today looking after his interests in the Plainfield Building and Loan Association, of which he was a heavy stockholder.

W. W. Blaker and family, of Philadelphia, who have been boarding at 805 North avenue, Netherwood, have leased one of Chas. H. Hand's new houses on South avenue, where they will move.

DEATH OF CHARLES HODGES.

A Resident of Cranford Now, But Formerly of Plainfield.

The death of Charles Hodges occurred last night at his late home in Cranford. For the past three weeks he has suffered intensely from asthma and from which death resulted. He had been a resident of Cranford for 15 years, and previous to that lived in Plainfield and was well known here.

For a number of years he has been in the real estate business. He was about 60 years of age and leaves a widow.

The funeral services will be held from his late home Monday afternoon at 2:30. Interment will be in the Methodist cemetery in this city. A. M. Runyon & Son were sent for to take charge of the remains.

Loan Association Matters.

The Plainfield Building and Loan Association met last evening and transacted business relative to the closing of Series No. 1, which took place today. The shareholders will be paid up as quickly as possible.

Muzzle the Dog.

Charlie Jennings, a bright little fellow in the employ of Will Tier at his ice-cream parlors, was bitten in the leg by a dog, at the corner of Pearl and Somerset streets yesterday. He went at once to Dr. Jenkins and had it cauterized.

THE METHODIST SOCIAL.

Vincent Chapel Was Cool and People Enjoyed Themselves.

A good-sized audience was present at Vincent Chapel last evening, and thoroughly enjoyed the church social which was in charge of Mrs. L. M. French. The chapel was quite comfortable, making it possible for those in attendance to appreciate the efforts of those who entertained.

The programme was opened with a tenor solo by L. S. Bond, accompanied by Miss Sharp on the piano. It was well rendered and Mr. Bond's voice was very pleasing.

Miss Mary Luckey then recited "Awfully Lovely Philosophy", which was enjoyed. Miss Luckey is an elocutionist of no small ability, and she gives promise of being one of the best. Later she gave a very amusing sketch, entitled "How She Entertained Her Sister's Beau". She was obliged to respond to an encore.

Miss Alice Carroll sang a very pretty solo, that was fully appreciated. Miss Grace Carroll was the accompanist.

Dr. Barnes then announced that the programme was concluded and invited all to retire to another room where cake and cream was on sale, and his advice was that all purchase.

A neat little sum of money was realized from the sale.

DUNELLEN.

Mrs. Agnes Dickason is visiting friends in Brooklyn.

Mrs. A. N. Randolph spent yesterday in Bound Brook.

Miss Eva Giles of Port Richmond, S. I., is the guest of Mrs. Joel Giddis.

Charles Dickason spent Decoration Day with John Matthews in Brooklyn.

Mrs. Duncan of Perth Amboy is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Howard Giles.

Mrs. Mary C. Laing has left for Salem, where she expects to spend the Summer months.

Judson Titsworth, who has been visiting his father, I. D. Titsworth left this morning for Newburg.

Mrs. E. G. Anthony returned to her home yesterday after spending several days with friends in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Smith and daughter, Miss Hattie, spent yesterday with Mr. Smith's parents at Bound Brook.

HEAT AFFECTING WORKMEN.

Many Employes of Sewer Contractors Obliged to Cease Labor.

The extreme heat of the last few days is having its effect on the men employed in digging the sewer trenches, and many of them have been compelled to cease work to escape prostration. This is putting the contractors behind on their work, and especially Prout & Co. The colored men employed by Honan & Sons are better able to stand the heat than the Italians, and there have been but few desertions among the former.

For a Chemical Engine.

An important meeting of the Fire and Water Committee of the Common Council was held last night, at which time representatives of the Babcock Chemical Engine Company of Chicago and the Holloway Chemical Engine Company of Baltimore, together with agents of other companies, and gave an exhibition of working models of chemical engines. The committee and Chief Doane were well satisfied with the exhibition, and bids for the engine which the city is to purchase will be submitted by the different companies at a future meeting of the committee.

VanNest Family Reunion.

The VanNest family had a reunion at Newark yesterday. The following were present from Plainfield: Mrs. Snell and son, Miss Ada VanNest, Mrs. VanBoskerck and son, Geo. VanNest, Theodore VanNest, Chas. VanNest and daughter, Louis VanNest and family, and John VanNest.

Bible Class to be Organized.

The Bible Class to be taught by William D. Murray will be organized at the Y. M. C. A. Building on Tuesday, June 4, at 8 p. m. An outline study of one of Paul's Epistles will be given each evening. All young men are invited to be present at the organization of the class.

Murphy Cleared.

In court at Elizabeth yesterday the indictment against Stephen Murphy of this city for assault and battery was dismissed. He was represented by Lawyer George DeMeza.

Hotter than Yesterday.

Leggett's thermometer registered 100 degrees at noon today. This is six degrees warmer than yesterday.

SENTENCED.

Justice Meted Out to Plainfielders This Morning.

Several Plainfield cases came before the Court at Elizabeth today, when sentence was pronounced: William Drake, for stealing oats and being unmanageable, was sent to the Reform School. Sentence was withheld on his two partners, Geo. Killoran and Wm. Connett, for one week.

J. McGowan and Mrs. Snyder charged with open ludeness were given two months each in the County Jail. Daniel O'Connor for giving a a note on Frank Linke pleaded non vault and will be sentenced next Saturday.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—The Netherwood station is receiving a coat of paint.

—Rogers Bros. will have a special sale of sea food this evening.

—The home of Mr. and Mrs. John McCarthy, of Evona, has been made happy by the advent of a bright little boy.

—The condition of Mrs. Fred W. Yates, on whom a difficult operation was performed a few days ago, is still critical.

—The Joint Memorial Detail will probably meet next week to settle all business regarding the Memorial Day celebration.

—The members of the Y. M. C. A. enjoy the fine bathing in the pool these hot days and a crowd is almost always present.

—Cards are out for Miss Kenyon's reception to be given to her graduating class at the Chestnuts, Tuesday evening, June 11.

—A pleasant party of young people were chaperoned by Mrs. Edward Waring of Willow avenue, to the Fraternity Dance given at Lehigh University last evening.

—Rev. B. T. O'Connell, of Bound Brook, who is well known here, was recently surprised by the presentation of $200—a token of the esteem in which he is held by his parishioners.

—Peter Petersen, the eight-year-old son of Claus Petersen, is quite ill at his home on the Cushing road with scarlet fever. Dr. Probasco is in attendance, and the house is quarantined.

THE WIND BLEW.

Three Incidents of Yesterday's Miniature Hurricane.

The heavy wind of yesterday blew the door shut in Kesselring's barber shop on Park avenue with such force as to shatter a large pane of glass. Mr. Kesselring was struck by some of the glass but not seriously injured.

During the heavy blow yesterday afternoon, Garrett Q. Packer attempted to raise the awning in front of his furniture store. He had a quantity of papers in his coat pocket, including checks, receipts, memorandums, etc., which were lifted from his pocket and carried promiscuously about the streets. Fortunately all but one of the papers were returned to him.

Clarence Waldron, an employe of Woolston & Buckle, came very near losing his life yesterday afternoon while at work on the roof of Mrs. G. H. Babcock's residence, corner of Eighth street and Madison avenue. He was busily engaged when the wind began to blow very hard. The force of it carried him off the roof and landed him in a gutter that surrounds the house about ten feet from the top. He had presence of mind enough to hold fast, thus saving himself from receiving fatal injuries.

Prostrated by Heat.

A young man named McGinley, of Philadelphia, a nephew of James Muldowney, was overcome by the heat this morning and was found under the Plainfield avenue railroad bridge unconscious. He was taken in a hack to his uncle's home where he is being taken care of.

Ferry Boats Collide.

The ferry boats Elizabeth and Communipaw collided at the New York slip this morning, with the result of the side of the men's cabin being badly damaged on the former. The Elizabeth had on board a number of Plainfield commuters who left here at 8:48. No one was injured.

Ex-Mayor W. L. Saunders moved today from Mercer avenue to the Revere House on Park avenue.

Shiloh's cure is sold on a guarantee. It cures incipient consumption; it is the best cough cure, only 1c a dose; 25c, 50c, $1. Sold by all druggists.

Karl's Clover Root, the great blood purifier, gives freshness and clearness to the complexion and cures constipation; 25c, 50c, $1. Sold by all druggists.

THE BANK BURGLARS.

Three Noted Crooks Who Are Thought to Have Done the Work.

Joseph Killoran, Charles Allen, and Harry Russell, three noted and daring crooks and burglars, were arrested in New York yesterday on the charge of committing post office robberies.

The inspectors who made the arrests say they have indubitable proof of the guilt of the men, and there is not the slightest doubt that it will send them to prison, where most of them have been before. In fact they are known as clever "crooks", and it has been only recently that they decended to robbing postoffices. Their regular enterprise is the robbing of banks, and there is a belief that they form the band which stole $22,000 from the First National Bank, a few weeks ago.

The men were taken before Commissioner Shield and held in $5,000 bail each for examination on Monday. They are now in Ludlow Street Jail. The three prisoners have been in New York for several days, though it was only in the last two days that they were located. They took their arrest coolly and denied their guilt.

A Press reporter called at the First National Bank this noon and was told that none of the officials had gone to New York to attempt to identify the men.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Charles W. Runyon now rides a Crescent wheel, purchased from the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company.

L. B. Woolston, of the Crescent Wheelmen, informs The Press that there was 3,490 paid admissions to the Crescent Oval Thursday afternoon. The receipts were between $700 and $800.

Thomas Ritchie, of Bayonne, Thursday stood his bicycle up against a tree on the outskirts of Roselle and then laid down in the shade and went to sleep. When he awoke, half an hour later, his wheel was gone.

Chief Marshal VanHorn was endeavoring to learn to ride a bicycle this morning. The perspiration which he left in his wake dampened the streets so that it was superfluous for the street sprinkler to go over them.

The prize list has been made up for the League of American Wheelmen's National meet to be held at Asbury Park on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, July 11, 12 and 13. The prizes will have an aggregate value exceeding $3,000.

The New York Evening Post says that F. J. Titus's withdrawal from the Irvington-Milburn road race yesterday after riding ten miles was attributed to the refusal of the officials to allow him pace-makers. The disappearance of Titus altogether would be no loss to true amateurs.

The Associated Cycling Clubs of New Jersey who were to have had a "State meet run" from Newark to Trenton were unsuccessful in getting the members to start on account of the very warm weather. There were only four to start from Newark and when they reached Plainfield three of them took the train and the other one remained here.

J. H. McVey of North avenue expects to entertain 300 cyclists tomorrow if the weather is pleasant. Among those intending to come to Plainfield are the Hobokus Cycle Club and the Catholic Cycle Club of Jersey City, together with several club from surrounding places. Mr. McVey fed 800 cyclists Thursday, the largest number ever visiting his place at one time.

Union County came to the front again yesterday, and maintained its standing as the centre of bicycling in the United States. It has more and better wheelmen, in proportion to its territory and population, than any other county in the world. And though small, it sends out more noted racers than any other locality of the same size.—Elizabeth Journal.

Arthur Zimmerman, the world renowned bicycle rider, will appear before the American public for the last time at a grand bicycle meet to be held at Mount Holly, on Saturday, June 15, under the auspices of the Mount Holly Athletic Association, on which occasion Mr. Zimmerman will give an exhibition of his speed. The event is looked forward to with much anticipation and extensive arrangements have been made to entertain the thousands who are expected to witness these events.

An Extra Train.

The Jersey Central have put on an extra Saturday train, arriving at the North Avenue station at 12:45, for the accommodation of commuters who want to get home early on Saturday.

Good Improvements.

All crosswalks in the borough are being relaid and brought up to the proper grade.

SENSATION IS PROMISED

New York Business Men To Be Indicted.

A Number of Prominent Merchants Said To Be Implicated with a Gang of Incendiaries—The District Attorney Promises a Startling Disclosure.

New York, June 1.—Assistant district attorney Vernon M. Davis has announced that by next Thursday he would have a most startling disclosure to make as the result of his investigations into the testimony and facts laid before him by Fire Marshal Mitchell. As a result of these investigations Mr. Davis will lay before the June grand jury on Monday disclosures that show, he says, most conclusively that the firebug craze which was unearthed through the confession of Simon Rosenbaum and which resulted in the conviction of Grauer, is insignificant compared to the wholesale arrests of reputable business men and merchants implicated through the latest developments.

Firebug Brotherhood.

Said Mr. Davis to-day: "I have secured evidence of the most startling character, and the developments will be most sensational. I shall lay the facts before the grand jury on Monday and I expect that over a dozen indictments will result. All those implicated are business men who now stand high in their various lines. I may say right here," he continued, "that there has been evidence laid before me which points toward a firebug brotherhood—a thoroughly organized gang of scoundrels who made much money through their operations. I cannot give you the names now as that might thwart the ends of justice."

BULK OIL VESSEL BURNED.

Struck by Lightning and Her Captain and Three Sailors Lost.

Philadelphia, June 1.—A cablegram from Havana has been received here reporting the loss of the bulk oil carrying bark Carrie E. Long, from Philadelphia for Havana, by being struck by lightning near the Bahama islands and the death of her captain, mate and two sailors. The Long had 147,192 gallons of crude petroleum aboard. Capt. Rolf was a resident of Bayonne, N. J., where he leaves a wife and child. Chales Ezsparg, who was killed, was first mate; W. Stanley, second mate, and L. Iversog, steward of the bark.

WILD WEST SHOW ATTACHED.

Facts Disclosed that James A. Bailey Owns the Property.

Bridgeport, Conn., June 1.—The Buffalo Bill Wild West show was attached here Thursday evening by John Hunt the head can-ass man, who claimed $200 for services. Benjamin Fish, local agent for the Barnum & Bailey circus, receipted finally for the company and the attachment was temporarily released. The attachment disclosed the fact that James A. Bailey is the sole owner of the Wild West show.

WIND STORM AT KINGSTON.

Considerable Damage Done, But Nobody Injured.

Kingston, N. Y., June 1.—A violent wind storm struck this city late yesterday afternoon, causing considerable damage. During the twenty minutes the storm lasted trees were uprooted, chimneys and signs were blown down and many windows were blown in by the force of the wind. So far as known nobody was injured.

TO PROTECT FOREIGNERS.

Three British Warships Ordered to Jiddah.

Constantinople, June 1.—Three British war ships have been ordered to Jiddah, the seaport of Mecca, Arabia, with instruction to protect the lives of foreigners and to investigate the reported killing of the British vice consul and the wounding of the other consular officers by a party of Bedouins near that place.

Lubeck Celebrates.

Lubeck, June 1.—This town was en fete yesterday, the occasion being the laying of the foundation stone of the canal that is to connect the rivers Elbe and Trave. Last night a banquet was given in the town hall and the town was brilliantly illuminated.

A Remarkable Cure of Rheumatism.

From the Groton Connecticut Review.—"David Lewis, who has been afflicted all winter by rheumatism, is out again and all due to one of the medicines advertised in our columns. After trying everything possible, he used Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which has relieved him of all pain, from which he was a constant sufferer and promises to make him fit for duty soon. We know David has been a great sufferer and are glad to see him around again." For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

Mr. D. Wiley, ex-postmaster, Black Breek, N. C., was so badly afflicted with rheumatism that he was only able to hobble around with canes, and even then it caused him great pain. After using Chamberlain's Pain Balm he was so much improved that he threw away his canes. He says this liniment did him more good than all other medicine and treatment put together. For sale at 50 cents per bottle at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

It Did the Business.

Mr. J. H. Cobb, publisher of the Mirror, at Brockton, N. Y., says: "For nearly two years the Mirror has been publishing the advertisements of Chamberlain's Remedies. A few days ago the writer was suffering from a bowel trouble and resorted to an old remedy which did not prove efficacious; finally he tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and two doses did the business, checking it completely. For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

WILL HUMBLE FRANCE

Her Participation in the Baltic Canal Fetes.

Her Flagship Will Have To Hoist the German Imperial Standard When the Kaiser Goes Aboard—The Government's Action Attacked in the French Senate.

Paris, June 1.—The Gaulois says that on June 23, during the celebration of the opening of the Baltic Sea canal at Kiel, the emperor of Germany will go on board of the French warship Hoche, when it will be obligatory upon the commander of the Hoche to hoist the German imperial standard, which bears the inscription "1870."

Attacked the Government.

In the senate last night Marquis de l'Angle-Beaumanoir attacked the government for sending warships to take part in the opening of the Baltic Sea canal. M. Hanotoux, the foreign minister, denied that the presence of a French fleet at Kiel was equivalent to abandoning Alsace-Lorraine to the Germans. France, he said, was able to keep peace with Germany without altering the sense of the moral authority of the nation, which was faithful to its traditions and confident of its destiny.

TO DISTROY A LANDMARK.

The Historic Pierrepont Mansion in New York Sold.

New York, June 1.—The historic mansion, No. 108 Fifth avenue, which was occupied for forty years by Edward Pierrepont, and which was the congregating point during the time of his residence there of men and women of prominence in the social and political circles of this country, has been sold. The house is to be torn down to give place to a large eight to ten-story fireproof business and office building. Judge Pierrepont prosecuted John H. Surratt, indicted for aiding in the murder of President Lincoln. In April, 1875, he became attorney-general of the United States, remaining in the cabinet of President Grant until May, 1876, when he was sent as United States minister to Great Britain.

ANOTHER TURKISH OUTRAGE.

Police Break into the Houses of the British and Other Delegates.

London, June 1.—A dispatch from Constantinople says that reports have been received there that the Turkish police recently forced an entrance into the residences of the British, Russian and French delegates at Moosh for the purpose of arresting a servant. The police had on previous occasions repeatedly insulted the servants of the delegates and otherwise made themselves offensive.

LORD DOUGLASS' MARRIAGE.

Reported That the Ceremony Was Performed Thursday.

San Francisco, June 1.—It was rumored this morning that Lord Sholto Douglass and Miss Loretta Adkins, the actress, were married Thursday in Oakland. It is known that a dispensation was issued by the Catholic church permitting the performance of the ceremony.

Assemblyman Vacheron's Case.

Albany, June 1.—Assemblyman Vacheron, of Ozone Park, L. I., is in Albany, trying to arrange with the district attorney to have the bribery proceedings against him moved for trial at the term of the county court which begins next week.

Kittery Navy Yard Shut Down.

Portsmouth, N. H., June 1.—Nearly all of the force in the department of construction and repair at Kittery Navy yard were discharged last night owing to lack of funds to carry on work, which practically shuts down the yard.

Lynching in Ohio.

THE COLIMA DISASTER.

Little Hope Held Out for the Safety of the Missing Passengers.

San Francisco, June 1.—This morning, in view of the discouraging dispatches that had been received concerning the loss of life by the Colima disaster, there was little hope held out for the safety of the missing passengers. Those whose spirits were made buoyant yesterday upon the receipt of Mr. Brewer's dispatch reluctantly concluded that they would hear nothing further from relatives or friends. It was expected this morning that the Pacific Mail Steamship company would receive some dispatches confirming those received during the night, but none came. Mrs. C. H. Cushing, mother of the two young men who were passengers aboard the Colima, however, received a message from her son from Mazatland. It merely said: "Am here, returning on San Juan. C. H. Cushing." The telegram indicates that he knows nothing concerning his brother's safety. It is evident that the San Juan has made a careful search at the scene of the disaster, and has proceeded on her course with the boats' occupants whom she picked up on her way.

SIX MORE ARE SAFE.

Reach Colima on a Raft—Women and Children All Lost.

Colima, Mex., June 1.—Six survivors of the steamer Colima have reached here. They are John Thornton, J. F. Childbred, of Seattle, and cabin passengers Lewis Peters and Vindor; seamen Gonzales, Fred Johnson. They all got ashore on a raft, from which three seamen were lost. Another raft with five persons was seen near San Telmo. Its fate is unknown. The women and children were all in the staterooms and all went down with the steamer. The survivors saw Purser Wafer in a well-manned boat pulling away from the sinking steamer toward shore. It is supposed that this boat is still afloat.

Picked Up Nine at Sea.

San Francisco, June 1.—A late dispatch received in this city from Guatemala says the steamship Barracouta picked up a raft with nine passengers of the Colima. The Barracouta has not yet put into port.

Were Residents of Utica.

Utica, N. Y., June 1.—J. E. Roberts and wife, of New York, reported lost in the Colima disaster, were for many years residents of this city. Mr. Roberts was about 75 years old. They were en route to Utica.

RETIREMENT OF THE CRAMPS.

No Change in the Ownership of the Great Ship Yards.

Philadelphia, June 1.—The retirement of Jacob C., Samuel H. and William M. Cramp, from the board of directors of the William Cramp & Sons' Ship and Engine Building company, gave rise in some quarters to a belief that the change means the passing of the control of the great establishment into new hands. One of the old directors of the company said this morning: "The change has no significance whatever. The three brothers were paid officers of the company and were under a five years' contract. The contract expired yesterday, and they stepped out. There is absolutely no change in ownership, nor is any contemplated."

Gold Reserve Again in a Healthy Condition.

Washington, June 1.—For the first time since Dec. 12 last the gold reserve has climbed above the $99,000,000 mark. At the date named it dropped from $101,303,810 to $96,751,427, and continued to drop to Feb. 14, when it stood at $41,340,181. Since April 26 it has been steadily increasing until May 28, when the figure representing the reserve was $98,263,533. To-day the reserve amounts to $99,048,872.

THE DEADLY TROLLEY.

Three Victims Die at Philadelphia Yesterday.

Philadelphia, June 1.—The 101st, 102d and 103d victims of the trolley within the past seventeen months died yesterday. Clarence Koberts, a 10-year-old colored boy, was killed on Ninth street; David Cohen, an 8-year-old boy, who was struck by a trolley car Thursday morning, and Francis Strausberger, a traveling salesman, who was struck by a trolley car in May 13, died yesterday.

ESTELLE FLINT GUILTY.

Convicted of Murder in the Second Degree for Killing Her Husband.

Utica, N. Y., June 1.—Estelle Flint, who shot and killed her husband on Jan. 7, was last night found guilty of murder in the second degree. The defense was emotional insanity. The convicted woman will be sentenced to-day.

Robbed the Hoboken Postoffice.

Washington, June 1.—Inspectors Lewis, Jacobs and Holden, of the postoffice department, yesterday arrested Joseph Killoran, Charles Allen and Harry Russell for robbing the postoffice at Hoboken, N. J., and other postoffices. They were held in $5,000 bail each.

Released from a Cuban Prison.

Washington, June 1.—The department of state has received a cablegram from Gen. Springer, vice consul at Havana, announcing that one "Carrillo," a naturalized American, imprisoned at Havana, had been released and had sailed for New York.

Offer To Mount Holyoke College.

South Hadley, Mass., June 1.—Dr. D. K. Pearsons, of Chicago, has offered Mount Holyoke college $50,000 to endow professorships, provided the college will raise $150,000 more in one and one-half years.

South Carolina Cases.

Richmond, Va., June 1.—The United States circuit court of appeals here has fixed June 6 next as the time for hearing argument here on the appeal in the South Carolina cases.

Registration May Proceed.

Richmond, Va., June 1.—Judge Goff has entered an order so modifying his decision in the South Carolina registration case as to permit the registration to proceed Monday.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., JUNE 1, 1895.

The Weather Indications for Tomorrow are Fair, With Slightly Cooler at Night.

COMING EVENTS.

Announcements of all meetings, etc., will be made in this column, free of charge, if copy is furnished by 10 a. m.

June 1—Ball game between Hope and Monroe Avenue Chapels team.
Junior Christian Endeavor Society reception in Crescent Avenue Church
June 1—Meeting of Woman Suffrage Advocates in High School building—Evening.
June 1—Strawberry festival at W. C. T. U. rooms, Watchung avenue—Afternoon and evening.

Muscular Christianity, to the front again. The winner of the great Irvington-Milburn race yesterday is a member of the Y. M. C. A.—Elizabeth Journal.

The movement under way to close the barber shops in this city on Sunday is in the right direction. Even working six days a week the tonsorial artist has a hard life, and it is too much to ask of him to labor half a day on Sunday.

The Cranford Chronicle this week advocates the establishment of a borough government for Cranford, and in reference thereto says.

Why does not Cranford get in line, now that the legal conditions regulating the change are so easily complied with?

But one reason occurs to us, and the mere stating of it should awaken a purpose to destroy its potency. Cranford as a borough would no longer be the plaything of Elizabeth capitalists and politicians. Its affairs would probably be managed with an eye single to Cranford interests. Its officials would probably be men of oak, able to withstand the winds blowing from the County Seat rather than reeds, which can only hope to exist by meekly bowing whichever way the stronger power ordains.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—The public schools had one session yesterday, on account of the intense heat.

—The North Plainfield Township Committee will probably meet early this month.

—The latest fad is Trilby ice-cream soda, which can be enjoyed at Randolph's pharmacy.

—A large number of guests are being booked for the Netherwood Hotel, which opens June 15.

—Dr. D. C. Adams's handsome residence on Grove street is being brightened with a fresh coat of paint.

—Honan & Sons are today laying a sewer drain from Watchung avenue and Richmond street to Cedar brook.

—One member was received by transfer at the meeting of the Woman's Relief Corps, No. 10, last evening.

—East Front street from Leland avenue to the city line, is being improved with a top dressing of crushed stone.

—Proprietor J. E. Beerbower has increased the comfort of his patrons by placing revolving fans in the City Hotel.

—W. W. Stratton of East Third street has leased the billiard parlor on North avenue, and will conduct it in the future.

—E.H. Hooley and family of Central avenue have moved into their new house just completed on Rockview avenue, opposite Mercer.

—Charles Fulmer, of North avenue, Netherwood, has leased W. J. Tunison's new house on South avenue, where he will move his family.

—The new house of S. T. Williams on Sandford avenue, both outside and inside, will be painted by E. E. Marshall & Co., the North avenue painters.

—U. B. Crane, hatter, says if you want to keep cool the rest of this Summer, just call and see the featherweight hats, underwear, etc., he has to offer. They sell at sight.

—Counsellor McClure obtained a non-suit yesterday in the case of Mrs. Elizabeth Schorb against Michael Gill and J. Gheyland. Lawyer Harry Runyon appeared for the plaintiff.

—The Ladies Aid Sociey of the First M. E. Church have in preparation a floral cantata, under the management of Mrs. Daniel Davis. It will be given Tuesday evening, June 11.

—The Climax Stopper Company, whose ad appears in another column, have placed on exhibition a handsome case containing samples of bicycle specialties in J. H. McVey's restaurant on North avenue. It is the only one in the city.

IN THIS LAND OF THE FREE.

Points That Excel in Interest Those of Any Country Under the Sun.

The other night, before a small audience in a church in one of the side streets of New York, a lecturer gave a vivid account of a tour he recently made in a region which has not been visited by everybody, and is neither in the Alps nor in the Himalayas. The lecture was illustrated with stereopticon views. He started out from a huge edifice, the picture of which made a deep impression upon those who saw it, and the description of which was truly eloquent.

He then gave a view of a banqueting palace on wheels, not a thing of the fancy, but one which actually exists. It raised wonder. He next presented a picture of an old house of singular historical interest, which was once inhabited by a wretch whose name is familiar even to school children. His words were thrilling. Then came a far famed university, a renowned city, a towering shaft that rises over a celebrated battlefield, a landscape of unsurpassed beauty, an edifice the like of which 'twere hard to find, the headquarters of a military commander who figured in a sanguinary war, the domicile of a patioti; goldsmith whose name is romance, an ecclesiastical edifice, lovely gardens, an athenæum such as Athenæus never saw, a museum of superlative architecture, and other spectacles not less fascinating or surprising.

His tour was not through Italy or Spain or any part of France, or any other distant country upon which so many lecturers like to dilate as they stand near a stereopticon. It was a jaunt from New York to Boston, starting at the Grand Central Station and ending at Bunker Hill.

It is a melancholy fact that there are Americans who neither know nor appreciate the features, the traditions, the beauteous scenery, the notable, the architectural and monumental spectacles, the old institutions, the Revolutionary episodes, the history or the life of their own unequaled country.

There are Americans who can babble for a week about what they have seen in England, or Switzerland, or Sicily, but who couldn't tell you any more about their native country, or even about picturesque New York, than if they were Comanches who had spent their lives in scalping pale faces.

The school boys and girls ought to make it their business to get all the available knowledge possible of the United States, as well as of Rome and Greece. Youngsters! can't you somehow find out a good deal about the great and wonderful land you live in?

Spoiled His Good Work.

Mr. X. is a contractor of philantrophic tendencies. He attends the meetings of his workingmen; he goes to call on them regularly twice a year, and if a workman is about to leave he always wants to know the reason why.

Hence, when a short while ago his bookkeeper told him that Pat Mulcahey was going to leave, Mr. X. immediately requested the pleasure of Pat's company in the inner office.

"Well, well, Pat," he began, "what's this I hear about your leaving? What's the matter? Haven't I always treated you well?"

"Indade you have, sorr," replied Pat.

"Well, what's the trouble?"

"It's that domned boss Smith. Shure yisterday he took me away from me hod an' bricks, an' sint me out on a hill that was covered wid rocks. He put me on the top, with a shteel rod in me hand.

"'Drill a hole there,' says 'e.

"An' I squatted down wid a hammer an' the rod, an' I worruked fer two hours makin' a foine, nate hole. An' then, will you belave, it sorr, a domned fool came along, an' filled the hole wid powdher an' blue it all to smithereens, an' I'll not do that fool thrick ag'in."—Boston Budget.

An Indian's Ruse.

"It was back in the 70's, when the Cheyennes were troublesome in the Nation. I was in the 6th Cavalry and a party were out after the reds. Our major charged a band of Indians and captured a lot of ponies. They turned out to be Wichitas, and I was sent to the agency near Fort Sill to report and turn them over to the owners.

"When on my way back I was met by a lot of Wichitas, and we parleyed. then they joined us. The next day we saw a band of over 100 Cheyennes in war paint.

"They were for killing us, but the chief of our party persuaded them to let us go. We went to a gulch quite a distance away, and, I supposed, to camp. Our leader piled a lot of sunflower stocks over the fire, and I asked what for. 'Make heap smoke. Fool Injun." He then got his ponies and we took our horses and ran as fast as we could for about ten miles. The wily Indian was afraid that if we waited there we would be killed by the Cheyennes.

"The band surrounded that spot, guided by the smoke, as I learned later, but our Wichita friend had fooled them with his clever ruse."—Kansas City Journal.

This Without Warning.

"I think," said the Cheerful Idiot, "that it will not be long before the fellow who was arrested for the murder of that man Saturday will be convicted."

"Do you think he is going to confess?" asked the landlady.

"Oh, no," said the Cheerful Idiot; "I base my idea on the fact that the confinement in prison may tell on him."—Indianapolis Journal.

What's in a Name.

Although it is not difficult for a man to induce the Legislature to change his name, it is seldom that advantage is taken of this liberality. People seem to have an affection for their names, no matter how homely or grotesque they may be.

The new canal uniting the North and the Baltic seas is the consummation of a thought which originated more than 600 years ago.

CHURCH CHIMES.

Preparatory services were held at the First Baptist Church last evening.

The First Baptist Church will make a feature this year as usual of Children's Day, and an elaborate programme is now in preparation.

Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis has been secured to deliver an address before the local Sunday-school Union of Bound Brook, Sunday evening, June 9.

INS AND OUTS.

The Y. M. C. A. team will play at Cranford June 15 and July 13.

The Arlington Baseball Club of this city are fully convinced that they are able to put up a good game with the Y. M. C. A. team. Their reason for this is the well contested game they played with the Westfield Athletic Club, Decoration Day, they being defeated by only a small margin by the latter club.

WOMEN AND SCHOOL.

Why the Fair Sex Should Have a Voice.

[CONTRIBUTED.]

The New York Tribune is now giving an extended series of articles on the Public School System of New York, for the public school question is one which interests every American, since upon the efficiency of education depends the welfare of the whole country. The growing wealth of people, and the cheapness of manufactures, have given the women of the United States much more leisure than formerly. Therefore we find the women of our land willing and and anxious to engage in charitable works, and also to assist in the work of carrying on the public schools. Mr. Howell, the novelist, tell us that women are the readers in these times.

Therefore, as mothers who are ordinarily free from business cares, and who have the time and inclination to look after the welfare of their children, and who are fitted for the task by education, as well as by nature, common sense would seem to demand that they should have a voice in the management of our public schools.

This question will be freely discussed this evening, at the meeting in Assembly Hall, (High School Hall), Fifth street, to which all are cordially invited. H.

HOTTEST EVER KNOWN

No 31st of May Ever Beat That of Yesterday.

Many Prostrations in New York City and Philadelphia—New England Scorched—Two Deaths from the Heat at Chicago and One at St. Louis—Humidity Very Low.

New York, June 1.—Yesterday and last night were record beaters so far as weather was concerned. The thermometer reached the highest point ever known in the month of May, climbing to 94 at 3 p. m. At 6 o'clock it had fallen to 87, at midnight to 80 and at 6 o'clock this morning it again started upward.

Humidity Away Down.

The humidity in the atmosphere was at a minimum; down to 56 in fact, and the heat was the simon pure article, dry and deliberate. It was less suffocating and uncomfortable on that account It drained the body of its humidity through the pores, and lemonade stands and soda fountains were besieged all day by individuals anxious to keep up the balance of moisture.

Boston and Philadelphia Suffer.

The hot wave was extended, and Boston and all New England cities and Philadelphia suffered from even greater heat than reached New York. The entire country is not sweltering, for the people of Wyoming are wrapped in overcoats, and Cheyenne experienced a stiff breeze last night. The sudden arrival of the hot wave had a wilting effect, and there were a large number of prostrations from heat.

Two Deaths at Chicago.

Chicago, June 1.—At 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon the thermometer in this city registered 96 degrees. Mrs. Mary Arndt was overcome by the heat and died last night. William Mangan, a teamster, was also overcome and fell from his wagon and was fatally injured. There were many prostrations.

Fatal Sunstroke at St. Louis.

St. Louis, June 1.—Yesterday was the hottest day in the year so far, the mercury at 2 p. m. marking 85 degrees. Four cases of sunstroke, one of them resulting fatally, were reported.

REV. DR. SHEDD DIES IN PERSIA

He Was Chief of the American College at Oroomia.

Washington, June 1.—The department of state has received a dispatch from Minister McDonald at Teheran announcing the death of the senior and most conspicuous member of the American mission service in Persia, Rev. J. H. Shedd, D. D., who died at Oroomia on Good Friday last. Besides his ministerial work he was chief of the American college at Oroomia. The death of Dr. Shedd leaves the Rev. W. L. Whipple, of Ohio, the senior American missionary in Persia.

SAYS MARTI IS NOT DEAD.

Something of Importance Soon To Happen at Port au Principe.

Jacksonville, Fla., June 1.—A letter was received yesterday by a prominent Cuban of this city from Havana, stating positively that Gen. Jose Marti, president of the new Cuban republic, was not dead, as reported by the Spanish government officials. The letter also stated that the report that Gen. Gomez had been wounded was false. That something of importance would happen shortly near Port au Principe was also stated in the letter.

ORDERED TO SEIZE LIQUOR.

Reported Instructions of Gov. Evans to His Constabulary.

Columbia, S. C., June 1.—From good authority it is learned that last evening Gov. Evans issued an order to the dispensary constabulary directing them to seize all liquor they may find. No copy of the order can be obtained. The governor is out of town.

Miss Bryant Honored.

Boston, June 1.—Miss Sara Cone Bryant, of Melrose, of the senior class of the college of Boston university, has been honored with an appointment to a fellowship by the collegiate alumnæ association of America. This fellowship will give the appointee a year's study in the great German universities, commencing next fall.

Confederate Visitors Leave.

Chicago, June 1.—The party of distinguished southern ex-confederate officers and their women folk who came to take part in the monument dedication, started on the return journey by special train last night. At Cincinnati the chamber of commerce will give the party a reception

Big Oil Fire at Hamburg.

Hamburg, June 1.—During a thunder storm last night lightning struck and set fire to a number of sheds, containing 20,000 barrels of petroleum, on the island of Wilhelmsburg, opposite this city. The fire burned fiercely endangering shipping.

Lum Smith Again Convicted.

Philadelphia, June 1.—Lum Smith, publisher of the Agent's Herald, who was convicted a few days ago of using the mails to defraud, was convicted yesterday afternoon on another charge. Sentence in both cases was deferred.

Germany's Champion Defeated.

Liverpool, June 1.—In a wrestling match last night for £100 and the championship of the world, Cannon threw Rasso, the German champion, three times out of five and won the match.

For a Million Dollar Club House.

A TRIBUTE TO MR. GRESHAM.

Formal Action of the Diplomatic Corps at Washington.

Washington, June 1.—Sir Julian Pauncefote, British ambassador and dean of the diplomatic corps at Washington, forwarded to Mrs. Gresham the following letter:

Madam: I am desired by the diplomatic correspondents at Washington to convey to you the expression of their deep sympathy in the great affliction which has fallen upon you and your family by the loss of your distinguished husband, the late secretary of state. The relations which he held, in that important and responsible post, with the foreign representatives at this capital, were such as to inspire them with a profound sense, not only of his great abilities, but of the lofty and unswerving spirit of honor, justice, and conciliation with which he was animated in the treatment of diplomatic questions. They will ever retain a pleasing and grateful remembrance of his unvarying courtesy and kindness. I beg, madam, to assure you that no one participates more fully than I do in the sentiments which I am charged to convey to you on this mournful occasion as dean of the diplomatic corps. I have the honor to be, madam, your obedient servant, JULIAN PAUNCEFOTE.

The letter was approved by all the ambassadors and ministers at Washington.

TO REMAIN IN EASTON JAIL.

Belvidere Prison Unfit for Carpenter in His Present Condition.

Easton, Pa., June 1.—Habeas corpus proceedings yesterday before Judge Scott for the removal to Belvidere, N. J., of Samuel Carpenter, who is accused of having murdered Mrs. Blackwell at the latter place, resulted in Carpenter being allowed to remain in the Easton jail. Counsel for Carpenter waived all legal objections to his removal, but contended that the Belvidere prison is unfit for him in his present condition. On this account the judge allowed the man to remain here until the prison physician shall visit the Belvidere jail and report to the court regarding its condition.

BIG MINE FIRE.

The Wyoming Colliery at Port Bowkley Burning Fiercely.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., June 1.—A fire of a most serious nature broke out in the north shaft of the Wyoming colliery of the Lehigh Valley Coal company at Port Bowkley yesterday, and is still burning fiercely. Fully 500 feet of the gangway is a blazing furnace. The cause of the fire is laid to a Polish miner's carelessness. This morning the officials in charge of fighting the flames are confident that they will succeed in putting out the fire with the hose by to-morrow morning, and that there will be no need of flooding the mine. The loss will be heavy.

A MINISTER VINDICATED.

Rev. William Goss To Be Reinstated in the Methodist Church.

Saratoga, N. Y., June 1.—The judicial conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, consisting of Bishop Andrews and a court of twenty-one ministers from New England, having under consideration the case of the Rev. William Goss, who was expelled by the New York Methodist Episcopal conference, Thursday night decided in favor of Mr. Goss and ordered his reinstatement. Mr. Goss will preach in the Eighteenth street Methodist church in New York to-morrow night.

JOCKEY CORBLEY KILLED.

Horses Fall in a Heap at St. Asaph and Punch Breaks a Leg.

Washington, June 1.—A fatal accident occurred during the last race at St. Asaph yesterday afternoon. As the horses were coming around the turn into the home-stretch Kirkover, ridden by Corbley, fell, breaking the jockey's neck. Three other horses fell on him. Donnelly, on Punch, the favorite, was injured about the head. Punch broke his leg, and had to be killed.

NEW BICYCLE RECORDS.

Dernberger Lowers the Time for Several Distances.

Louisville, Ky., June 1.—At Fountain Ferry park Mike Dernberger, of Syracuse, N. Y., broke another record. He covered two-thirds of a mile, paced by a quad, in 1.09 4-5. Yesterday's events closed the record breaking contests, in which Dernberger has lowered the time in the half mile, two-third mile, one mile and two mile distances.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

TALK OF OLNEY NOW

It Is Said That He May Succeed Gresham.

Rumored That Acting Secretary Uhl Is To Be Made Postmaster General and Mr. Wilson Promoted to the Department of Justice—Only Speculation, of Course.

Washington, June 1.—Speculation as to Mr. Gresham's successor has developed a cabinet slate which transfers Attorney General Olney to the state department; Postmaster General Wilson to the department of justice, vice Olney, and Acting Secretary Uhl, of the state department, to the post office department, vice Wilson.

Only Speculation.

These, of course, are simply speculations, but the sources from which they originate give them considerable force.

BY A PROTRUDING CAR DOOR.

An Express Messenger Fatally and Two Italians Seriously Injured.

Bridgeport, Conn., June 1.—George A. Lane, an Adams Express messenger, was probably fatally injured last night in a singular accident. The door of a freight car being loaded on a side track in front of the Wheeler & Wilson factory, stuck out so that when the 6:13 west-bound train came along it hit the baggage car. Lane, who was standing in the door, was struck in the neck and knocked from the car. Two Italians, whose arms were resting on a window sill, had their arms broken. Lane's neck is cut in a fearful manner and he is otherwise hurt. He lives in Wallingford, Conn., is single and 24 years old. The car windows were broken and several persons were cut by flying glass.

TO CONSOLIDATE ITS FACTORIES

Believed the General Electric Company Will Locate in New Jersey.

Schenectady, N. Y., June 1.—It is accepted as a fact that the General Electric company has been offered one hundred acres of land and one million dollars cash to consolidate all its factories at one place in New Jersey. The company's engineers have reported that the saving of expenses by consolidating the factories at Lynn, Mass., Harrison, N. J., and in this city at some point near Philadelphia or New York would offset the loss which would result from selling their factories at the points named. The officers of the company refuse to be interviewed, but it is accepted as a fact that the company will desert this place.

FLOODS FEARED IN COLORADO.

Apprehensions of Railway Managers on Account of Heavy Snows.

Denver, Col., June 1.—Railway managers are fearful lest the great downpour of rain and snow of the past two days will result in dangerous floods in the rivers like those a year ago, which did enormous damage to the railroads. From the time when the storm began early on Wednesday morning, until it ceased last night, there was a precipitation of 1.73 inches. For Colorado this is unusual, and for the same length of time it is unequalled. At Leadville and many other places in the mountains the snow was more than two feet deep. It is melting rapidly.

WILLIMANTIC BANK SCANDALS.

Discovery of a Note for $10,000 Forged by Cashier Risley.

New Haven, June 1.—Another forged note of the dead Cashier Risley of the First National bank of Willimantic has come to light. It is drawn for $10,000, and secured by that amount of bonds by a local gaslight company. The bonds were supposed to have been cancelled five years ago.

GOULD ADMITS DEFEAT.

The 20-Rater Niagara Needs a Breeze Like Vigilant.

London, June 1.—Howard Gould says that Niagara was fairly beaten Thursday in the race off Lownestoft by Lord Dudley's Inyoni in a very light air. He adds that he thinks Niagara, like Vigilant, needs a strong breeze. The next race in which Niagara will compete will be off Harwich, June 3.

For Running a Lottery Business.

Washington, June 1.—Judge Thomas, assistant attorney general for the post office department, has issued a fraud order against the North American Loan & Investment company and against the Co-operation Loan & Investment company, both of New York city, for running a lottery business.

Erie Defaults on Her Interest.

New York, June 1.—Edward White, treasurer of the Erie railroad, said this morning that he had no instructions to pay the interest due to-day on the company's bonds, known as the "funded 5's." This means that there will be a default on this interest which amounts to $100,785.

School Superintendent at New Haven

New Haven, Conn., June 1.—The board of education last night chose as superintendent of the New Haven public schools C. A. Kendall, to succeed V. G. Curtis. Mr. Kendall has been connected with the publishing house of Heath & Company of Boston.

Japs Leaving Liao-Tung.

London, June 1.—The Times to-day will publish a dispatch from Tien-Tsin saying that the Japanese are rapidly evacuating the Liao-Tung Peninsula, and that the movement will be completed in ten days.

No Apportionment in "Pennsy."

Harrisburg, Pa., June 1.—There will be no apportionment by this legislature. This was settled yesterday afternoon by the defeat in the house of congressional, senatorial and legislative bills.

Galvin May Become an Umpire.

Pittsburg, June 1.—Jimmy Galvin, the once-famous base ball pitcher, said to-day that he expected to get on the league staff of umpires before long.

Bimetallic League at Jacksonville.

Jacksonville, Fla., June 1.—A large number of citizens met at the board of trade rooms yesterday afternoon and formed a bimetallic league.

always tries to stick you, and so does a man who tries to sell you a cheap (so called) bicycle. The only cheap bicycles are the high priced ones, because they're the only kind that run well and wear well. Of course, for light service, we sell a lower priced wheel, but then we don't pretend that its equal to the best. Just inquire of some one who has tried to get full and good service out of a low price wheel and see if the difference in price is not made up in repairs. We take this opportunity to say that our Repair department has been running until late every night.

BETTER MAIL SERVICE.

Postmaster Hetfield Gets a Direct Pouch for the West and South.

Postmaster Hetfield has at last gained for this city increased mail facilities which it has never heretofore enjoyed, but which, nevertheless, as a post-office of this class, it should undoubtedly have had years ago. Heretofore all mail matter for the west, south and southwest has had to be transferred first to the New York city post-office and there re-worked, naturally entailing considerable loss of time to some very important mail matter. This fact has been very clearly understood by the present postmaster, and at his urgent request Superintendent R. C. Jackson, of the railway mail service, has issued an order for this post-office to pouch on the through fast mail via B. & O. R. R., leaving here at 5:30 p.m. As this train does not stop here it will be necessary to forward the pouch to Bound Brook for connection.

The mails which will be dispatched by this train are for southern, western and southwestern states, with the exception of the extreme northwestern. This mail will leave daily except Sunday, and will close at 4:45 p. m.

MR. BARKALEW'S FAST WALK.

The Freeholder Sprinted Four-and-a-Half Miles to Catch a Train.

Freeholder L. E. Barkalew, of the borough, has a record for pedestrianism since Wednesday last. On that day he and Freeholder Lutkins, as a committee, went to North Branch to inspect work being done on a bridge at that point. Freeholder Lutkins was fortunate enough to secure a ride to Somerville in a farmer's rig while Freeholder Barkalew was left behind at North Branch with no train for this city until 8 p. m. If he could have reached Somerville in an hour's time he would be able to catch a train which would bring him home by 6. He started off pacing the railroad ties. He was bound to cover the four-and-a-half miles in an hour or bust his suspenders. He arrived at the Somerville station just as the train was pulling out of the depot and succeeded in swinging himself on to the last car, thoroughly exhausted, and arrived in this city as soon as his partner, Freeholder Lutkins.

WOMEN NEED TO VOTE.

And the World Needs It, Too, Says Dr. Lewis.

REASONS FOR SCHOOL SUFFRAGE.

Enthusiastic Meeting of Those Who Want to See Women Have a Voice in the Management of Schools—Aaron M. Powell, Dean Rodman and Prof. Maxson Speak on the Question.

The question of school suffrage for women has been agitated so much by the women of New Jersey that it seems as though their persistency is going to amount to something more than mere talk, and that before long it will be counted one of their duties to vote at the school elections. In Plainfield the women have not been inactive, but have been quietly at work, both personally and with petitions. Some time ago the Plainfield leaders planned for a public meeting where the voice and sentiment of those interested could be heard on the subject. Saturday night was the time set and a number of men and women met in Assembly Hall of the High School building for the purpose of discussion.

Mrs. David P. Hall, who is the recognized leader of the movement in Plainfield, presided and stated in a concise manner the object of the meeting, giving some valuable hints and suggestions that were well noted by those present. Mrs. Hall then introduced Aaron M. Powell who spoke substantially as follows:

There are many differences of opinion on the subject of woman suffrage, but to my mind they all seem to run in the same channel practically. Women have learned the alphabet and now want more, and it should not be denied them. This question will soon be submitted to our legislators, and then they will be given an opportunity to do something that will be a credit to them. For the second time the Supreme Court of New Jersey has deprived women of the right to vote in full. I want to give this item of testimony: I have been in touch with several localities in the South where women have taken an active part in attempting to gain the ballot in local affairs, and, at times they became grieved and discouraged, yet they were recognized in the end. I have found men who were very decided that women had been helpful in conducting public affairs.

We want the Constitution so amended as to give women the right they ask. God links together opportunity and responsibility, and we should do what we can and do it now. I was very much pleased to note in tonight's Evening Post, the fact that Mayor Strong had recognized the ability of women by appointing one as inspector of the Schools in New York. I hope that before his term of office expires he will put more competent women in the Board of Education.

New Jersey cannot afford to be left behind in the procession, and let us help them all we can. It is not the woman question, but the human question. Men need the help of women, and women the help of men. Dr. Parkhurst asked for woman's help and how grandly they responded.

Dr. Lewis was introduced and gave a few practical thoughts on opportunity and duty. He said in part:

God has settled this question of woman suffrage. We think we are doing something, when in fact it is God's work. Prof. Maxson and his excellent corps of teachers are doing more actual work along these lines than Dean Rodman and all the rest of the ministers together. Our educational system is at stake. I believe the time is coming when we will only have the common school and the actual university, and that all kinds of intermediate places for learning will be cut off and cease to exist. Women need school suffrage, and the world needs it, to promulgate high and lofty ideas. Women should open the door and walk in, embracing the opportunities that belong to them.

David P. Hall told of his experience while district school clerk of Fanwood township. He was very amusing and related graphically the many interesting experiences that he had. He told how it was before and after women were allowed to vote, noting the vast improvement when they were permitted a voice in school matters. While not a full suffragist Mr. Hall thought that school suffrage for women was the best possible thing.

Dean Rodman followed Mr. Hall and he, too, thought that school suffrage for women was a good thing.

The last speaker was Prof. H. M. Maxson, whose remarks indicated that he was heartily in sympathy with the movement. He gave some of his experiences which could be applied to the subject. The following resolution was presented by Isaac W. Miller and adopted:

Resolved, That it is the sense of the meeting of the citizens of Plainfield, that it is desirable that the school suffrage be extended to women, upon the same terms as it is now exercised by men, and that our representatives in the Senate and Assembly be requested to use all honorable means to place an amendment to the constitution to that effect upon a speedy road to its submission to a vote of the people.

Mrs. D. P. Hall, Mrs. D. W. Pond, D. P. Hall and Dean Rodman were appointed a committee to go to Trenton and present the resolution together with the petition.

Mrs. Hall said that she thought that there would be several thousand names attached to the petitions now in circulation.

Twenty-five delegates were present.

One Comforting Thought.

O, these days of the aspiring mercury! Is there no friendly Burtus? One comforting thought, the sun doesn't raise everything. E. Love's wall papers are low as ever.

IS THIS THE MAN?

Messrs. Runyon and Laire Think They Can Identify the Bank Robber.

In connection with the arrest of parties in New York last week who it is thought had something to do with the First National Bank robbery, Lawyer H. C. Runyon and W. R. Laire of this city went to New York on Saturday and visited the Tombs at the time the prisoners were eating their mess. Mr. Laire, after looking over the prisoners picked out a man whom he thought was the one who was seen hanging around his store for two days. His name is Killoran, and his appearance is now changed from what it was at the time of the bank robbery.

Mr. Laire will go to New York again to look at him when his general appearance will be changed to correspond with the way he looked when he is supposed to have been in this city.

Mr. Runyon also feels quite positive that Killoran is the man whom he saw in the bank during the noon hour when the package of currency is supposed to have been taken from the bank and who attracted the attention of Cashier Runyon and Clerk Vail with a lot of papers while his accomplices committed the theft.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Councilman Charles J. Fisk was the guest of Trenton relatives over Sunday.

William Force of New street is confined to his home with a severe attack of rheumatism.

Miss Charlotte Bartel of New York is the guest of Mrs. E. H. Munford of Woodland avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Groendyke of Grant avenue spent a pleasant Sunday with New York friends.

Miss Bessie Brenden of New York has been visiting Miss Gertrude Andrews of Central avenue.

Thad. Doane, Jr., is seriously ill with pneumonia at the home of his parents on West Fifth street.

William Ford, of the Trenton True American spent Sunday with his parents on East Fourth street.

Cashier W. F. Arnold, of the City National Bank, and family were guests of New York friends yesterday.

George Paterson, who has been employed in the Scott Printing Machine Works, will leave on a trip to Scotland in a few days.

Mrs. Charles Runyon and her sister, Miss Jennie Cuthbertson, spent Sunday in Philadelphia. Mrs. Runyon will return today.

Charles E. Horne and family have returned to their home on Willow avenue after a week's visit with Mrs. Horne's sister, Mrs. E. G. Ashbrooke, of Philadelphia.

Miss Lillian D. Garretson, for several years an employe of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company at their Plainfield office, resigned her position yesterday.

Mrs. Emma D. Poole of Bridgeton, who has been visiting her son, John W. Poole of East Second street, delivered an address before the Christian Alliance at Trenton Saturday.

Miss Anna Vroom and Hattie Powelson left this morning for Ridgewood, to attend the wedding of Dr. W. L. Vroom, nephew of Miss Vroom, which will take place tomorrow evening.

Ex-Chief Bennett of the Cleveland fire department, and an ex-president of the National Board of Chief Engineers, was in the city Saturday. He is now engaged in selling fire department supplies.

Mr. and Mrs. George Gray of Brooklyn spent Sunday with Mrs. Gray's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Westphal of the West End. Mrs. Gray has been ill and was thought a change would be beneficial.

Mrs. B. J. Shreve and daughter, Miss May, have gone to Bryn Mawr to attend the closing reception and commencement of Bryn Mawr College on Thursday June 6, when Miss Harriet Ridgway Shreve will be graduated.

Wheels Dished in the Car Tracks.

While Mr. Staats and family was returning from Plainfield to his home in South Plainfield Saturday night in a wagon, they met with an accident. In passing Liberty street on Front street the wheels caught in the car tracks demolishing two of them. He was obliged to secure another wagon in order to get home. The wrecked wagon was run in the yard in the rear of Mr. Clark's residence. No one was injured by the mishap.

Westfield Sewer Muddle.

The Westfield sewerage subject will come up for trial at Trenton tomorrow. C. N. Codding and Frank Bergen appears for the township, and Craig A. Marsh of this city appears for the Locust Grove people.

THE APPEAL DISMISSED.

Exciting Time in Court at Elizabeth.

WATSON CASES WON BY THE CITY.

Deprived of His Witnesses, the Corporation Counsel Springs a Surprise, and Wrests Victory From the Jaws of Defeat in Both Cases—Mayor Gilbert's Act Enforced.

The proceedings in Court at Elizabeth this morning in the Watson liquor cases were decidedly sensational. Craig A. Marsh, counsel for the city, was informed by the police that the detective on whose testimony the city relied, had failed to attend court although he had been duly subpoenaed. It was supposed that the city would have to throw up the cases. Mr. Marsh said no; that he should move the cases just the same. The police were dumbfounded. How could the city win without evidence? Watson appeared in court with Lawyer John A. Frech of Somerville, and Public Prosecutor Fred C. Marsh, of Elizabeth. Mr. Frech, after the city moved the first case, applied for postponement. After heated argument, the Court refused to postpone. Craig A. Marsh then moved to dismiss the appeal on the ground that the Court had no jurisdiction. He followed the motion with a long argument the substance of which was as follows:

When Plainfield's charter was amended in 1874, the Legislature enacted that all convictions in the City Court should be reviewed by certiorari to the Circuit Court. That act was declared unconstitutional, and so all persons convicted before the City Court and jury, contrary to the intention of the Legislature, were allowed a new trial before a county jury on appeal. Mayor Gilbert this year directed the Corporation Counsel to draw an act that would be constitutional, and that would restrict the right of review in such cases to review by certiorari to the Supreme Court. This act had been duly passed and was now in full force, and hence Watson's only method of reviewing the two convictions was to take out a writ of certiorari in the Supreme Court. The Corporation Counsel said that he would be perfectly frank with the Court, and admit that on first considering the question he had thought that the act would govern future cases only; but upon more mature reflection he conceived it to be his duty to maintain that the act governs these cases as well as any to arise hereafter. He thus presented the arguments pro and con which he said would occur to the judicial mind and concluded by maintaining that the law had a retrospective operation, and was neither ex post facto since it did not relate to crimes, nor did it impair the obligation of any contract nor divest any vested right. It merely touched the remedy. He therefore moved that the appeal be dismissed.

Mr. Frech said that the question was one of the greatest importance, and one which he would like time to look into with his associate, Senator Marsh. He asked for time. Senator Marsh said he was to be in the case if there was a postponement to enable him to examine the case. He had not been spoken to until this morning.

The Court asked the Corporation Counsel if the act was to take effect immediately and he answered that it was. The act was produced and found to be as stated.

The Court thereupon granted the city's motion and dismissed Watson's appeal. The same decision was given in the second case.

The police were delighted and literally hugged the Corporation Counsel for turning what they thought was sure to be a humiliating defeat into a double victory for the city.

Divorce Granted.

Through the efforts of his counsel, W. K. McClure, Charles H. Vermeule of this city was this morning granted an absolute divorce from his wife Ella on statutory grounds by the Chancellor.

Were Too Boisterous.

Anna Sils and Anna Oltman were arraigned in city court this morning on the charge of being disorderly on Cottage place. They were sentenced to pay a fine of $10 or go to jail for 30 days.

Liable to Be a Crash.

One of the immense plate glass windows of the post-office has settled and any heavy jar is liable to loosen it and cause a great crash.

On The Half Shell.

Lawyer George Demeza and C. J. McNabb entertained a party of friends at a clambake at Violet View on Saturday afternoon.

EXPERT ON SEWAGE BEDS.

Mr. Hazen, an Authority, Here to Advise City Officials.

Allen Hazen, of Boston, the chemist at the Lawrence experiment station of the Massachusetts State Board of Health, has been employed by the city to investigate the land where it is proposed to build the city sewage beds. In company with Councilman Frost he is today taking borings on the Smock farm, the land purchased of the Mutual Life Insurauce Company, and will take samples of the earth back with him to the experiment station, where they will be thoroughly analyzed so as to ascertain decisively as to the effects the sewage will have on the land.

The city officials have from the start engaged the services of the best experts to advise about the different phases of the construction of the sewer system, and the employment of Mr. Hazen is along the same line of action.

Mr. Hazen had charge of the sewage disposal of the World's Fair grounds at Chicago, and since the close of the fair he has spent a great deal of time in Europe investigating and studying the disposal of sewage and purification of water supplies. He has recently published a book on the latter subject which is considered to be the best authority in this country.

Mr. Hazen will be present at the meeting of the Common Council this evening, and doubtless will give his opinion in reference to the system as proposed for this city.

FIRST JUNE WEDDING.

Pretty Marriage in the German Reformed Church Yesterday.

A very pretty wedding occurred in the German Reformed Church on Craig place yesterday afternoon at 3, when Miss Freda Sutterlin and George Hoffman were married. Miss Margaret Kirch was bridesmaid and Lafayette Rosenstiehl was best man. Miss Pauline Sutterlin, sister of the bride, and Fred Bach were witnesses to the happy event. The ceremony was performed by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Hauser. Miss Nettie Kreitling presided at the organ, and played the wedding march.

A reception was given at the bride's home on East Fourth street last night, which was attended by relatives and near friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Hoffman will reside in this city.

At the Council Tonight.

The Common Council meet this evening, when the ordinance introduced at the last meeting authorizing the Council to purchase the necessary land for sewage beds will be considered. Councilman Frost told a Press representative this morning that with all due regard for formality and no desire to rush the ordinance through without due and proper consideration, it would be advanced as far as possible towards final adoption. Mr. Frost said that the work of constructing the main sewer and beds would be started as soon as possible.

Mrs. Atterbury's Tea.

Mrs. Albert H. Atterbury gave a pleasant afternoon tea on Saturday. Receiving with her Miss Atterbury, of Trenton, Mrs. Irving Brown, Mrs. Charles B. Corwin, Miss Whiton and Miss Kenyon. A large number of guests were present although the heat was intense.

The refreshments were served by Thomas Toombs, steward of the Country Club.

An Unusual Occurrence.

A Plainfielder who was at New Germantown last week says that on Friday there was a vivid display of lightning, accompanied by heavy thunder, but no rain fell. An unusual occurrence was that a very large tree standing in the Lutheran Cemetery was struck by the lightning and completely shattered.

Condition of Mrs. Yates.

The condition of Mrs. Frederick W. Yates is still very critical. During last night her temperature rose to 102-4-10, while her pulse registered 115. Though weaker she is able to retain medicine much better than Saturday.

Verdict for Gould.

In the case of Gould against Bundy Justice Mosher rendered a verdict this morning in favor of the plaintiff for $16.40 and costs.

WRECK OF THE COLIMA

Another Graphic Account of the Disaster.

Harrowing Tales of Misery Told by Third Officer Hansen, Who Escaped on the Deck House—Lifeboats and Rafts Seen and Many Nude Bodies Floated by Him.

San Francisco, June 3.—Capt. H. L. Read, the well-known marine surveyor of this city, in a dispatch from Mazatlan gives some additional particulars of the Colima wreck obtained from Third Officer Hansen, who escaped on the deck house, and A. J. Sutherland, who clung to the seats of an overturned lifeboat.

The Heaviest Squall of All.

The heaviest squall of all those experienced came after the steamer had foundered and while passengers and crew were struggling in the water. The force of the gale at this time was dreadful. Many were washed from the wreckage to which they clung. Some were killed or rendered unconscious by being struck by timbers, which were dashed about with resistless fury. Rafts and boats were overturned. Had it not been for this squall many more undoubtedly would have been saved.

Saw Several Rafts and Boats.

The gale drove rafts and wreckage before it with great rapidity. Mr. Hansen saw a raft pass at 6:30 p. m. on the day of the disaster. On it were three men. He also saw a raft on which were Mr. Childberg and six others. These men had two oars and seemed to be making for shore. Mr. Hansen also saw a boat in which was First Officer Griffiths and four or five men. When last seen this boat was trying to pick up the purser, but it was not seen again and is supposed to have been swamped by the heavy sea.

The Survivors Badly Bruised.

Every one of the survivors except Sutherland is badly bruised by being struck by the wreckage. He was protected by being under the lifeboat after it had overturned five times with him. He says he saw two ladies alive and then saw them drown without being able to render them any aid. Sutherland and Hansen say the wind would catch up planks and lumber from the deck load, hurl them in the air with furious force and dash them down upon those in the water.

The Captain Washed into the Sea.

It is reported that just as the steamer went down Cap. Taylor was washed from the bridge into the sea, and that there he was struck by a piece of wreckage and killed or stunned so that he was unable to make further effort to save himself. He had attempted to heave-to under the slow bell, but could not get the vessel's head up to sea. Then he tried going ahead at full speed two or three times, but the wind threw her off and she fell into the trough of the sea.

Harrowing Tales of Misery.

Sutherland and Hansen both tell harrowing tales of the misery they witnessed while keeping themselves afloat. Many of the bodies which floated past them were entirely nude, either the clothing had been torn off by the fury of the wind and waves or the victims had been too ill or too terrified to leave their beds until the last, and had then rushed upon deck clad only in their chamber robes. Apparently the children were all drowned in the cabins.

Had $160,000 of Treasure Aboard.

It was the 129th trip of the Colima. She had on board $160,000 of treasure, shipped to Mazatlan from the house of Meichers, Echegueven & Co. It is insured in London and Germany. Until the depth of water in which the steamer went down was positively known two diving plants and two steamers belonging to Hidalgo & Co., and the Cornego company, of La Paz, were kept waiting to attempt the recovery of this treasure.

206 Souls on Board.

According to the passenger list when the steamer left Mazatlan there were 37 cabin and 84 steerage passengers from San Francisco, 5 from Mazatlan and a crew of 80, making a total of 206 souls on board. Other passengers may have been taken on at San Blas and Manzanillo and some may have left the steamer, so the exact number on the ship when she foundered is not known here.

Serious Shooting Affray.

Petersburg, Ind., June 3.—Two brothers named Debal became involved in a quarrel while discussing the coal miners' strike of last summer and began shooting at each other with shotguns, which resulted in six persons being severely injured. One of them having both eyes shot out and a portion of the load of shot entering his abdomen. He cannot recover.

Anniversary of Garibaldi's Death.

Rome, June 3.—Yesterday was the fifteenth anniversary of the death of General Garibaldi. The popular societies marched to the capital, where they deposited wreaths on the liberator's monument. The demonstration was orderly throughout. Garibaldi's family observed the day at Caprera.

His Body Almost Severed.

Syracuse, N. Y., June 3.—While riding a bicycle yesterday Frederick Van Schoick, aged 15, lost control of his machine and fell between a trolley car and a "trailer." The wheels of the "trailer" ran over him, almost severing his body in two. He died shortly afterwards.

Quaker Meeting in New York.

New York, June 3.—Quakers gathered in full force at the Friends' Twentieth street meeting house yesterday to attend the opening of the series of meetings in connection with the annual conference. The exercises were entirely devotional.

Another Victory for Banker.

Paris, June 3.—At the Velodrome Buffalo yesterday the American bicyclist, Banker, won the international race for the Prix d'Angers, for professionals. The distance was two kilometres. Wheeler was one of the starters.

Representative Hitt's Condition.

Washington, June 3.—Representative Hitt is progressing slowly to a more favorable condition. The extraordinarily hot weather militates against his more rapid recovery.

GRADUATES AT ANNAPOLIS.

Important Week for the Naval Academy Boys.

Annapolis, Md., June 3.—This will be an important week in the lives of the naval academy boys who are fortunate enough to be of this year's graduating class. The exercises of graduating week begin to-day, with the reception of the board of visitors. There will be a seamanship drill on board the Monongahela in the afternoon. To-morrow there will be a battle drill, target practice, machine shop drill, steam tactics and boats under oars. A battalion of infantry will open Wednesday's exercises to be followed by a competitive company drill and a dress parade in the evening. On Thursday a battalion of artilery, fencing, setting up and gymnastics is the programme to precede a parade. Friday will be given up to graduating exercises, and at night a drill and a hop will conclude the programme. The honor man this year is Stuart Farar Smith, of Philadelphia, a son of Gen. Smith of the union army. He is one of the youngest members of his class, being only 20 years of age. Cadet Wm. G. Groesbeck, of Ohio, is the only other star member of the class. He is a son of Dr. H. G. Groesbeck, of Cincinnati.

THE TRAINMEN'S CONVENTION.

Important Work Done at Their Meeting at Galesburg, Ind.

Galesburg, Ind., June 3.—The convention of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen have adopted the system of the state legislative board to look after legislation friendly to railroad labor in the several states. The grand master and first vice-grand master were given greater authority regarding the disposition of funds. The convention indorsed the policy of the grand officers during last year, by which strikes were avoided and the men lived up to their contracts with the railroad companies. It adopted the Cedar Rapids plan of federation combining the brotherhoods of engineers, firemen, conductors, trainmen and telegraph operators. The salaries of grand officers were reduced. Election of officers will probably take place to-morrow.

DOWN AN EMBANKMENT.

Fifteen Persons Injured in a Trolley Car Accident at Syracuse.

Syracuse, N. Y., June 3.—A trolley car full of pleasure seekers, on their way to Onondaga Lake, jumped the track and rolled down an embankment yesterday morning. Out of twenty passengers only five escaped without injury. The car was going at a high rate of speed, and in going down the embankment tore loose from the trucks and rolled completely over, landing on its roof in a puddle of water two feet deep. That no one was killed is nothing short of miraculous. A broken collar-bone, a broken leg, a broken arm, internal injuries, cuts and abrasions were sustained by about fifteen passengers. Two boys, who were riding on the side platforms, were thrown insensible into the shallow water, but were rescued by a policeman.

SHE DIED DEFENDING HIM.

Mrs. Longreon Withdrew Her Charge Against Her Husband.

Brooklyn, N. Y., June 3.—Mrs. Annie Longreon died at the Long Island hospital, last night, from burns she received from some cause still unknown, on last Wednesday evening. Mrs. Longreon was found in bed badly burned, and when questioned by the police said that her husband had thrown a lighted lamp at her, but, when the coroner took her ante-mortem statement, she denied her husband threw the lamp and said she did not know how she got her injuries. Her daughter found her in bed and notified the neighbors. The husband was arrested and is in jail, charged with having caused his wife's death.

AFFAIRS IN NEWFOUNDLAND.

Scheme To Run Colonial Secretary Bond for the Premiership.

St. John's N. F., June 3.—Colonial Secretary Bond's success in negotiating a loan has set afoot a scheme to run him for the premiership to replace Sir William Whiteway, who is now old and regarded as being behind the times. Mr. Bond leads the radical element of the Whiteway party, which outnumbers the others considerably. The movement is being pushed vigorously. Sir William Whiteway will be given a supreme court judgeship, if a vacancy occurs. If not, he will be relegated to a seat in the legislative council. It is believed that two thirds of the Whiteway party will support Mr. Bond.

MAXIMO GOMEZ ALIVE.

He Was Not in the Encounter in Which Marti Met His Death.

Santiago de Cuba, June 3.—Puerto Principe and the Vuelta Abajo district are quiet. It is now definitely stated that Maximo Gomez, the insurgent commander-in-chief, is alive. The report of his being wounded in the battle of Dos Rios and his subsequent death is untrue. He was not in that encounter in which Jose Marti met his death.

Child Lacerated by a Dog.

Vineland, N. J., June 3.—A dog attacked eight-year-old Mamie Pierce, daughter of Charles Pierce, of Elma, last night. The child's cheeks and neck were torn by the vicious animal. The mother attacked the dog with a club and suceeded in beating him off. The dog disappeared and has not been found. It is thought he was mad.

French Guiana Frontier Trouble.

Rio Janeiro, June 3.—The recent trouble on the French Guiana frontier, in which five Frenchmen were killed in a skirmish with natives under Chief Cabral, was the subject of a violent debate in the chamber of deputies yesterday. Many of the members declared that the French were the aggressors.

Serious Result of a Drunken Row.

Troy, N. Y., June 3.—As the result of a three corner drunken row at Cohoes Sunday night, Peter O'Neill, married, aged 40, and Edward Flaherty, aged 39, also married, were seriously stabbed by Sebal Nassin, a pole. It is thought O'Neill cannot recover. Nassin has been arrested.

Preparing To Flood the Mine.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., June 3.—The fire in the north gangway of the Wyoming colliery at Port Bokley has broken out afresh and preparations are being made too flood the mine.

Button Factory Burned.

Babylon, L. I., June 3.—The Breslau button factory was destroyed by fire yesterday. Loss, estimated at $40,000.

LATIN-AMERICAN SNAG

Central Republics Would Combine if They Could.

What a Diplomat Thinks of the Rumor—The People Have Little Voice in the Control of Affairs—The Question Will Be Settled by the Presidents of the Five Countries.

Washington, June 3.—Responding to the interest which the revival of the project for a Central American union has occasioned, this question was put to one of the best informed of Central American diplomats: "What is the initial step that will be taken to secure the formation of a union of all the Central American states? Will the question first be submitted to a vote of the people, in order that the sentiment of the several countries may be obtained?"

Vox Populi Not Heard.

The diplomat smiled pityingly upon his questioner. "The people," he said, with significant shrug of the shoulders, "have little voice in the control of affairs in Central America. Those countries are nominally republican, but they are, as a matter of fact, oligarchies. The question of a union of all Central American states will be settled mainly by the presidents of the five countries interested. If these gentlemen favor a federal union it will not be long delayed."

Great Majority Favor It.

When asked how the ruling classes regard the proposition he said: "The great majority favor it. Nearly all the influential people in Central America belong to the liberal party, which is the party of progress, and which is mainly favorable to a closer alliance of all the states. From private letters received in Washington it would appear that strong pressure is being brought to bear upon the presidents of Guatemala, Honduras and Nicaragua, to use their influence in favor of the union. If these three will work together the result is practically assured. Salvador and Costa Rica are holding aloof, but, if the other countries favor such an alliance, Salvador and Costa Rica will be compelled to join them.

Widespread Benefit.

"Such a union would be of incalculable benefit to Central America. It would give us a unity of interest, which we have now only in a sentimental way. It would decrease our public expenses inasmuch as there would be but one president for the five republics, as well as but one congress, where there are now five presidents and as many congresses. Such a union would guarantee peace throughout all Central America; it would put an end to petty revolutions, which are sometimes very costly, both in life and in money, and it would enable us to present a bold front to any nation which might attempt to bully us. The five republics could raise an army of from 150,000 to 200,000 men.

DUEL IN A JUSTICE'S COURT.

One Man Killed, Two Fatally Injured and Another Badly Hurt.

Houston, Tex., June 3.—During a trial in a justice's court at Snyder Springs, Van Zandt county, Saturday, the principals in the case engaged in a bloody duel with pistols, in which one man was killed, two fatally wounded and another dangerously hurt. The trouble grew out of the suit of Bert Garland vs. Dickson. Dickson and four sons, Capman and Dean, a witness, engaged in the fight. Dickson was killed, one of his sons badly wounded and Chapman and Dean are now dying from their injuries. The other three sons of Dickson escaped, and are being pursued to prevent further trouble. The whole county is aroused and further trouble is expected when the three Dicksons are captured.

THE ITALIAN ELECTIONS.

Claimed That Fourteen Socialists and Radicals Were Elected.

Rome, June 3.—Reballots were held yesterday for members of the chamber of deputies in the districts where none of the candidates last Sunday obtained the constitutional majority, that is a number of votes greater than one-sixth of the total number of inscribed electors and greater than half the votes given. Yesterday the radicals carried Milan. The socialist convict, Rosco, was elected in Palermo, and his success has caused great excitement. The socialist, Barbato, was elected in Ravenna. Altogether fourteen socialists and radicals were elected.

United Labor League.

Pittsburg, June 3.—A new labor party that will hereafter be known as the United Labor league of western Pennsylvania, was organized here last night. Over a hundred delegates representing every labor organization in western Pennsylvania, met in convention and decided to amalgamate into one organization. The combined membership will be over 25,000.

Small Cyclone at Scranton.

Scranton, Pa., June 3.—A heavy rain storm which passed over the city last evening was accompanied by a small cyclone covering a strip of about six blocks along Keyser avenue. Several houses were badly damaged, outhouses destroyed and two barns were blown over, one being carried by the high wind fully 100 yards.

La Bourgogne's Lost Passengers.

Flushing, N. Y., June 3.—John Watsen Lawrence, who was lost from the steamer La Bourgogne, was 27 years old, the son of Walter B. Lawrence, and was associated with his father in the stock brokerage of W. B. Lawrence & Son, at No. 25 Broad Street, New York. He belonged to one of the oldest and wealthiest families.

The Assailants Will Be Punished.

Paris, June 3.—The Turkish ambassador here has informed M. Hanotaux, the foreign minister, that the sultan has appointed a court-martial to inquire into the recent attack upon the consuls at Jiddah. Exemplary punishment will be meted out to the assailants.

Swept Away by the Surf.

Atlantic City, N. J., June 3.—Miss Jennie Grogle, of Tenth and Dickinson streets, Philadelphia, aged 21, while bathing yesterday in front of Bew's jetty was caught in the current and swept away from her escort and drowned.

Yankee Warships Greeted at Southampton.

Reception Given to Our Cruisers While Going to Kiel—Many Visitors Entertained by the Officers—Old Glory Floating Everywhere—Could Not Return the Salute.

Southampton, June 3.—The American warships lying in Southampton water preparatory to sailing for Kiel, where they will take part in the opening of the North Sea and Baltic canal, have added much to the gaiety of this town. The harbor yesterday was alive with boats and launches from the American vessels, and all day long the pier where the boats arrived and departed was lined with townspeople watching the movements of the blue jackets and their officers.

Old Glory Everywhere.

Since the arrival of the warships Southampton, which is doubtless the best affected place in England towards the United States, has been lavish in its display of the stars and stripes, and very many of the shop windows contain American devices.

Many Visitors Welcomed.

The American warships are anchored off Netley hospital, where there are also two Italian cruisers. Sailors from the vessels are constantly going ashore, and Americans, Italians and Englishmen mix with the bonhommie characteristic of their class. The American flagship has many visitors, all of whom are shown every courtesy by the officers. Saturday the mayor of Southampton, attired in his official robes and chains of office, returned the visit of Rear-Admiral Kirkland.

Could Not Return the Salute.

When the San Francisco arrived, she fired a salute which the town was not able to return, having no guns. The United States ship Alliance steamed slowly outside last night, and then shaped her course westward. She is bound for Newport, but will probably call at Madeira. Her decks were crowded with officers and men. As she passed the flagship she fired a salute. The squadron will probably sail for Kiel on June 11.

DEATH OF SIR JAMES BACON.

A Prominent Dispenser of English Law for Fifty-nine Years.

London, June 3.—The Right Hon. Sir James Bacon died in this city Saturday. He was born in 1798, and was called to the bar at Gray's inn in 1827, afterwards becoming a member of Lincoln's inn, of which he remained a bencher until his death. He obtained a silk gown in 1846, and in 1868 he was appointed commissioner of bankruptcy for the London district, which office he held until the end of 1869, when he was appointed chief judge in bankruptcy. In August, 1870, he succeeded to the vice-chancellorship vacated by Sir William M. James, and in 1875 was made a judge of the chancery division of her majesty's high court of justice. He continued in active work up to November, 1886, when he resigned the vice-chancellorship. As a judge, his sayings were often memorable and his judgments were seldom reversed. He was appointed a member of the privy council upon his retirement.

RECEPTION FOR THE ST. LOUIS.

Southampton Preparing To Receive the New American Liner.

Southampton, June 3.—This town is preparing an elaborate reception for the new American line steamer St. Louis. A grand banquet will be given, at which the officers of the steamer will be present, and there will be an excursion around the harbor. The officials will meet the steamer in a tug as she comes up Southampton water. The steamship company will give a breakfast to a number of guests from London and Southampton on the day the St. Louis sails on her return to New York.

THE ASTOR VILLA.

Reported That Calvin S. Brice Has Rented It for $10,000.

Newport, R. I., June 3.—It is reported that the William Waldorf Astor villa, in Bellevue avenue, has been taken for the season by Senator Calvin S. Brice at the largest rental ever paid for a Newport house—namely $10,000. Mr. Astor when he first decided to rent the house asked $15,000. Real estate agents declare that the rental has been arranged. The house has been vacant during five years. Senator Brice will entertain at the villa for his daughters.

Sunday Barber Law in Brooklyn.

Brooklyn, N. Y., June 3.—But few barber shops were open in this city yesterday, and those which were kept open had a great piece of white linen or some other material fastened over the windows. Customers were allowed to come in only by the side doors, the front doors being tightly closed, and watchers were posted on the outside. Only one arrest was made for violation of the new Sunday law.

Racing To Be Resumed.

Chicago, June 3.—It is unofficially announced that racing will probably be resumed at Hawthorne track to-morrow, and the betting on local events will be attempted. The employe giving out the information said that the foreign book would be lacking but that all the other features of the track would be run as before.

Death of a Well-Known Banker.

Amsterdam, N. Y., June 3.—Daniel Cady, one of the best known bankers in the Mohawk valley, is dead, aged 75 years. He leaves a large estate, a large part of which, it is believed, has been bequeathed to charity. The deceased was unmarried and leaves no near relatives.

The Grand Steeplechase Race.

Paris, June 3.—The grand steeplechase race run yesterday was won by Styrax, with Quand Meme second and Mondeville third. Thirteen horses ran. The post odds were 25 to 1 against the winner.

Crop Outlook in Illinois.

Springfield, Ill., June 3.—The Monitor to-day will say that the wheat, oats and hay crops in central Illinois will be failures. There is a fine stand of corn, but it needs rain. Recent hot winds have dried up pastures.

DEBS NOT DESPONDENT.

He Addresses a Circular Letter to American Railway Union.

Terre Haute, June 3.—Eugene V. Debs, president of the American Railway union, has addrezsed a circular letter to the members of that organization in relation to the recent decision of the United States supreme court. The circular says: "A cruel wrong against our great and beloved order, perpetrated by William A. Woods, United States circuit judge, has been approved by the United States supreme court; but though prison walls frown upon myself and others whom you choose as officials of your order, I assure you that neither despondency nor despair has taken the place of the course which has characterized us and our order since the storms of persecution first began to beat upon us."

Carries Out Russian Practices.

President Debs then reviews incidents leading up to the results of the great railway strike and says: "In Russia the victim of autocratic displeasure is denied a trial by a jury of his peers. William A. Woods carries out the Russian practice. In Russia the doomed man or woman is arraigned before the supreme despot or one of his numerous satraps. Truth, justice and mercy are forever exiled. Age, sex, character, innocence, name and condition count for nothing. It is enough to know that the brave soul yearned for freedom, and the penalty of exile, imprisonment or death is inflicted, and it has come to this at last in the United States of America that the law of injunction is the will of a despot, and by the exercising of this power, American Railway union officials go to prison and the hope is that by the exercising of this power the American Railway union will be crushed. In this supreme juncture I call upon the members of the American Railway union to stand by their order. In God's own good time we will make the despot's prisons where innocent men suffer monumental."

WILL ADJOURN TO-DAY.

Important Decisions Expected at the Close of the U. S. Supreme Court.

Washington, June 3.—The supreme court of the United States will finally adjourn the term of 1894 to-day. Decisions in about a dozen or fifteen cases, some of them of importance and general interest, are expected, which will clean up the work of the court for the year. It is stated, with some positiveness at this time, that the somewhat celebrated "foreign judgment case," entitled Charles Guyot, liquidateur of Charles Fortin's Sons, versus Hilton, Hughes & Co., successors of A. T. Stewart & Co., will be among those in which the opinion of the court will be announced. This case, as has been often stated, involves the questions whether or not the judgment of a foreign court against an American citizen or firm can be enforced by judicial proceedings in this country, and, if so, under what conditions. There are numerous decisions by lower courts upon the subject, which are about equally divided, and this is the first time the question has ever been presented to the supreme court for determination. The case of the Singer Manufacturing company against the June Manufacturing company, in which the right to the use of the word "Singer" as a trade mark is involved, will also be decided to-day. Immediately upon the adjournment of the court most of the justice will repair to their several circuits for the purpose of holding court during the recess.

WILL FIGHT IN TEXAS.

The Corbett-Fitzsimmons Mill To Be Fought in October.

New York, June 3.—There is little doubt but that the long delayed battle between James J. Corbett and Robert Fitzsimmons will take place in Dallas, Tex., in the fall. "Dan" Stewart, the representative of the syndicate of Texans who have put up the money to bring off the match, is in this city and showed certified checks to the amount of $41,000—the size of the purse for which Fitzsimmons and Corbett are to fight. This money Mr. Stewart is prepared to post with the stakeholder, at a moment's notice, as a guarantee that the event will be decided in the Lone Star state and that every contract made by him will be faithfully carried out. According to Mr. Stewart there is no law in the state of Texas that will in any way prevent a meeting between Corbett and "Fitz" there. The contest, said Mr. Stewart, will be scheduled for decision in the second or fourth week in October.

A PRISONER IN LUCK.

Convict Hunter the Prospective Heir to $50,000.

La Porte, Ind., June 3.—John Henry Hunter, alias C. B. Harrison, a convict in the Indiana prison North, is the prospective heir to a fortune of $50,000. Mrs. Hunter, the convict's mother, died recently in New York, and on settling the affairs of the estate letters were found which solved the mystery of Hunter's whereabouts. He has employed an attorney to establish his claim, which is said to be valid, and Hunter, who was sent up from Allen county for a term of years, will come into possession of the fortune on his release.

Big Seizure of Smuggled Cigars.

New York, June 3.—The biggest seizure of smuggled cigars for years at this port was made Saturday night by Col. Cross, who seized eight large cases of the finest grade of Havana cigars from Daniel J. McLeod, who was in the act of delivering the goods to Frische & Co., at the Astor house. McLeod is in Ludlow street jail.

Favor Free Coinage of Silver.

Sedalia, Mo., June 3.—The Democrat yesterday printed letters from sixty-two of the 114 county democratic central chairmen in the state, showing that fifty-eight are unqualifiedly in favor of the free coinage of silver and gold; one is against such coinage and three are noncommittal.

Strikers Return to Work.

Woonsocket, R. I., June 3.—The sixty or seventy Italians employed by J. B. Reilly & Co. in building a new dam near here, who struck Saturday for an increase of wages, accepted an offer of $1.25 per day and returned to work this morning. They had been getting $1.15 per day.

Whitelaw Reid Sails for Home.

London, June 3.—Among the passengers who sailed on the American line steamer New York, from Southampton for New York, were the Hon. Whitelaw Reid and the Hon. J. S. Ewing, American minister to Belgium.

VENEZUELA'S ATTITUDE

Determined To Hold Her Territory at All Hazards.

Some Important Official News Regarding Her Controversy with England—Steps Taken by the Government To Uphold the Rights of the Little Republic.

New York, June 3.—Important official news regarding the controversy between England Venezuela has just reached this city, and is made public through the Venezuelan "Yellow Book." This volume is the report of the minister of foreign affairs to the national government and corresponds to the annual report of our state department. It contains full details of Venezuela's attitude towards England's aggressions in the Guianas, and shows that our little neighbor on the shores of the Carribean is determined to hold her territory at all hazards. The document in question shows firmness combined with discretion, and reflects great credit upon the statesmanship and patriotism of Dr. P. Ezequiel Rojas, who has been at the head of the department of foreign affairs for the past three years, and under whom the Guiana question has assumed its present phase.

The Boundary Question.

Referring to the boundary controversy the "Yellow Book" first calls attention to the fact that the congress of the United States has done its utmost to bring the question to arbitration; in fact, has even gone so far as to request England to settle the dispute in this way. It also states that the press of Venezuela, and all English corporations doing business there, have also endeavored to bring about the same end. Even the pope has interested himself in the controversy and offered his friendly services.

Other Important Steps.

Other important steps taken by the Venezuelan government were its efforts to prevent the circulation of incorrect maps of the country, and a request to the Washington government that the international office would make such changes in the maps published by England as would do justice to the rights of Venezuela. Full and detailed explanations are given of the Guiana incident, which the Venezuelan press has been discussing so freely. The notes that have passed between England and Venezuela regarding the route from Barima to the upper Guiana are also given in full.

A Few Significant Words.

The report closes with these significant words: "After having explained all the measures taken by the present government in this matter from the day of its inauguration, the English have not advanced one step into the territory of the republic, and that it is impossible for them to do so without having a collision with the Venezuelan authorities."

CHERISHED MEMENTOES.

A Bundle of Hickory Sticks Cut by Secretary Gresham for Friends.

Washington, June 3.—There is a cherished bundle of hickory sticks at the state department, every one cut by Secretary Gresham with his own hands, and designed by him as mementoes for presentation to friends. All of them were obtained from the abundant timber in the grounds of the president's country place at Woodley. One of these sticks the late secretary gave to Postmaster-General Bissell, just before his retirement, and another to Private Secretary Thurber, and a third to Mr. Edward S. Renick, the chief clerk of the state department. In each case the secretary with perhaps some premonition of what was impending, said to the recipient: "I want you to keep and use this stick in remembrance of me." Mr. Renick has had his memento handsomely mounted and Mr. Thurber will have his treated likewise. The bundle which still remains at the state department will be polished and mounted and presented to some of Mr. Gresham's friends.

IN HONOR OF MR. GRESHAM.

Costa Rica's Unusual Demonstration in Memory of the Late Secretary.

Washington, June 3.—Unusual honors were paid in Costa Rica to the memory of the late Secretary Gresham. In a telegram just received from San Jose, which also acknowledged the receipt of the instructions of the department regarding the announcement of the fact of the secretary's death, Minister Baker stated that not only were the flags of the home government hung at half-mast over public buildings, but the flags of all other nations represented at that capital were displayed in the same manner. It is said that this demonstration, if not unprecedented, is as least so unusual as to indicate a very high estimate of the abilities of the deceased.

The Armenian Reforms.

London, June 3.—The Daily News will to-day publish a dispatch from Constantinople saying that Said Pasha, Turkish foreign minister, on Friday promised the British ambassador, Sir Philip Currie, to reply before the Bairam festival to the proposals made by Great Britain, Russia and France for a reform of the Turkish administration of the Armenian provinces. It is expected that the powers will obtain the acceptance of their proposals.

Freight Trains in Collision.

Rye, N. Y., June 3.—A collision between two freight trains on the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad occurred here yesterday morning. Eighteen cars loaded with flour, oats, feed, beef, etc., were wrecked and 200 feet of the tracks were torn up. The conductor and a brakeman of the first train were slightly injured.

Dickinson College Commencement.

Carlisle, Pa., June 3.—The 112th commencement of Dickinson college began here yesterday. In the Allison M. E. church Rev. George E. Reed, president of the college, delivered the baccalaureate sermon to the graduating class. His subject was "The Coming Age, Its Characteristics and the Duty and Responsibility of Educated Men."

Gave 100,000 Francs to the Poor.

Paris, June 3.—Robert Le Baudy, the owner of Styrax, the winner of the grand steeplechase race, celebrated his victory by giving 100,000 francs to the poor.

The State Legislature convenes at Trenton at noon tomorrow. The report of the Senate Investigating committee will be the most important business to be acted upon.

As The Press stated before, those who have opposition to the establishment of the proposed sewage beds, should present their arguments at the Councilmanic hearing tonight. That is the proper place for them to be voiced and it is the only place where they will be recognized or have effect.

The deadlock in the Common Council in New Brunswick is beginning to get serious. Here it is 100 degrees in the shade, and the dispensers of the amber-colored and foam-bedecked fluid are without licenses permitting them to minister to the parched tongue and throbbing head, owing to the reform officials suspending public business, because they are unable to come to an agreement in filling municipal offices.

The appointment of Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh of Plainfield by Judge McCormick to defend Freehill, alias Sloane, the alleged slayer of Policeman Alfred E. Jewell, of Rahway, meets with general approbation from members of the bar and the public generally. The man will be on trial for his life, and his defender should be a man of intelligence and have the respect and confidence of not only the court but the public at large. Such a man is Craig A. Marsh. Mr. Marsh has never been known to desert a client or leave a case where there was a scintilla of a chance to win.—New Jersey Contractor.

The Union County Collector's annual report, which is published in the leading papers of that county, presents to taxpayers of that county an interesting statement in detail of the county's entire business for the past fiscal year. It shows, among other things, that the Board of Freeholders continues to pay off the county's indebtedness at the rate of about $25,000 a year—the last year's payment amounting to $26,000. It also shows that by economic and business-like methods, the Board has the snug sum of $23,000 on hand with which to commence business for the current year. No county in this State has a better Board of Chosen Freeholders, and almost nineteen out of the other twenty wish they had a Board equally as good. Union county certainly sets Middlesex county a good example.—New Brunswick Home News.

McCUTCHEN IS FAST.

Wins a Class A Event in Trenton at a 2:19 Gait.

Plainfield was well represented at the State meet of the L. A. W. in Trenton, Saturday. "Baron" E. T. Hand of the Crescent Wheelmen won the half-mile State Championship, cleverly nipping Ray Dawson of Boonton at the tape, and William N. McCutchen, riding for the Plainfield Bicycle Club from 120 yards, captured not only his heat of the Class A mile handicap, but also the final, beating a field of big men. The heat was run in 2:11 2-5 which, from 120 yards, is about a 2:19 gait, and the last quarter of the final was 31 seconds, a 2:04 pace. McCutchen certainly promises to equal any rider in the amateur class.

CYCLING COMMENT.

J. H. McVey's North avenue restaurant was the objective point yesterday for many cyclists, who were taken care of in an excellent manner by this popular host.

A member of the Catholic Cycle Club, of Jersey City, who had a run to Plainfield yesterday, was overcome by the heat when he reached McVey's restaurant on North avenue about 12:30. He fell on the sidewalk in a fainting spell, and was carried in the hotel. In about an hour's time he recovered and was able to proceed on his trip.

F. L. C. Martin and H. C. Van Emburgh rode to Chester, Morris County, yesterday, on their bikes. They were so hospitably entertained that they stayed all night, and took an early start for home this morning. Frank rode a Cleveland Swell Special, and Harry a Keating. A large round stone caused Harry to take a tumble, while coasting a hill on the way home. He landed on the roadside with his wheel on top of him, and miraculously escaped injury, save a sprained thumb. He is loud in his praise of the Keating. They covered 80 miles on the trip.

At a meeting of the Committee of the Diocisian Union of Catholic Clubs at Rahway yesterday it was decided not to hold the bicycle meet on the Crescent Oval in August as was at first proposed. This was decided upon after much discussion. The Union is to have field day sports at Caledonian Park in Newark in July, and it was thought better to postpone the bicycle meet until next year, because with two events to arrange for at different places and at a different time, neither one would receive proper attention. However, Plainfield will probably get the meet next year. John Kenney and P. McDonough were present at the meeting of the committee.

What is expected to be the largest century run ever held is by the Race Committee of the Associated Cycling Clubs of New Jersey. The run will take place on July 6 from Newark to Asbury Park over the following route: Start from Washington Park, Newark, at 5 a. m., and proceed via Belleville, Passaic, Paterson, Montclair, Orange, Elizabeth, Westfield, Plainfield, New Brunswick, Matawan, Keyport, Red Bank, Little Silver and Long Branch to Asbury Park. Three-quarters of the distance is over macadam road. The entrance will be $1.50, including badge and survivor's medals. Several desirable prizes will be offered, namely, sterling silver cup, value $100, to the club having the largest number of survivors; sterling silver cup, value $50, to the club having the second largest number of survivors. The checking will be done by the number system, the checks being dropped in boxes at the several places selected by the committee. There will be eight checking places. Plainfield and New Brunswick will be dinner stops. An even pace will be maintained throughout, from ten to twelve miles being the rate. Entry blanks and any information pertaining to the run can be obtained by addressing A. H. Chamberlain, secretary of Race Committee, Associated Cycling Clubs of New Jersey, Lock Box 55, Rahway.

INS AND OUTS.

The Boys Club nine went to Westfield to play Saturday afternoon. Although the opposing nine were a much older team, yet in the four innings which were played before the storm stopped the game, the Boys Club led by a score of 10 to 11. The features of the game was the pitching of Larry Doyle, a catch by Tunis Hewitt, and a foul fly by Harry Thomas, which seemed to have a reserved seat in the sky, and came back to earth very reluctantly; and a hit by Willie Parsons. A return game will be played at an early date.

The Monroe Avenue and Hope Chapel teams played their first game of the season on their grounds on West Front street Saturday afternoon. The playing was excellent. Littell struck out 9 men and Muir 2. Only 5 innings were played. The teams and the score follows:

Monroe Chapel.		Hope Chapel.
A. Taylor	catcher	Firstbrook
D. Littell	pitcher	Muir
S. Saums	first base	Meyer
S. Beekman	second base	Eddy
C. Manning	third base	Connor
B. Randolph	shortstop	Young
C. Randolph	left field	Owens
H. Pound	centre field	Brown
W. Kriney	right field	Wilson

Score by innings.

Monroes	7	11	8	1	x	—27
Hope Chapel	3	0	0	6	4	—13

Umpire—Walter Arthur.

A great game of ball was played last Saturday afternoon on Crescent Oval between the Y. M. C. A. and Cranford teams. The features of the game was Schoonmaker's three-base hit; Freeman's work at second-base, Davis's work in centre-field and the battery work of Corey and Townley. The teams and the scores by innings are as follows:

Y. M. C. A.		CRANFORD.
Corey	pitcher	F. Cox.
McKelvey	short stop	Howell.
W. Townley	catcher	Bolich.
Davis	centre field	Maroney.
Freeman	second base	Rice.
Stevens	right field	Miller.
Wyckoff	first base	C. Cox.
Miller	left field	S. Cox.
Schoonmaker	third base	Rosenerantz.

Y. M. C. A.	0	1	0	1	2	0	5	0	5	—14
Cranford	0	0	1	0	0	0	0	1	1	—3

Umpires—Clarence Thorn, Plainfield; Frank Rice, Cranford.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Frank Linbarger of Elizabeth called on Plainfield friends Saturday.

Miss Alice M. Smith, of New York, is visiting Mrs. E. C. Burke of Ravine road, Netherwood.

Mrs. M. R. Sythoff, of Brooklyn, is the guest of Mrs. John F. Losier at "The Gables," Netherwood.

Mrs. T. S. Harris of Philadelphia is visiting at the home of her sister, Mrs. George F. Meschutt of East Front street.

Mrs. E. H. Booth of Central avenue who has been spending some time in Atlantic City is now sojourning in New York.

The Misses Adrinne and Josephine Allisson of Brooklyn are spending a few days with their sister, Mrs. August Trust of Somerset street.

Miss A. M. Kleinkans, who has been visiting Miss Madge Depue of Watchung avenue, returned to her home in Belvidere Friday evening.

Robert Rushton, of LaGrande avenue, will leave today for the Thousand Islands, where he has a contract to decorate the interior of J. W. Jackson's summer residence.

John Hortsmann and daughter, Miss Matilda of Brooklyn were the guests yesterday of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Boyey of Stone street. Mrs. Bovey was formerly Miss Hortsmann.

Mr. and Mrs. P. A. VanFleet of East Third street went to North Branch, Somerset County, today to attend the funeral of Mrs. John Ten-Eyck, a cousin of Mr. VanFleet.

The yearly anniversary of the German Reformed Church will be celebrated Thursday evening June, 13, in the church on Craig place. An elaborate programme is in preparation.

The Children of Mary and the parochial school will give a strawberry and ice-cream festival in the Lyceum hall for the benefit of St. Mary's Church on Wednesday and Thursday evenings. Eugene O'Reilly will furnish the music for the occasion.

The new chapel at Martinsville was dedicated yesterday with appropriate services. Addresses were made by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Rhodes and Presiding Elder Dr. C. S. Ryman. The Y. M. C. A. quartette of this city compassed of F. S. Runyon, Nelson Hull, L. A. Hummer and C. M. Hummer, furnished the music.

Four persons united with Trinity Reformed Church yesterday morning at the Communion service, three by letter, and one on confession. Rev. James F. Riggs, D. D., Professor of Greek and Hebrew, Rutgers College, conducted the sacramental services, which were largely attended, very acceptably. At the evening service he delivered a most excellent sermon from the text, "How shall we sing the Lord's song in a strange land?" Psalms 137:4.

Annie Was Bad and Mad.

Annie Singer, pretty but bad, made a big racket on Park avenue early yesterday morning when an attempt was made to arrest her for being drunk and disorderly. She gave the officers a hard tussel, besides awakening every one within a block, but was finally landed in the rookery, where she remained until this morning, when Judge Coddington fined her $10.

To Be a Quiet Wedding.

Owing to the serious illness of Mrs. Frederick W. Yates, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Yates desire to recall their invitations for the fifth day of June, and to announce to their friends that the marriage of their daughter, Katharine, to Harry V. Borden, will take place quietly at home.

To Be Ordained.

A number of Plainfield people have received invitations to attend the ordination of Roger A. McGinley, of Fanwood, and well-known in this city, to the priesthood at St. Patrick's Cathedral in Newark on Saturday, June 8. He will say his first solemn mass at at Church of the Holy Cross in New York on Sunday, June 9.

Mr. D. Wiley, ex-postmaster, Black Breek, N. C., was so badly afflicted with rheumatism that he was only able to hobble around with canes, and even then it caused him great pain. After using Chamberlain's Pain Balm he was so much improved that he threw away his canes. He says this liniment did him more good than all other medicine and treatment put together. For sale at 50 cents per bottle at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

It Did the Business.

Mr. J. H. Cobb, publisher of the Mirror, at Brockton, N. Y., says: "For nearly two years the Mirror has been publishing the advertisements of Chamberlain's Remedies. A few days ago the writer was suffering from a bowel trouble and resorted to an old remedy which did not prove efficacious; finally he tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and two doses did the business, checking it completely. For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

Free Pills.

Send your address to Bucklen & Co., Chicago, and get a free sample box of Dr. King's New Life Pills. A trial will convince you of their merits. These pills are easy in action and are particularly effective in the cure of constipation and sick headache. For malaria and liver troubles they have been proved invaluable. They are guaranteed to be perfectly free from every deleterious substance and to be purely vegetable. They do not weaken by their action, but by giving tone to stomach and bowels greatly invigorate the system. Regular size 25c. per box. Sold by L. W. Randolph, druggist.

A Remarkable Cure of Rheumatism.

From the Groton Connecticut Review.—"David Lewis, who has been afflicted all winter by rheumatism, is out again and all due to one of the medicines advertised in our columns. After trying everything possible, he used Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which has relieved him of all pain, from which he was a constant sufferer and promises to make him fit for duty soon. We know David has been a great sufferer and are glad to see him around again." For sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

All Free.

Those who have used Dr. King's New Discovery know its value, and those who have not, have now the opportunity to try it free. Call on the advertised druggist and get a trial bottle, free. Send your name and address to H. E. Bucklen & Co., Chicago; and get a sample box of Dr. King's New Life Pills free, as well as a copy of Guide to Health and Household Instructor, free. All of which is guaranteed to do you good and cost you nothing at L. W. Randolph's Drugstore.

Agreeably Surprised.

"I had a very severe cold on my lungs that caused much soreness and gave me considerable uneasiness in regard to the result," says Mr. T. E. Smith, of Billerica, Mass. "A local druggist called my attention to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and on his recommendation I gave the remedy a careful trial. The result surprised me; I recovered entirely in three days." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's Pharmacy.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles or no pay required. SKETCHES OF LINCOLN.

His Habits and Methods of Study.

PHASES OF A LOFTY CHARACTER.

Intellectually Energetic, but Physically Lazy—His Hatred of Shams—How He "Peeled" the Court—A Gratifying Professional Triumph—A Sticking Juror.

[From "The Life of Lincoln" by William H. Herndon and Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1888, by Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1892, by D. Appleton & Co.]

XVII.

A lawyer in Beardstown relates this: "Lincoln came into my office one day with the remark, 'I see you've been suing some of my clients, and I've come down to see about it.' He had reference to a suit I had brought to enforce the specific performance of a contract. I explained the case to him and showed my proofs. He seemed surprised that I should deal so frankly with him and said he would be as frank with me; that my client was justly entitled to a decree, and he should so represent it to the court, and that it was against his principles to contest a clear matter of right. So my client got a deed for a farm which, had another lawyer been in Mr. Lincoln's place, would have been consumed by the costs of litigation for years, with the result probably the same in the end." A young man once wrote to Lincoln inquiring for the best mode of obtaining a thorough knowledge of the law. "The mode is very simple," he responded, "though laborious and tedious. It is only to get books and read and study them carefully. Begin with 'Blackstone's Commentaries,' and after reading carefully through, say, twice, take up 'Chitty's Pleadings,' 'Greenleaf's Evidence' and 'Story's Equity' in succession. Work, work, work, is the main thing."

Effect of a Woman's Tears.

Lincoln never believed in suing for a fee. If a client would not pay on request, he never sought to enforce collection. I remember once a man who had been indicted for forgery or fraud employed us to defend him. The illness of the prosecuting attorney caused some delay in the case, and our client, becoming dissatisfied at our conduct of the case, hired some one else, who superseded us most effectually. The defendant declining to pay us the fee demanded, on the ground that we had not represented him at the trial of the cause, I brought suit against him in Lincoln's absence and obtained judgment for our fee. After Lincoln's return from the circuit the fellow hunted him up and by means of a carefully constructed tale prevailed on him to release the judgment without receiving a cent of pay. The man's unkind treatment of us deserved no such mark of generosity from Lincoln, and yet he could not resist the appeal of any one in poverty and want. He could never turn from a woman in tears. It was no surprise to me or any of his intimate friends that so many designing women with the conventional widows' weeds and easy flowing tears overcame him in Washington. It was difficult for him to detect an impostor, and hence it is not to be marveled at that he cautioned his secretaries, "Keep them away—I cannot stand it."

On many questions I used to grow somewhat enthusiastic, adopting sometimes a lofty metaphor by way of embellishment. Lincoln once warned me: "Billy, don't shoot too high—aim lower, and the common people will understand you. They are the ones you want to reach—at least they are the ones you ought to reach. The educated and refined people will understand you anyway. If you aim too high, your ideas will go over the heads of the masses and only hit those who need no hitting."

While it is true that from his peculiar construction Lincoln dwelt entirely in the head and in the land of thought, and while he was physically a lazy man, yet he was intellectually energetic. He was not only energetic, but industrious; not only industrious, but tireless; not only tireless, but indefatigable. Therefore if in debate with him a man stood on a questionable foundation he might well watch whereon he stood. Lincoln could look a long distance ahead and calculated the triumph of right. With him justice and truth were paramount. If to him a thing seemed untrue, he could not in his nature simulate truth. His retention by a man to defend a lawsuit did not prevent him from throwing it up in its most critical stage if he believed he was espousing an unjust cause. This extreme conscientiousness and disregard of the alleged sacredness of the professional cloak robbed him of much so called success at the bar. He once wrote to one of our clients: "I do not think there is the least use of doing anything more with your lawsuit. I not only do not think you are sure to gain it, but I do think you are sure to lose it. Therefore the sooner it ends the better." Messrs. Stuart and Edwards once brought a suit against a client of ours which involved the title to considerable property. At that time we had only two or three terms of court, and the docket was somewhat crowded. The plaintiff's attorneys were pressing us for a trial, and we were equally anxious to ward it off. What we wanted were time and a continuance to the next term. We dared not make an affidavit for continuance, founded on facts, because no such pertinent and material facts as the law contemplated existed. Our case for the time seemed hopeless. One morning, however, I accidentally overheard a remark from Stuart indicating his fear lest a certain fact should happen to come into our possession. I felt some relief, and at once drew up a fictitious plea, averring as best I could the substance of the doubts I knew existed in Stuart's mind. The plea was as skillfully drawn as I could do it and was framed as if we had the evidence to sustain it. The whole thing was a sham, but so constructed as to work the desired continuance, because I knew that Stuart and Edwards believed the facts were as I pleaded them. This was done in the absence and without the knowledge of Lincoln. The plea could not be demurred to, and the opposing counsel dared not take the issue on it. It perplexed them sorely.

At length, before further steps were taken, Lincoln came into court. He looked carefully over all the papers in the case, as was his custom, and seeing my ingenious subterfuge asked, "Is this seventh plea a good one?" Proud of the exhibition of my skill, I answered that it was. "But," he inquired incredulously, "is it founded on fact?" I was obliged to respond in the negative, at the same time following up my answer with an explanation of what I had overheard Stuart intimate, and of how these alleged facts could be called facts if a certain construction were put upon them. I insisted that our position was justifiable, and that our client must have time or be ruined. I could see at once it failed to strike Lincoln as just right. He scratched his head thoughtfully and asked: "Hadn't we better withdraw that plea? You know it's a sham, and a sham is very often but another name for a lie. Don't let it go on record. The cursed thing may come staring us in the face long after this suit has been forgotten." The plea was withdrawn. By some agency not our own the case was continued, and our client's interests were saved. I only relate this incident to illustrate Lincoln's farseeing capacity. It serves to show how overcautious he seemed to be with regard to how his record might look in the future. I venture the assertion that he was the only member of the bar in Springfield who would have taken such a conscientious view of the matter.

One phase of Lincoln's character, almost lost sight of in the commonly accepted belief in his humility and kindly feeling under all circumstances, was his righteous indignation when aroused. In such cases he was the most fearless man I ever knew. I remember a murder case in which we appeared for the defense, and during the trial of which the judge, a man of ability far inferior to Lincoln's, kept ruling against us. Finally a very material question—in fact one around which the entire case seemed to revolve—came up, and again the court ruled adversely. The prosecution was jubilant, and Lincoln, seeing defeat certain unless he recovered his ground, grew very despondent. The notion crept into his head that the court's rulings, which were absurd and almost spiteful, were aimed at him, and this angered him beyond reason.

He told me of his feelings at dinner and said, "I have determined to crowd the court to the wall and regain my position before night." From that time forward it was interesting to watch him. At the reassembling of court he arose to read a few authorities in support of his position. In his comments he kept within the bounds of propriety just far enough to avoid a reprimand for contempt of court. He characterized the continued rulings against him as not only unjust, but foolish, and, figuratively speaking, he peeled the court from head to foot. I shall never forget the scene. Lincoln had the crowd, a portion of the bar and the jury with him. He knew that fact, and it, together with the belief that injustice had been done him, nerved him to a feeling of desperation. He was wrought up to the point of madness. When a man of large heart and head is wrought up and mad, as the old adage runs, "he's mad all over." Lincoln had studied up the points involved, but knowing full well the caliber of the judge relied mostly on the moral effect of his personal bearing and influence. He was alternately furious and eloquent, pursuing the court with broad facts and pointed inquiries in marked and rapid succession. I remember he made use of this homely incident in illustration of some point: "In early days a party of men went out hunting for a wild boar. But the game came upon them unawares, and scampering away they all climbed the trees save one, who, seizing the animal by the ears, undertook to hold him, but despairing of success cried out to his companions in the trees, 'For God's sake, boys, come down and help me let go.'" The prosecution endeavored to break him down or even "head him off," but all to no purpose. His masterly arraignment of law and facts had so effectually badgered the judge that, strange as it may seem, he pretended to see the error in his former position and finally reversed his decision in Lincoln's favor. The latter saw his triumph and surveyed a situation of which he was the master. His client was acquitted, and he had swept the field.

The Stubborn Juror.

In the case of Parker versus Hoyt, tried in the United States court in Chicago, Lincoln was one of the counsel for the defendant. The suit was on the merits of a infringement of a patent water wheel. The trial lasted several days, and Lincoln manifested great interest in the case. In his earlier days he had run, or aided in running, a sawmill and explained in his argument the action of the water on the wheel in a manner so clear and intelligible that the jury were enabled to comprehend the points and line of defense without the least difficulty. It was evident he had carried the jury with him in a most masterly argument, the force of which could not be broken by the reply of the opposing counsel. After the jury retired he became very anxious and uneasy. The jury were in another building, the windows of which opened on the street, and had been out for some two hours. "In passing along the street one of the jurors on whom we very much relied," relates Lincoln's associate in the case, "he being a very intelligent man and firm in his convictions, held up to him one finger. Mr. Lincoln became very much excited, fearing it indicated that 11 of the jury were against him. He knew if this man was for him he would never yield his opinion. He added if he was like a juryman he had in Tazewell county the defendant was safe. He was there employed, he said, to prosecute a suit for divorce. His client was a pretty, refined and interesting little woman and in court. The defendant, her husband, was a gross, morose, querulous, fault finding and uncomfortable man and entirely unfitted for the husband of such a woman; but, although he was able to prove the use of very offensive and vulgar epithets applied by the husband to his wife and all sorts of annoyances, yet there were no such acts of personal violence as were required by the statute to justify a divorce.

"Lincoln did the best he could and appealed to the jury to have compassion on the woman and not to bind her to such a man and such a life as awaited her if required to live longer with him. The jury took about the same view of it in their deliberations. They desired to find for his fair client, but could discover no evidence which would really justify a verdict for her. At last they drew up a verdict for the defendant, and all signed but one fellow, who on being approached with the verdict said coolly: 'Gentlemen, I am going to lie down to sleep, and when you get ready to give a verdict for that little woman then wake me and not until then, for before I will give a verdict against her I will lie here till I rot and the pismires carry me out through the keyhole!' 'Now,' observed Lincoln, 'if that juryman will stick like the man in Tazewell county we are safe.' Strange to relate, the jury did come in, and with a verdict for the defendant. Lincoln always regarded this as one of the gratifying triumphs of his professional life."

A Dutiful Son.

I induced my husband to permit Abe to read and study at home as well as at school. At first he was not easily reconciled to it, but finally he, too, seemed willing to encourage him to a certain extent. Abe was a dutiful son to me always, and we took particular care when he was reading not to disturb him—would let him read on and on till he quit of his own accord.—Mrs. Thomas Lincoln, Sept. 8, 1865.

WOMAN AND HER BICYCLE.

Moral and Physical Lessons of the New Sport.

For some time before cycling became a distinctive fad among women public opinion was about evenly divided as to the physical benefits and dangers accruing from it. To-day it is hard to find a man, woman or child who will admit that there is a possibility of the slightest danger to the health of a rider, male or female.

And then at the schools one meets so many charming people, and they are all so friendly and pleasant. You know there can be no such thing as formality between two women just learning to ride. The bumps and falls and general awkwardness of both seems to bring about a feeling of goodfellowship never before produced by any fad. It's jolly, that's what it is."

"I tell you what it did for me," said a good humored looking woman. "I had a neighbor that I hadn't spoken to for two years. We had a tiff about some trifle. Well, I met her here at the academy and we didn't speak for two or three days. One day we chanced to be in the ring at the same time, when down I came with a tumble, and she very sympathetically tumbled by my side. You all know how that is—when one falls nearly all fall. It always reminds me of the child's game of setting up blocks in a row and then causing all to fall by touching one. The spectators say it is positively ludicrous. I looked at my old friend and she looked at me. Then we both laughed and simultaneously put out our hands to each other as we sprawled there on the floor. We haven't either of us referred to the breach, but we are enjoying the reunion immensely, and it all came about by both of us being crazy over cycling. By the way, I must hurry home because she is coming to lunch with me."

Spontaneous Combustion.

That mysterious action known as spontaneous combustion, which has been the cause of so many mysterious fires both on land and sea, was very clearly explained in a lecture on fire risks, by Ernest Cook.

Speaking of oils, he pointed out that they could be divided into drying oils and non drying oils. The former included the animal and vegetable oils, which could not be distilled, but broke up under the process; while the latter are mineral oils, which can be distilled with ease. The non drying oil will not ignite spontaneously, while the drying oil do so. The action is due to oxidation, or union, of the oil with the oxygen of the atmosphere.

A board painted with boiled linseed oil will, when dry, be heavier than the original weight of the board and oil added together, the absorbtion of oxygen accounting for the difference. This combination of the oxygen with the oil will envolve heat, which in the case of the board will be carried away by the air.

Oil waste, if spread out so that the air can penetrate it will also give up the heat in the same manner. But if the waste be placed in a heap, the weight of the upper portion will confine the lower part, and more heat produced that the air can carry away, and the temperature rises until the mass bursts into flame.

"This is the history," said the lecturer, "of what has doubtless often occurred in the cases of many fires of doubtful origin."—Chambers Journal.

Where They Wash.

A correspondent of the Boston Gazette gives some paramount facts regarding well known New York citizens:

Mrs. Cruger, in her beautiful home in East Thirty-sixth street, has recently built a new bathroom. It occupies the entire third floor of the house, and is up to date in every sense of the expression. Here the beautiful, statuesque mistress of the house takes her daily Russian bath, and to it she ascribes the clearness of her complexion. By the way, it may be added that all the sponges are not only specially selected, but they are tied with pink ribbons (Mrs. Cruger's favorite color), these ribbons being changed daily.

Mrs. Theodore Havemeyer, who has one of the most beautiful homes in Madison avenue, has a bathroom odd in the extreme. Mrs. Havemeyer cannot bear anything cold, and so, instead of marble walls, floor and ceilings, the rooms are done in red plush. The tub is placed in the middle of the room and is of bronze. Only one faucet is introduced, and that is for cold water, Mrs. Havemeyer thinking that warm water for bathing is unhealthy. Many might echo her opinion and follow it, for her complexion can hardly be excelled by a girl of eighteen, and she has eleven grown children. She is dubbed in society "the wonder."

The most gorgeous of bathrooms in New York probably is that of Mrs. William H. Vanderbilt. The walls are of Oriental design, of turquoise and rhinestones. In the corners are pedestals supporting figures of Venus and Cupid, while the ceiling is of mosaic work, picturing Venus rising from the sea. The tops of the hot and cold water faucets are perfumed with violets, so that even a scented soap is not necessary.

The Marquise de Lanza, daughter of the well known physician, Dr. Hammond, has ideas of her own, and quite original ones, about her daily bath. She has had a chair made covered with a rubber cloth, through which she can just put her head, while sitting. To this chair are attached also tiny steam valves, heated by a small gas stove placed in rear of the chair. In this novel bathing machine the Marquise sits an hour and a half each morning to get into a thorough perspiration. Afterward she is sponged off by the maid, then she sleeps for another hour, and afterward is ready for the duties of social life. Scents of no kind will the Marquise de Lanza use, as she thinks ultimately they ruin the skin.

THE CAMPAIGN OF AUSTERLITZ.

Utter Rout of Austrians and Russians on His Coronation Anniversary—Crowned King of Italy—Death of Pitt—Personal Appearance at Thirty-five.

[Copyright, 1895, by John Clark Ridpath.]

XVI.—FROM NOTRE DAME TO AUSTERLITZ.

To the New French Empire the Consular Republic contributed one fact of transcendent importance. That was the Code Napoleon—a work which the Emperor regarded to the end of his days as his greatest gift to posterity. Before the Revolution, France had had as many laws as provinces. The cynical Voltaire declared that in his country the traveler must change his code as often as he changed horses.

The question of unifying and nationalizing the statutes of France had been before the States-General at Versailles. By that body the measure was remanded to the National and Constituent Assemblies; by these, to the Convention; by that, to the Directory; and by that, to the Consulate. Here, then, had arisen a power at last that was able to revise and reform. A commission was appointed by the First Consul, headed by the great lawyer Tronchet, to reconstruct the jurisprudence of France.

In four months this commission made its report to the Council of State. Napoleon personally presided. The project of the commission was read, discussed, and passed on, clause by clause. On the 5th of March, 1803, the Code Civile des Francais was completed and published. It consisted of twenty-two hundred and eighty-one articles. These were arranged under three heads: The Rights of Persons; the Laws of Property; and the Methods of acquiring Property. In the code the elements of Roman Law and the law-customs of the French people were blended with singular skill. Though in the political vicissitudes of France many modifications and not a little patch-work were added thereto, the code itself gained in the estimation of mankind. It was disseminated by the Imperial conquests into the greater part of Europe, and was adopted by one people after another. The Code Napoleon became the basis of jurisprudence, not only in France, but in Sicily, Holland, Belgium, the Rhine provinces, Switzerland, Poland, and in all the countries dominated by the Latin races in Europe and America.

At the date of his coronation, Napoleon was thirty-five years, three months and seventeen days of age. He was in his very prime. Physically, he had triumphed over that attenuation and utter swarthiness which had marked his younger years. On his first issuance to public notice, and down to the time of the Consulate, he had worn a haggard look which, added to his thinness and his low stature, made him almost a specter. In the year of his marriage, he was described by an observant lady—as reported in Stendhal—as "the thinnest and queerest being I ever met." In another place the same authority says of him: "He was so scrawny that he inspired pity." But with the gratification of his ambitions and desires, he became plump and beautiful. He had at last recovered from the cutaneous disease which he had contracted from handling an infected rammer fallen from the hands of a gunner at the batteries before Toulon. It had required the long and persistent services of the eminent Corvisart to cure him of his malady.

Of all the descriptions of the person of Bonaparte, that of Meneval, his secretary, is doubtless the most correct and satisfying. He says of the Emperor, that, though small of stature, his person was well knit and symmetrical. The bust was longer relatively than the legs. The head was large, and the skull finely developed. The neck was short, and the shoulders proportionally broad. The chest was round and full, indicating a robust constitution. The limbs, both arms and legs, were perfect. The Emperor was as proud as was Lord Byron of his small plump hands and tapering fingers. His forehead was broad and high; his eyes easily kindled with passion and flashed lightnings. His complexion was pallid; bronzed at first; always of the Italian hue. His dark hair became thin on the top of his head, and the height of the forehead was seemingly increased. Meneval, for thirteen years intimate with his master—observing closely his every mood and feature—says: "His head and bust were in no way inferior in nobility and dignity to the most beautiful statue of antiquity."

Napoleon was capable of all the passions. He showed the inner fires. His anger was easily aroused. He would storm and scowl; but there was always under the tempest a strenuous self-control. The steel sinews of his relentless will held him back ever from rashness of action. When he was angered or crossed, a sort of rotary muscular maelstrom appeared in his forehead and between his brows. His nostrils would dilate under his passion, and his fierce gray eyes gleam hell. Afterwards he would be tranquil, smiling, insinuating, gracious, caressing. Sometimes he would break out in a mocking, sardonic laugh—a thing hollow and dangerous, echoing through Europe.

The new Imperial system quickly diffused itself abroad. Wherever the influence of France extended, the political transformation was easily effected. The Cisalpine Republic was converted into the kingdom of Italy. This Napoleon would make an appanage of his own. For four months, sixteen hours daily, he wrought at the establishment of the new regime in France. He then sped to Milan, and on the 26th of May, 1805, was crowned King of Italy. The ceremonial was in the great cathedral there, second only in magnificence to St. Peter's. The old iron crown of the Lombard kings was brought forth from its dusty keep, and was given by the archbishop of Milan to the Emperor, who, putting it on his head, uttered the famous mot, Dieu me l'a donnee—Gare a qui la touche. "God has given it to me—Beware who touches it!"—an aphorism which became the motto of the Order of the Iron Crown.

The Empire brought four years of continuous war. Napoleon became the trampler of vineyards. His armies made Europe into mire. England—agreeing at Amiens not to fight—fought. Pitt, now in the last year of his life, used all of his resources to bring about a league against France. He persuaded Alexander of Russia, Francis of Austria, and Gustavus of Sweden—all easy dupes of a greater than themselves—to make a new coalition. He tried to induce Frederick William of Prussia to join his fortunes with the rest; but the last-named monarch was for the time restrained by the weakness of prudence. The agents of Napoleon held out to him suggestions of the restoration of Hanover to Prussia. But Austria and Russia and Sweden pressed forward confidently to overthrow the new French Empire. That Empire should not see the end of the first year of its creation!

The Austrians were first in the field. The Russians, under Kutusoff, came on into Pomerania from the East. Out of Sweden, with a large army, came down Gustavus, the Don Quixote of the North, to crush Bernadotte who held Hanover. Napoleon for his part sprang forth for the campaign of Austerlitz, perhaps the most brilliant military episode in the history of mankind. With incredible facility he threw forward to the Rhine an army of a hundred and eighty thousand men. His policy was—as always—to overcome the allies in detail.

On the 24th of September, the Emperor left Paris. The Empress and Talleyrand went with him as far as Strasburg. On the 2nd of October, hostilities began at Guntzburg. Four days afterwards the French army crossed the Danube. On the 8th of the month, Murat won the battle of Wertingen, capturing Count Auffenberg, with two thousand prisoners. On the 10th the French had Augsburg, and on the 12th, Munich. On the 14th Soult triumphed at Memingen, capturing a corps of six thousand Austrians; and on the same day Ney literally overran the territory which was soon to become his Duchy of Elchingen. Napoleon outgeneraled the main division of the enemy at Ulm. The Austrians, under General Mack, thirty-three thousand strong, were cooped up in the town and, on the 17th of October, forced to capitulate. Eight field-marshals and generals, including the Prince Lichtenstein and Generals Klenau and Fresnel, were made prisoners. "Soldiers of the Grand Army," said Napoleon, "we have finished the campaign in a fortnight!"

On the day of the capitulation of Ulm, Massena in Italy drove back the army of the Archduke Charles. The Austrians to this date, in a period of twenty days, had lost by battle and capture fully fifty thousand men! On the 27th of October, the French army crossed the Inn. Salzburg and Braunau were taken. In Italy, Massena, on the 30th, won the battle of Caldiero, and took five thousand prisoners. The French closed towards the Austrian capital. On the 13th of November, Napoleon, having obtained possession of the bridges of the Danube, entered Vienna. He established himself in the imperial palace of Schonbrunn. The Austrian Empire and the Holy Roman Empire—which was its shadowy penumbra—seemed to vanish like ghosts before him.

Out of Pomerania into Moravia, to the plain of Olmutz, the great Russian army, under the Czar and Kutusoff, came roaring. There they were united with a heavy division of the Austrians, under the Emperor Francis. The latter had fled from his capital, and staked his last fortunes on battle in the field. The allied army was eighty thousand strong. Napoleon, with sixty thousand men, commanded by Soult, Lannes, Murat and Bernadotte, advanced rapidly from the direction of Vienna, as far as Brunn, and there awaited the onset. Just beyond this town, at Austerlitz, the French were arranged in a semicircle, with the convex front towards the allies, who occupied the outer arc on a range of heights. Such was the situation on the night of December 1st, 1805. The morrow will be the first anniversary of our coronation in Notre Dame—a glorious day for battle!

With the morning of the 2nd, Napoleon could scarcely restrain his ardor. The enthusiasm of the army knew no bounds. On the night before, the Emperor, in his gray coat, had gone the circle of the camps, and the soldiers, extemporizing straw torches to light the way, ran before him. Looking eagerly through the gray dawn, he saw the enemy badly arranged, or moving dangerously in broken masses under the cover of a Moravian fog. Presently the fog lifted, and the sun burst out in splendor. The onset of the French was irresistible. The allied center was pierced. The Austrian and Russian emperors with their armies were sent flying in utter rout and panic from the field. Thirty thousand Russians and Austrians were killed, wounded or taken. Alexander barely escaped capture. Before sunset the Third Coalition was broken into fragments and blown away. At the conference between Napoleon and Francis, two days afterwards, at the Mill of Sar-Uschitz, some of the French officers overheard the father of Maria Louisa lie to her future husband, thus—"I promise not to fight you any more."

Meanwhile, from the borders of Hanover, the Quixotical Gustavus had taken to flight, and was eager to secure himself beyond the Baltic. On the 24th of December, everything was completed by the Peace of Pressburg. Austria gave up the whole of her Venetian possessions to the kingdom of Italy. The Tyrol, Vorarlberg, and Passau went to Bavaria. The latter country and Wurtemberg were made into kingdoms. For all this the ancient Empire of the Hapsburgs was compensated with Salzburg and some other trifling places, all of which History might hold at a handful!

After Austerlitz the broken Russians fell back towards their own territory. Central Europe seemed to be suddenly dominated by the sword of the Corsican. Pitt, no longer able to bear the strain of the tremendous antagonism, sank rapidly, and died. The glorious victory which Nelson had won in the bloody foam of Trafalgar, on the day after the capitulation of Mack, could not compensate for the Continental ruin. Pitt passed away on the 23rd of January, 1806. Austerlitz and Pressburg are said to have killed him!

Pippette was emancipated. To be sure, she did not wear knickerbockers and she could not vote, but her emancipation was complete. The New Woman has not developed in the Italian colony that inhabits Mott Street Barracks, opposite the Police Headquarters Building, but the emancipated maiden was making up a bed in the single light room of one of the tenements on the top floor, with a heart as happy as her fingers were deft.

She was undoubtedly beautiful, a spike her decorative effect. Her blood-red handkerchief, be it drawn never so tight over her smooth, parted hair, could not spoil the saintly oval of her olive face—saintly despite the fact that she was the belle of Little Italy; her short, coarse skirt only heightened the daintiness of her trim, brown ankles, although they rose from cheap pattens, not too clean; the broken buttonholes in her waist might have seemed slovenly to the captious, but to the seeker after loveliness—au naturel—they must be regarded with gratified admiration because of their native revelations, and, although Pietro sat within two yards of her, smoking his pipe of gloom and bad tobacco, Pippette did not care. She was the belle of Little Italy, and in Little Italy conventionality goes a-begging, although virtue holds high place. (I have heard it whispered that in speaking of some places this statement may truthfully be reversed.)

But all of this is by the way. It has nothing to do with Pippette's emancipation. It was Pietro who had brought that about and it was Pietro who had suffered by it.

In the bare brick building, five grimy stories high, punctured by many staring windows, and fed by black doorways every twenty feet or so, love and hate, mirth and misery, run high. When Neapolitans come to Gotham, they not only die faster than any other race in New York city, but they live faster, too. America throws Italians off their balance. In Italy they drink soft wines; in America, slum whisky. When they gamble here it is not for the pleasant fun they knew at home, it is with greed that makes eyes beady and breathing quick, that makes stilettos flash and sometimes takes a life. If I were writing sociology and not romance, I might explain that Italians came here for one thing—money; that the moment they leave the steamer's gangplank they are money mad. That their lives here are either full of wild work or an idleness so frugal that it eats three cents a day—no more. The very food that nourished them at home—maccaroni and fruit—overripe here—helps raise their death rate. That, in fact, of all races, that of Southern Italy is least fitted to cope with American ways, American climate, Americans, America. But I am not writing sociology, I am writing the tale of Pippette.

The only smile in the room was hers. Indeed, while her face broke into the merriest of ripples as she pulled and patted at the soft, gaudy pile of bedding, not only was Pietro sad and solemn, but Pippette's bent and crony mother, working at the washtub down in the court between the front and the rear tenements, her father, sweeping streets away uptown, and Pietro's parents in their abiding places, were sad and gloomy too, and all because of Pippette's emancipation.

It all grew out of hot Naples love, brought over seas successfully, and a Naples custom that could not be transplanted. It should be understood that in Naples marrying and giving in marriage are conducted on a basis different from that of the American matrimonial institution. Pippette and Pietro were tiny children when the alliance was arranged and certain financial matters with it. Pietro grew to the manhood of 21 and Pippette to the Italian womanhood of 13 without other thought. When the two families came over to America it was understood that the ceremony would be delayed but for a short time after they reached this land of gold, and both were well content. The plan was all right, the money was all right, even the affection was all right. But no one had taken into consideration the effect of America's independent atmosphere.

Pippette would never have been affected by it in Little Italy. But she went as nurse for a month in the family of one of the queer little Italian bankers who had been in America a long time, and there she learned progressive lessons. Of course, she told of her engagement, and how it had all been arranged when she was a little child. At once her mistress' hands went up in horror. It was wrong that in America a girl should be forced to marry a man her parents had selected. That was not the way those things were done on this side of the ocean. Here girls selected their own sweethearts and parents were not consulted. They married the men they loved, not the men with whose parents their fathers and their mothers could make the best financial plans. If Pippette did not love Pietro she ought not to marry him.

Now, before that it had never occurred to Pippette that she was being forced to marry; it had never seemed unjust that her parents should arrange the match; she had never for a moment doubted that she loved Pietro. But the knowledge gained in that short month changed the whole aspect of affairs to her. Plainly she saw the injustice of it all, plainly she saw the deep-laid plot to steal away her brand-new independent spirit, plainly she saw the outrage offered to her womanhood.

Night by night when she went home she treated Pietro less lovingly. Night by night she grew more gloomy and more silent in her parents' presence. Her mouth, that had in the past been ever smiling, drooped and quivered. She wept at night and woke red-eyed. The merry girl changed into a maiden of most sorrowful and sullen mien.

Both parents and Pietro were amazed. Not guessing the real cause of her grievance, not knowing that she even had a grievance, they decided that she was ill. They worshiped her, all five, and held a consultation. When the month's end came they told her that she need not go out to tend the banker's children any more, that she need do no work at all, that if she did not mend they would have to try a doctor.

Pippette submitted after protest, because she assumed that to be cut off from her newfound friend was another piece of tyranny. She was a double martyr for a week, while her family and lover worried and wondered at the change in her.

When the doctor came—a fussy, greasy-haired Italian—she told him nothing of her trouble, only sitting silent while he wisely shook his head and figured out a pill. After he had gone away she wept quietly for hours, refused to see Pietro and turned her head toward the tenement's wall when her mother spoke to her.

The next morning, after a night which was most miserable for every one concerned, she declared her intention of going to see the banker's wife. There was some demur, but she was most determined, and finally tramped sullenly away, leaving behind her five of the most thoroughly puzzled Italians in New York. Pietro almost wept. Her mother was in acute distress. Her father swore softly in his native tongue, but not at her. Pietro's parents called ardently upon the Holy Virgin to witness that the girl had been bewitched.

"But if you do not want to marry the young man, simply do not marry him," advised that Americanized signora.

"Oh, alas! but it is that they will force me to!" exclaimed Pippette, with despair, which she had really learned to feel as an actress felt her part. "A thousand million tortures will they inflict upon me if I thwart their wills of iron!" She had succeeded in bringing herself to believe that she was terribly abused.

"Torture you!" remarked the progressive banker's wife, staccato. "Torture you! Not in America can they do that. Not here! Go! Defy them! Should they still demand your marriage to this beast"—the banker's wife, full of romance, had conjured up in her mind a humpbacked and squint-eyed Pietro with a leer—"should they still demand your marriage to this beast, defy them again, and then send for me."

"But how can I send for you?" sobbed Pippette. "Suppose I am confined or tied by my hair or beaten?"

It will be observed that she had imagination.

"Then," said the banker's wife, with grandeur, "then we shall rescue you! It is an Alderman who is my husband's friend, and in New York—bless Virgin Mary!—an Alderman can do very much." In all her life she had never had anything fill her with such delightful, romantic indignation.

To Pippete the title Alderman meant only something which must be very grand. She finally planned with the banker's wife to go home boldly, and when that very day, as she assured her friend they would, her wicked relatives tried to force her to submit to the sacrifice of herself upon the altar of Old World oppression, she would boldly defy them. Then she declared that she would, without doubt, be confined in the front room of the tenement, where it would be the intention of her parents to starve her or beat her or otherwise force her into obedience. But, no! She would casually hang her bright red petticoat out of the window, and the banker's wife, who would be watching, would notify the Alderman, who would notify the police, or, if they were not strong enough to overcome the plotting foreigners, the Mayor. The banker's wife went on with great enthusiasm, and stated that sooner than permit such a wicked Old World conspiracy to be carried out in free America, the Mayor would go to the President of the United States, if need be, and he would call out the standing army with its guns, and the navy with its ships. Oh! the banker's wife had never so thoroughly enjoyed herself in her whole life before. And Pippette, when she walked home, had a head full of visions of ranks of armed men, each a hero, and each with a black feather plume in the side of his hat (like an Italian soldier), marching down Mott street and bravely fighting a great mob made up of her relatives and their friends, all willing to shed their last drop of red, red blood in order to force her to marry Pietro against her will.

So she flounced home and up to the rooms in the fifth story. The miserable five who thought her to be strangely ill were all waiting for her, and all anxious to know that the visit to the banker's wife had not hurt her most delicate and precious health. They set up a chorus of rejoicing when they saw how red her cheeks were (with excitement) and how her eyes sparkled (because of the romantic thoughts behind them). But she quelled this with a quickly assumed tragic air which threw them into a new worry. In a few moments, after they had with frightened solicitude tried again to learn what ailed the girl, she told them. For the first time she explained the secret of her mysterious malady. Striding to the centre of the room, as a tragedy queen might take the centre of the stage, she declared:

"I will not marry him. Torture me, lock me up, tie my hands, abuse me and maltreat me as you will—I will not marry him!"

They looked at her in stupefied amazement. At first they did not understand, but when she pointed her finger at Pietro and exclaimed: "It is you and you!"—

In Italy, yes, you could force me to become your wife. You could buy me with your gold. You could take me and I could not resist. But in America, no! It is no that I say! No! No! No! I r-r-ref-fuse! I WILL NOT!"

The word amazement but poorly describes the feelings of her audience. Not one of them had ever before for a moment supposed that she objected to marrying Pietro. It had never even been a matter of comment. The plan had been as much a part of their simple lives as the day and the night had been. They concertedly gasped in horror. She assumed that this was the first move of coming battle, and backing slowly into the front room exclaimed:

"Yes! Yes! Kill me! Tear me limb from limb! But first let me tell the tale that I have protectors!"

She unpinned her red petticoat and slipped it off quickly, without once removing her eyes from their faces, and with a delicious revelation of well-rounded calves below the shorter skirt underneath, which no one noticed.

"I have but to wave tis petticoat from the window tnd my friend the banker's wife will come with an Alderman, who will bring the police and the Mayor and the President of the kingdom and the army with guns and great ships which shoot vast iron balls! Oh, I am ready! I have protectors! I defy you all!"

Pippette, half conscious of the nonsense of it, was still conscious of the sensation she was creating, and enjoyed it from the bottom of her romantic heart. No one threatened her, but she waved her red petticoat from the window, and was somewhat disappointed to find that only the little banker and a fat Irishman responded. The banker's wife had told the story to her husband, with many variations and additions, and the Alderman, willing to believe anything of Italians, was really prepared for great things. He attributed the submissive and puzzled attitude of the five swarthy persons whom he met to their craft, and impressively warned them.

"Here now! Here now!" he commanded, "None o' that owver here in Amerikv, you bloody dagoes! The goirl is free to marry any one she loikes. Don't let me hear any more of coer-r-rcion, or Oi'll have the police afther yez. Moind now phwat Oi say!" and he left majestically.

After he had gone, the little group—all of them except Pippette—broke into tears. They had begun to understand that Pippette had, for some unaccountable reason, decided not to marry Pietro, and were filled with woe. And worse than that, they saw that she looked upon all of them—who worshiped her, each one—with fear and defiance. This was crushing!

Finally, unhappy and dismayed, they held a council and decided that all should withdraw except Pietro, who was to remain with Pippette, and try to make the peace, or, at least, to get at the bottom of the mystery. Just before they went away Pippette's father went up to her with such gentleness as a man who sweeps the streets can assume and said:

[illegible] is not that we wish you to wed Pietro if it is that you do not for him feel love. It is that we all for you feel love most much and that we do greatly feel that you have an illness of the mind. But it is for you to say. It is that we shall die of the grief if you wed Pietro not—but yes, caramba!—it is for you to say. Rambino carissima, it is that it is for you to say."

Pippette was emancipated. She had won her point. Her wicked relatives had bowed to the freedom of America.

But had not the miserable Pietro permitted his hot blood and sore heart to run away with him and induce him to bitterly reproach her, she would still have been unhappy. With her parents and his the plan had not worked as she had thought it would. Her father's real grief had knocked hard on the door of her silly little heart, and almost opened it. Instead of rage and torture, gentleness and simple love had met her. It was disconcerting to a maiden who wished to be the heroine of such a romance as the banker's wife had read in books.

But Pietro's gloom, lit by flashes of hot anger as often as it was by throes of great grief, was better. She enjoyed it. It made her feel most important.

SEWAGE BEDS ASSURED

But Little Opposition to the Proposed System.

HOW THEY WORK ELSEWHERE.

The Ordinance Advanced to Second Reading and Ordered Engrossed—Allen Hazen, an Authority, Sets Aside the Fears Entertained by Dunellen Residents—Rev. Mr. Martine Discussed the Question From a Moral Point of View, and Mr Nelson Talked Sarcasm—Other Business of the Council.

The only opposition in the Common Council last night to the progress of the ordinance authorizing the purchase of the necessary land for the sewage beds, was from a half dozen Dunellenites, whose voices and pens have been raised against the proposed system of sewage disposal for this city for the past year.

The residents of that little borough have become greatly agitated thereat and as a consequence sent this committee to the council to present the petition protesting against the establishment of the intermittent filtration system. A few minutes after eight o'clock the ran guard of the delegation wandered into the council chamber and pre-empted seats in the corner furtherest from the door. Here they set for a half hour, during which time three more of their friends came in at different intervals and joined the little cluster. They were having a conference of wise looks and whispered words all to themselves when President See called the council to order. Councilman Fisk immediately moved that the regular order of business be dispensed with and that the sewer ordinance be taken up for consideration. This was adopted, and Mr. Fisk followed with another motion that an opportunity be given to those who desired to be heard in favor of or in opposition to the proposed ordinance.

Rev. Mr. Martine, of Dunellen arose and said that he had been requested by his fellow citizens to come to this meeting and oppose such action as was proposed to be taken. Mr. Martine said that the great trouble he had in speaking at that time was that he had been requested to come at so late an hour that he wasn't exactly prepared to talk effectively. If he had been notified some time ago that he was wanted to talk on this subject he said he would have brought along scientific arguments. But unfortunately for him and for his remarks, so far as having any effect on the councilmen were concerned, his scientific facts were left at home. Mr. Martine was resourceful, and so long as he did not have the scientific facts at hand he applied moral arguments to the question.

Mr. Martine had heard a good deal about the Framingham sewage beds, all of which had been more or less favorable to the system as proposed in this city. However, he thought that if he could investigate the beds he could bring home the worse side of them, and then a great many people would change their minds. The establishment of the system in this city, he considered, would be a nuisance.

From the moral point of the subject he directed a question at the councilmen asking them how they would like to have their neighbors do the same to them that they propose doing to Dunellen. Mr. Martine closed his remarks by reading and presenting a petition from Dunellen residents protesting against the construction of the beds, on the ground that it would destroy the value of property, contaminate their water supply and do other bad and ruinous things. The petition had 372 signatures.

Alfred E. Nelson followed Mr. Martine. Mr. Nelson is celebrated as the man who has been writing the series of articles in The Dunellen Call in opposition to the plans of disposal proposed for Plainfield on Plainfield land.

From the start his arguments were sarcasm. He had talked along this line for a few minutes, when Councilman Frost suggested to the president that Mr. Nelson confine himself to a discussion of the merits of the subject. The president so suggested. This broke the Dunellen authority and advisor all up. He stood for a moment at loss for something to say. Just then he noticed that he carried a formidable looking document in his hand, which proved to be a petition from Plainfield residents who were following out the same lines of opposition as the Dunellen petitioners. He talked about there petition for a moment or two when he caught up the line of thought Mr. Frost had made him lose, and reiterated substantially what he has published in his letters. One of his new thoughts was that a man only needs a nose to locate sewage beds in a town where they have been established. Mr. Nelson concluded by presenting the petition, in which the signers ask for a tide-water disposal.

Mr. Frost said that since the sewer system was started the best of advice in every phase of work had been hired. By doing this the city had been able to steer clear of the costly obstructions and experiments which had characterized like work in Westfield and elsewhere. It was therefore along this same line that the services of Albert Hazen was secured.

Mr. Hazen was introduced by Mr. Frost and spoke as follows:

This question of getting rid of the sewage from our cities is one of the problems which is attracting the attention of growing cities, not only in America but in all parts of the world, and it is a difficult question, there is no doubt about that. One of the first, I think the first, method of solving it was to turn the sewage into the nearest water course or stream. That method of getting rid of the sewage in some cases is fairly satisfactory where the rivers are large and the cities upon their banks not too frequent, the sewage is carried away rapidly, and in case the water in the rivers is not used for drinking purposes below, there is no very serious effects from it. I might mention St. Louis, New Orleans and many other cities which discharge their sewage in that way.

There are other cities that are able to turn their sewage into tide-water. New York is a case in point, where the very strong tide from the North and East rivers remove the sewage with considerable rapidiiy and I believe there is no great complaint. In Boston where there are very strong tidal currents the sewage was formerly discharged in the harbor and afterwards grew to be a nuisance, and the city gave up that form of discharge some years ago and built at an expense of many millions of dollars a system to carry the sewage of the city down to some islands at the mouth of the harbor some six miles below the city, and in that way it is carried out to sea where it does not return and cause any offense.

In the case of inland cities and towns which are not upon large rivers other methods of sewage disposal are employed and other means have been devised to meet these cases. Among these, one of the prominent methods is chemical precipitation. This was used to a limited extent in this country. Worcester, Mass., where the sewage of about 100,000 inhabitants is treated before being discharged; then East Orange, N. J., a neighbor of these parts, and there are a number of other small places in America. In Europe the process is more extensively used. In the central part of England where the country is almost covered up with great cities, where land is held at a very high price, so that it is hardly possible to obtain ample, and where the land is not adapted to the work of purification, this process, at best, is an imperfect process. It removes the solid matters—but not the matters in solution—the germ of disease, consequently it is only adopted as a last resort where other methods of treatment cannot be used to advantage.

The other processes of treatment, the leading processes, are intermittent filtration and broad irrigation. These processes that I may consider as two processes, are really one. The principle involved in the two are exactly the same, the difference is that in broad irrigation the sewage water is utilized for the growing of crops, while in intermittent filtration is to treat the largest quantity of sewage with the minimum area without very much regard to crops. The principle is the same.

This is the process which is regarded as the best for sewage treatment the world over. It is very extensively used in Europe and has been used quite a good deal in this country. Berlin, with over two millions of people, uses broad irrigation upon sandy farms which surround the city, and upon a material which is not very different from that which you propose for use in Plainfield.

In the South of England broad irrigation is very extensive, and in Birmingham and other great cities, where, by chemical precipitation, the effluent is put upon areas of land which are so small they would not, in themselves take all the sewage of the city, this process is the best process to be employed when the conditions are favorable. And one by one of the cities that formerly used other processes have given them up and have substituted land treatment.

In this country the condition for sewage disposal are somewhat different from those of Europe. When Worcester was wrestling with its sewage problem nine years ago they sent their expert, Mr. Allen, to Europe to study the question, and he found the European winters—England, France and Eastern Germany, were less severe than in Massachusetts and he argued, and correctly, that the fact of the less severe winters in England did not interfere with the land treatment, and that was one of the arguments which led Worcester to adopt chemical precipitation instead of land treatment. It was a short time after that the State of Massachusetts wished to investigate the problem of sewage disposal on quite a thorough scale, so at Lawrence in 1887 an experimental station was established to investigate the various processes of sewage treatment. Experiments were made with broad irrigation and intermittent filtration and chemical precipitation. I had the good fortune to be the one to take charge of the work there and retained that position for five years and over, up to the commencement of the World's Fair. Experiments were made there with different materials—with gravels, sands, soils, to see what results could be obtained with the different materials, to determine the laws which govern the process and the general rules which could be used elsewhere. We found that the process of applying to suitable material could be successfully carried out through our winters. We found that under favorable conditions effluents could be obtained so pure that I have very often drank of them and then in preference to the water supply of half the great cities of the United States. I have drank of the effluents of the sewage in Paris and other European cities and have never observed any ill effects.

We found that while these excellent results could be obtained under suitable conditions there were other materials with which corresponding results could not be obtained. There are materials which will not purify sewage, or at least will only purify it at such a low rate that it is not to be thought of.

I have spent today examining the land which it is proposed to use for treating the sewage of Plainfield, and which is the subject of the ordinance now before the council. The land, so far as I have been able to examine on the ground without making as yet a more thorough test as I should like to make and hope to make later, it seems to be well adapted to the purposes for which you propose. It is a sandy material, and the sand in places is finer than could be desired but it is not so fine as to preelude obtaining first-rate results from it. It seems that if care is taken in preparing the surface, looking after the underdraining, and various other matters of detail, that if this is done you may expect with entire confidence to obtain results from it that will be satisfactory.

In regard to the nuisance which may be produced from it I may say that with five years experience at the Lawrence Experimental Station where my office was practically surrounded by areas which were used for sewage purification — some of them were managed to get the best results and some under extreme and unusual conditions not to get the best results—I never observed any unfavorable effect upon my health.

At Chicago I had charge of the sewage disposal there. It was by chemical precipitation and more likely to produce odor. My office was in the same area building where the sewage was treated. As we had to keep open twenty-four hours in the day I had a sleeping room there.

At Berlin, a city having about one hundred times the population of Plainfield, the farms are in such good condition that they have located the convalescent hospitals and other city institutions around the farms, and I have never heard any objections on the part of the people from living there, and there is quite a large population—people who carry on the farms, etc., and the health of the people living on these farms compares very favorably with the health of the people living in the city, as a whole.

In Paris they irrigate the land almost up in the gardens, and in England the farms are repeatedly put in between the villages, quite close together, and I have been astonished repeatedly to suddenly come upon irrigation where I did not expect it.

Regarding the art of applying sewage to land, the land is always kept in such condition that the sewage soaks rapidly away and they grow crops on the land, and if you were not aware of the existence of disposal beds you would only think they were raising better crops there than usual.

We have in Massachusetts as a result quite a number of these disposal beds. The first of them was South Framingham, where the conditions are unusually favorable and which has been in operation with great satisfaction to all parties interested. The last time I was there one man spent a part of a day taking care of it, and the crops were sold for several hundred dollars—way above the expense of operation. Marlborough and Gardner have been put in operation more recently and are giving quite as good results.

I wish to assure you, gentlemen, that I think that your committee on sewers are on the right track; that they have selected a piece of land which can be used for the purpose which is intended, and so far as I had opportunity to examine is the best land for the purpose, and that I think you can apply your sewage to this land and treat it and purify it and see that it will not be the cause of any offense, and if carefully and properly done, with the management you will secure, it will not be any cause of offense to the people.

At the conclusion of Mr. Hazen's talk Mr. Fisk moved that the ordinance be placed on second reading. Mr. Frazee moved that the motion be laid on the table. The motion was lost, Messrs. Frazee and Moore voting aye. On motion the bill was ordered engrossed.

After this regular order of business was returned to. A number of petitions and communications were received.

The Plainfield Street Railway Company asked for franchises for running cars over the following streets:

Councilmen Westphal, Frazee and Ginna were appointed a committee to represent the council on the general committee Fourth of July celebration.

The recommendation of Robert Mc Cormick for special policeman by Mayor Gilbert was confirmed.

The police department was voted $75 for the purchase of new uniforms.

The city treasurer was authorized to borrow $1,500 for current expenses; also $10,000 at 4½ per cent. interest, to be used in payment of sewer work.

Coming Marriage.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Oppie, of Griggstown, have issued invitations for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Mary, to Walter S. Timmis of this city. The ceremony will take place at the home of the bride Tuesday, June 18th. Mr. and Mrs. Timmis will sail for Europe on one of the Cunard liners shortly after their marriage and will visit the home of Mr. Timmis's parents. On their return they will reside in Plainfield.

Started Without the Driver.

Mrs. Richard Boyce and family of Somerset street started to take a ride this morning. The horse and wagon stood near the barn and before she could get in the wagon the horse started off down Emily street with the children in the wagon. Mr. Boyce came out just in time to catch the runaway animal and thus avert an accident.

Mr. Murphy's Fall.

Rev. T. Logan Murphy while trying to mount his wheel on Park avenue this morning had a severe fall. It was caused by the moist condition of the street. The wooden rim of his front wheel was demolished. Mr. Murphy received no injuries.

Several boys from the High School and Leal's School went to Elizabeth to take the examinations for West Point and Annapolis. The examinations were held in Pingry's School.

Bathing in the Notch.

The Notch was crowded yesterday afternoon with boys who came to try to cool off. The water was high and in fine condition for bathing.

'76 SPIRIT IN THE AIR.

Organization of the Fourth of July Committee.

ALL ARE FULL OF PATRIOTISM.

Mayor Gilbert Says That He is Heartily in Favor of The Observance of This Great Natal Day—Representatives Present From All Civic Organizations—J. W. Murray Chosen for Chairman.

One not acquainted with the details for the proposed Fourth of July celebation in this city, has no idea of the amount of enthusiasm and energy that has been bottled, ready for an explosion, and those who attended the preliminary meeting of the committees from the various lodges, which was held in Red Men's hall last evening, were even surprised themselves to see such a large representative gathering of prominent citizens. The meeting was called to order by Wm. Newcorn, chairman of the committee from Miantonomoh tribe of Red Men, who took the initial step in the proposed celebration. He stated the call and objects of the meeting and then suggested that those present elect a chairman.

V. W. Nash was chosen for that position and A. E. Kenney, secretary. Mr. Newcorn was then called upon and explained in detail his idea of the affair, which was to have a large parade in the afternoon, a mass meeting in the evening, followed by a display of fireworks.

The matter of selecting permanent officers was then brought up and it was very hard to settle on those who should be at the head. Some desired that the present officers act, while others wished Mayor Gilbert to serve in that capacity, with Mayor Hegeman of the borough as first vice-chairman. Mr. Gilbert seemed to be the choice. In the meantime John W. Murray's name was mentioned for the chairmanship. Mr. Gilbert finally found it necessary to speak, and he said in part as follows:

I am amazed, exceedingly amazed, at the large representation of Plainfield's secret societies here tonight. I have lived in Plainfield thirty years, been in politics a little, but had no idea of your strength. Had I known it, I probably would have been around to see you. It is well to be patriotic, and I will hold up both hands to help any patriotism there may be evident. What you want, however, is cold wisdom—mixed in with patriotism. This celebration will cost a good deal of money, and you should count the cost. You want a good begging committee. This affair won't run itself. It will be necessary to raise at least $1,000 to start with, to make it the splendid success it deserves, and if you appoint a good committee I will give $100 to start it off.

I am a very busy man and my wife complains, and justly too, about my being away from home so much. You must not ask me to be chairman of the committee. I remember being in court one time, and was asked what my business was. I replied that I was in several, vice-president of a bank, president of Music Hall Association, trustee of a church, and Secretary of the Clearing House. The man asking the question replied, that he "thought I was kind of a Poo Bah".

Mayor Hegeman also made a few remarks declining the position offered, stating he could not possibly attend to it. In spite of the determined effort to secure the two men at the head of the committees, they positively refused to serve.

Secretary A. E. Kenney, acting in accordance with a motion, read the list of societies present, and the chairmen responded for the lodge represented.

All were heartily in favor of the idea of the celebration, and with a few exceptions all were ready to join in. The others were obliged to report back to their societies.

The following officers were finally chosen: President, J. W. Murray; first vice-president, V. W. Nash; second vice-president, S. St. John McCutchen; third vice-president, George Rockfellow; secretary, H. C. Runyon; assistant-secretary, J. D. Anderson; treasurer, W. F. Arnold.

The chairman then appointed the following committee of five to fill any vacancies that might occur: Mayor Alexander Gilbert, Charles Ulrich, J. E. Flannery, H. Liefke, and William Newcorn.

T. J. Carey, G. Q. Packer, W. H. Brokaw were appointed a committee to notify the officers elected, who were not present.

After the whole affair had been well ventilated, and a considerable amount of wit and humor enjoyed, the meeting adjourned to meet Monday evening, June 10, at 8 o'clock.

SWODY WINS.

The Street Railway Company Mulcted $100 in a Funny Action.

In the Common Pleas Court at Elizabeth yesterday the case of Valentine Swody against the Plainfield Street Railway was tried.

It will be remembered that this case was brought into Justice Newcorn's Court about two months ago. Swody secured a verdict of $75 for damages to a horse resulting from an electric current charging water in a gutter in front of J. K. Arnold's grocery store on Somerset street, into which the horse stepped. The company then took the case to Elizabeth, claiming Swody was not entitled to any damages. The case occupied most of yesterday and was tried for all it was worth on both sides. After the action had been called it was learned that two important witness for Swody were absent.

For a few minutes counsel for Swody was placed in an embarassing position, for, as the case stood, he would surely have been non-suited. Judge Coddington, counsel for the plaintiff, looked around the room and saw present J. A. Karet, who is a graduate of the London University of Science.

He was asked if he knew anything about electricity, and replied that he did. He was put on the stand and proved many valuable points for the justness of the verdict for Swody. He was cross examined severely but maintained his testimony with clearness. Previous to the case being summed up it looked as if the company would win.

In his final argument Mr. Coddington was eloquent and convincing. As he made point after point he would clinch each with undeniable evidence, leaving no grounds for his opponents to fight on.

The company was represented by Depew & Parker of Newark. The jury after a half hour deliberation brought in a verdict of $100 and costs for Mr. Swody, which was $25 more than was secured in the justice's court. They will now have to pay the costs of both trials.

HIGH SCHOOL GAMES.

Final Arrangements Made for the Events of Saturday.

The High School Athletic Association is making great preparations for their semi-annual games, which take place on Saturday at the Crescent Oval. The committee of arrangements announce the following order of events:

10 yard dash; putting shot, 12 pound; 1 mile bicycle race; 440 yard run; running high jump; quarter mile bicycle race; pole vault; 2 mile bicycle race.

Captain William Hand will run his stages to the grounds, starting from the corner of North and Park avenues, instead of Front and Park as previously announced.

A. Titsworth & Company will have charge of the refreshment stand.

The officials of the day will be:

Referee, George Taggart; track judges, N. W. Titsworth, H. Heinrich, Casper Kirkner; clerk of the course, Frank L. C. Martin; assistants, Carlos C. Gallup, Albert Woltmann, Edgar I. Serrell; announcer, J. Fritts; timers, Walter B. Rittenhouse, Richard Stevens, J. Hervey Doane; starter, George Schoonmaker; field judges, Fred. W. Walz, Charles H. Angleman, Wesley Abbot; committee of arrangements, Charles B. Morse, chairman; Lewis H. Rand, Carlos C. Gallup, Edgar I. Serrell and George P. Smith.

The entries will close tomorrow.

Fix the Tracks.

The street committee of the borough Council have notified the street railway people that they must raise the track and switches on Somerset street, between Manning and Jackson avenues. Supt. Adelman and Treasurer Riker will meet with the committee and look into the matter.

High School Field Day.

Entry blanks for the Plainfield High School field day may be had at the following places: The Plainfield Cycle Company, the Eldridge Cycle Company, F. L. C. Martin's, Barker's drug store, and 551 West Front street.

The closing of the entries has been postponed until Wednesday, June 5.

To Be a Quiet Wedding.

Owing to the serious illness of Mrs. Frederick W. Yates, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Yates desire to recall their invitations for the fifth day of June, and to announce to their friends that the marriage of their daughter, Katharine, to Harry V. Borden, will take place quietly at home.

School Days Soon to Be Over.

The children of Miss Fawcett's school and kindergarten will have their closing exercises for the year in the Park club house next Monday evening.

FREE SILVER WILL WIN

Outlook of the Present Fight in Illinois.

The Democratic State Convention, Which Meets To-morrow, Will Adopt a Free Coinage Plank—An Open Fight Against the President, Senator Palmer and Others.

Chicago, June 4.—Throughout Illinois, especially outside Cook county, the fight has been bitter and unrelenting between the advocates and opponents of free silver coinage within the democratic party and as the state convention is to be held to-morrow at Springfield, the preliminary work of the silver men is about concluded. It is admitted by the gold standard men that the convention will put through a 16 to 1 platform and it is said to be the intention of the rank and file, who stand for the silver side of the party, to make all the trouble they can for the federal office holders and other so-called gold bugs.

To Fight the President.

It is understood to be the programme mapped out by Gov. Altgeld, Secretary of State Hinrichsen and other leaders of the Illinois democracy, who have nothing to lose thereby, to make an open fight on President Cleveland, Senator Palmer and the big or little democrats in office who represent the federal anti-silver element.

Many Will Stay Away.

Numerous Chicago democrats who expect to be appointed to federal offices and others who are influenced by personal interests, will stay away from the convention on account of the hot weather. The office holders under Gov. Altgeld intend to introduce a resolution to the convention condemning the president's monetary policy. Eleven counties, ordinarily controlled by men holding government positions, have defiantly declared for free coinage.

STRAIT ATTEMPTS SUICIDE.

The Condemned Murderer Makes a Determined Effort To End His Life.

Elmira, N. Y., June 4.—Martin V. Strait, condemned to suffer death by electricity at Auburn prison during the week begining July 21, for the murder of his wife and sister-in-law, made a determined effort to take his life yesterday. He wrenched off the handle of a tin drinking cup and bending it into the shape of a knife, made several attempts to cut his throat. Failing in this, he jabbed it into his neck on the right side, near the jugular vein, and succeeded in making an ugly wound. The jail physician was summoned and Strait was put in irons while the wound was sewed up. He made frequent attempts to tear open the gash with his fingers. The wound will not result seriously. He was removed to Auburn last evening.

CHILDREN IN A PANIC.

Public School Building at Lenox Struck by Lightning.

Pittsfield, Mass., June 4.—During a heavy shower yesterday afternoon lightning struck the public school building on School street, Lenox, in which four schools were in session. Several pupils were prostrated, and the build was set on fire and a panic among the children was only averted by the coolness of the teachers. The fire department responded promptly to the alarm and the fire was extinguished before much damage was done. None of the pupils was severely injured.

MILL HANDS RETURNING.

Collapse of the Weavers' Trouble at Providence.

Providence, R. I., June 4.—About one-half of the operators at the Riverside mills returned to work yesterday morning, and seventeen weavers went back to work at Manton mills. The usual number went to work in all departments at the Saxon mills. A few returned at the Delaine mill. About sixty policemen are on duty near the factories, but no trouble is reported.

100 Degrees at St. Louis.

St. Louis, June 4.—All hot weather records for the first week in June in this city were passed yesterday. At 2:30 o'clock the 100 mark was reached. At 3 p. m. a brisk shower set in and cooled the air.

Miss Dodge Recovers Consciousness.

Washington, June 4.—Miss Mary A. Dodge was reported this morning by the attending physician as having partially recovered consciousness, after lying for three days in a semi-comatose condition.

A SERIOUS FOREST FIRE.

Started Near Hinter Run, Pa., by Sparks from a Locomotive.

Kane, Pa., June 4.—At an early hour on Saturday morning the locomotive of a lumber railroad set fire to the woods near Hinter Run, a small settlement seventeen miles southwest of Kane. A party of men were sent to fight the fire, but a high wind was blowing, and notwithstanding their efforts the progress of the flames could not be checked. When the oilmen and lumbermen realized the extent of the conflagration, they immediately sent 200 men to Hinter Run. They fought the fire through Sunday and all yesterday before they succeeded in getting it under control. The National Transit company pumped water from the Hinter Run station to a point in advance of the flames, and thus prevented the destruction of much valuable property. A large number of logs and about 50,000 feet of hemlock lumber were destroyed. Five rigs, two tanks and two boiler houses of the Midland Oil company were burned and much valuable timber was destroyed. The fire burned over about five square miles of forest.

A SPANISH OFFICIAL SHOT.

The Captain-General of Madrid Attacked by a Lieutenant.

Madrid, June 4.—A sensation has been caused here by the shooting of the captain-general of Madrid. A lieutenant in the army is said to have been for some time paying his addresses to the captain-general's daughter, and yesterday he requested her hand in marriage. The captain-general is reported to have refused the request. Hot words were exchanged, resulting in the lieutenant drawing a revolver and shooting the captain-general. Later in the day it became known that the captain-general, Prima Rivera, was still living, although dangerously wounded in the breast and arm. His assailant, whose name was Clavigo, was cut down immediately after the shooting by an aide-de-camp of the captain-general.

RIOTING AT CHENGTU SZECHUAN

French, American and English Missions Destroyed.

London, June 4.—A dispatch from Shanghai to the Pall Mall Gazette says that rioters have destroyed the French Catholic and the English and American Protestant missions at Chengtu Szechuan. The missionaries secured a safe refuge with the native officers.

Missionary Property Destroyed.

Shanghai, June 4.—Intelligence has been received here that between May 29 and 31 the French Catholic, English and American missionary property at Ching-Too-Foo, capital of the province of Le Chuen, western China, was destroyed by rioters. The missionaries are reported to be safe in the officials' vamens.

TWELVE DEATHS AT NEW YORK

Yesterday's Victims of the Heat Were Many.

New York, June 4.—The hot spell which has prevailed here for the past five days was broken late yesterday afternoon, the temperature falling from about 93 degrees at 3:30 o'clock to 61 at 9 o'clock last night. During the fifteen hours between midnight and 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon there were twelve deaths reported to the police, at least seven of which were directly traceable to the heat, and the remainder, as they occurred suddenly, were no doubt influenced by the high temperature. Besides these many persons were prostrated in the streets.

PLOT TO LYNCH CHARLES DAVIS

Albany Authorities Take Extra Care to Protect a Murderer.

Albany, June 4.—The officials of the Albany City jail and the Albany police have been notified that secret efforts are being made to form a lynching party to take Charles Davis from the custody of the jail officials. Davis is in jail here charged with murdering May Shannon, aged 6 years, at Cohoes several weeks ago. Extra precautions have been taken about the jail.

VETO BY GOV. GREENHALGE.

His Disapproval of the Compulsory Preference for Veterans' Bill.

Boston, June 4.—Gov. Greenhalge has vetoed the bill to give veterans compulsory preference in appointments to public services, basing his action upon the ground of public good. In his statement the governor declares that the public is entitled to the very best service obtainable, and that the public interest is supreme.

Extra Expenses Allowed.

Washington, June 4.—Secretary Herbert has made an allowance of $1,000 to Admiral Kirkland and $500 each to the officers of the New York, Columbia, San Francisco and Marblehead on account of extraordinary expenses which they must incur in the exchange of international courtesies at the Kiel canal rendezvous.

THE CUBAN REBELLI

Reinforcements To Awai Gen. Campos' Orders.

Several Skirmishes with Insurgent Bands—Col. Martorelle Led Into a Trap and Suffers Heavy Losses. Cubans Rejoicing Over Additional Reports That Marti Is Alive.

Madrid, June 4.—The cabinet, at a meeting last night, discussed the situation of affairs in Cuba, and decided to await the decision of the captain-general, Martinez de Campos, before sending any further reinforcements.

Brush with Insurgents.

Havana, June 4.—Lieut.-Col. Tejera has had a skirmish with the insurgents on the banks of the Contramaestre river, in the province of Santiago de Cuba. One old soldier was killed. The column of troops under the command of Col. Sandoval has also exchanged shots with the insurgents, who lost two men killed and left one wounded upon the field. On the side of the Spanish troops one guide and two soldiers were wounded.

Insurgent Losses.

The civil guards have been engaged with a band of insurgents commanded by Carlos Castillo at Ramon Alto. The insurgents lost three killed and had several wounded. The insurgent band commanded by Suarez, in the province of Puerto Principe, being fired upon by a detachment of troops, left upon the field two killed and three wounded. In addition, the troops captured fourteen saddled horses.

Spanish Troops Suffer Big Losses.

Colonel Matorelle, operating against the insurgents with a detachment of troops, came across a band of insurgents, consisting of fifty infantry and ten cavalrymen, in the district of Joborosado. He pursued them to the Leborrucal mountains in the province of Santa Chara, when the insurgents lead him into a trap, and the Spanish troops suffered heavy losses.

Government Lieutenant Deserts.

Key West, June 4.—A dispatch received here from Havana says that a lieutenant of the civil guard who was acting chief of police at Puerto Principe has deserted. He succeeded in getting on board a pilot boat from which he was transhipped to a steamer bound for Liverpool. The cause of his desertion was his fear of being brought to justice by Capt. Gen. Campos, who was displeased at the lieutenant's action in exceeding the limits of his authority while pursuing the band of insurgents commanded by Maurice Montijo.

Cubans Rejoice.

There was great rejoicing here among the Cubans when the telegram from Benjamin Guerra, stating that Jose Marti is alive, was received, and to celebrate the event a meeting of Cubans was called for midnight at the San Carlos theatre. The news that Marti was alive and in good health was received with loud cheering, and addresses were made by a number of prominent Cubans. Later the Cubans formed in line and, with a band at their head, paraded the streets until daylight, cheering for Marti and indulging in other manifestations of joy. The Cubans decided to take a holiday yesterday and nearly all the cigar factories were closed in consequence.

"Marti Lives. Cuba Will Be Free!"

Tampa, Fla., June 4.—The steamer arriving from Cuba last night brought no news. Col. Fernando Figueredo at 8 o'clock last night received a telegram from Benjamin Guerra, treasurer of the revolutionary party in New York, stating: "Marti lives. Cuba will be free!" Figueredo made it public, and in a few minutes several hundred Cubans were rejoicing. Later at Ybor City, Col. Figueredo, Martin Herrera, Jose Buttare, Louis Cruz and Mrs. Carolina Rodriguez delivered appropriate addresses to about a thousand Cubans.

DAMAGES FOR LOSS OF LIFE.

Important Decision Regarding the New Law in New York.

New York, June 4.—The general term of the court of common pleas handed down a decision yesterday holding that the provision of the new constitution removing the $5,000 limit in suits brought to recover damages for loss of life by the negligence of another applied to suits pending at the time the constitution went into effect. The decision involves millions of dollars.

PRESENT TARIFF LAW

It Went into Effect on August 28, 1894.

The Date at Which It Was Promulgated by the State Department—Decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Government Case Against Burr and Hardwicke.

Washington, June 4.—The supreme court, through Chief Justice Fuller, expressed its opinion that the tariff act of 1894 went into effect on the 28th day of August, the date at which it was promulgated by the department of state as a law without the president's signature and not on the first day of August, the date fixed in the act itself for taking effect.

Origin of the Dispute.

The question arose over the assessment of duty made by Collector Kilbreth at New York upon an invoice of cotton laces made by Burr & Hardwicke, and entered for consumption on August 8. The rate was fixed by the collector at sixty per cent ad valorem under the act of 1890; by the act of 1894 the duty on the merchandise was fifty per cent.

Questions Put to the Court.

The board of general appraisers sustained the collector in his rating, but the court reversed their action, holding that the law of 1894 controlled. The matter coming before the circuit court of appeals, it certified to the supreme court of the United States these questions, for answer to guide it in passing upon the case: (1.) Should the assessment for duty on the merchandise described, under paragraph 373 of the act of Oct. 1, 1890, be sustained, notwithstanding the provisions of the tariff act of Aug. 20, 1894? (2.) Should the said merchandise be assessed for duty under paragraph 276, schedule J., of the tariff act of Aug 28, 1894?

Too General in Its Nature.

(3.) Should the rates of duty prescribed by the first section of the tariff act of August, 1894 (unless otherwise specifically provided for in said act), be levied, collected and paid upon all articles imported from foreign countries, or withdrawn for consumption on and after Aug. 1, 1894, and prior to Aug. 28, 1894? The first question was answered "yes;" the second, "no." No answer was made to the third question, it being too general in its nature.

CORBETT AND FITZ.

Indications Are Now Favorable for a Meeting of the Men.

New York, June 4.—Another step forward in the arrangements for the fight between Corbett and Fitzsimmons has just been made. The men have practically agreed to fight for the Florida Athletic club of Jacksonville, which has its headquarters at Dallas, Tex., on October 31. Joe Vendig, of the Florida Athletic club, placed $5,000 in the hands of P. J. Dwyer, the final stakeholder, as a guarantee that the fight could be brought off in Dallas, Tex. If through any fault of the club the fight is declared off, this money will be devided equally between the pugilists. Corbett has deposited $5,000 to guarantee his appearance in the ring, and also expressed his willingness to fight at Dallas. The only preliminary that is lacking is Fitzsimmons's $5,000 deposit. This, however, will be forthcoming during the next few days. Before the men enter the ring the full amount of the purse offered, $41,000, will be put in the final stakeholder's hands. The men have already received $1,000 for training expenses, and it looks as if the fight will come off on the date stated.

GEORGE GOULD GETS TIME.

To Answer to Zella Nicolaus in the $40,000 Check Suit.

Trenton, June 4.—An extension of time has been granted to George J. Gould to plead in the suit of Zella Ruhman, formerly Zella Nicolaus, who sues Mr. Gould to recover a $40,000 check which, she alleges he took from her in Jersey City and refuses to return. Lawyer R. V. Lindabury is Mr. Gould's counsel, and he secured the extension of time upon the strength of affidavits made by Peter Bentley, Charles A. Gardner and David D. Duncan. Mr. Gould has until July to plead, but the court refused an extension of time to demur. Judge Lippincott granted Mr. Gould the extension.

Killed by a Trolley Car.

Hartford, Conn., June 4.—Joseph Langlou, aged 84 years, died here yesterday afternoon as the result of being knocked down by a trolley car in this city Wednesday afternoon. He was born in New London in 1811, and at twenty-one years of age began business as a dry goods merchant in this city, and for fifty-four years was in business in one location.

To Remain in Columbus.

Columbus, O., June 4.—Secretary Patrick McBride, of the United Mine Workers of America, says there is no truth in the report that they are to move their offices to Pittsburg. "We will probably remain here," said he, "but if a change is made we will not go to the mining center."

Olney's Case Will Be Postponed.

Willimantic, Conn., June 4.—The trial of Jeremiah Olney will not take place to-day, Judge Shumway, who is holding court, being disqualified and no other judge being available the case will be continued to the September term.

Grand Time in San Antonio.

San Antonio, Tex., June 4.—San Antonio has 20,000 visitors this week to the National Travellers' Protective association convention, the Jockey club spring meeting and live stock show and annual battle of flowers.

The President's Plans.

Washington, June 4.—The president does not expect to be able to get away for Gray Gables before the middle of the month. Mrs. Cleveland and the children will start for Massachusetts possibly to-day.

Miss Groegle's Body Found.

Atlantic City, N. J., June 4.—The body of Jennie Groegle, the young girl who met death by drowning Sunday afternoon, was washed ashore fully a mile from the spot where the accident occurred.

SURVIVORS FROM THE COLIMA.

Names of the Five Men Seen by the Mazatlan.

San Francisco, June 5.—A dispatch from the City of Mexico to the Chronicle says that the five men, survivors of the Colima disaster, who were seen Saturday on Block Point by the steamer Mazatlan, have been rescued by an overland party. Their names are Antonio Ramez, J. O'Neill, J. A. Talig, Joseph Morrill and C. H. Cushing.

Rescuing Parties Still Out.

An Examiner dispatch from the City of Mexico says that rescuing parties are still in search of survivors of the disaster. Land parties, mounted and afoot, are operating in the vicinity of Ixtlanuacan, Laruata, Zacatula and as far south as Nuevos, while the people all along the coast of Acapulco have been asked to patrol the beach whenever possible. It is believed that many of the passengers may have gone wandering about the country. As many of them were unable to speak Spanish, they could not make known their position, and so would be helpless among the Indians of the coast country. The survivors who have reached Manzanillo say that Capt. Pitts of the steamship San Juan should have cruised at least two days longer in the vicinity of the wreck and believe that a good many persons could have been picked up.

CAPT. DEVERY REINSTATED.

Decision of the General Term of the Common Pleas Court.

New York, June 4.—The general term of the common pleas, Judge Pryor writing the opinion, which was concurred in by Judges Bookstaver and Bischoff, has reversed the action of the police board in dismissing from the police force Captain William S. Devery. The court did not go into the merits of the finding that the captain was guilty on fifty-six charges, but says that the trial in Devery's absence, and against his counsel's application for an adjournment was no trial of the captain was so clearly against the proof of the policemen's illness and inability to attend as to show an abuse of discretion; his conviction in his absence and unheard was a trial without an opportunity to defend. Devery's wardman, Edward Glennon, was dismissed on practically the same ground.

MURDER IN A FAMILY QUARREL

John Cunniff Stabbed to Death by His Son-in-Law.

Boston, June 4.—John Cunniff, aged 65, was stabbed in the neck with a pocketknife in the hands of his son-in-law, William V. Ricker, at the house jointly occupied by the Cunniff and Ricker families on Clifton street, Roxbury, last night. Cunniff is dead and Ricker is under arrest charged with murder, while Peter Cunniff, son of the murdered man, and his sister Mrs. Ricker, are held as witnesses. Cunniff and his son Peter forced their way into the apartments occupied by Ricker and his wife, and while the brother and sister were fighting the elder Cunniff attempted to throw Ricker down stairs. The attempt was fatal, for Ricker drew his pocketknife and stabbed his father-in-law.

NATIONAL HEADQUARTERS.

The Salvation Army Dedicating Their New Building at New York.

New York, June 4.—The new national headquarters of the Salvation army on Fourteenth street was dedicated yesterday by the leading officers of the army in a characteristic manner. The event was the occasion of great rejoicing throughout the ranks of the army. The dedicatory services, which were only commenced yesterday, will be very elaborate and will continue till Wednesday evening. The building was crowded this morning with visiting field and staff officers from every state in the union, about nine hundred of these being present.

HAIL STORM IN CANADA.

Vessels Stripped of Their Canvas and Cottages Damaged.

Picton, Ont., June 4.—A terrific hail and wind storm lasting fifteen minutes, visited the northern portion of Prince Edward county last night. Three schooners in Big bay were stripped clean of their canvas and otherwise damaged. At Cornwall Point, a summer resort, about twenty cottages were more or less damaged. No loss of life has been reported. Crops and early fruits were badly damaged by the hail.

No Yellow Fever at Baltimore.

Baltimore, June 4.—There is no truth in the report that John Dooley, a seaman of the British steamship Farnwell, which arrived yesterday from Santiago, had died at his boarding house from yellow fever. A postmortem proved that the man had died of Bright's disease.

Hail Damages in Connecticut.

New Haven, Conn., June 4.—Reports received from points in Fairfield, Litchfield and New Haven counties indicate considerable damage to crops by yesterday afternoon's hailstorm. At New Milford the damage was principally done to fruit trees and early crops.

Religious Garb Bill.

Harrisburg, Pa., June 4.—The house last evening agreed to the senate amendment to the "religious garb" bill imposing on the school directors a fine for employing teachers who wore a religious garb.

GIBBONS VISITS LEO

The Pope Gives Audience to America's Cardinal.

Surprising Freshness of the Aged Prelate's Memory Even in Small Details—He Talks of America and the Future of the Church in This Country.

Rome, June 4.—Cardinal Gibbons had a private audience, lasting forty minutes, with the pope yesterday. Upon emerging from the audience Cardinal Gibbons said that he had not seen the pope since 1886 and was surprised at his excellent health.

Surprising Memory.

He added: "In spite of Leo's age, his intellect remains unimpaired. He showed surprising freshness of memory, recalling even the small details of religious, social and scholastic matters concerning the United States, and, especially, the diocese of Baltimore." The cardinal was asked what questions had been discussed during the audience. He answered:

Future of the Church Here.

"In this matter I must preserve the utmost reserve." He added that the pope had invited him to further audiences before he left Rome in order that they might discuss the present and future religious and social conditions of the United States, in which the pope assured him he took the keenest interest. It is the general belief that the meeting of the American cardinal and the pope is for the purpose of planning the future course of the church in America, a subject which has been chief in the mind of Leo for many years.

KENRICK DEPOSED.

Effectually Retired as Archbishop of the Diocese of St. Louis.

St. Louis, June 4.—The announcement, in the United Press dispatches to-day conveyed to the outside world the first information that Most Rev. Peter Richard Kenrick, the venerable archbishop of the diocese of St. Louis, had been deposed by Pope Leo XIII., and Most Rev. John J. Kain, formerly bishop of Wheeling, W. Va., had been appointed in his stead. The effect of the decision is to effectually retire Archbishop Kenrick from all rights, titles and privileges obtaining to the archbishopric of St. Louis.

Retains His Priestly Office.

He does not in any way lose his priestly office or rank. The reasons given for the deposition of Archbishop Kenrick may be embraced in the stereotyped phrase of "advancing years and increasing infirmities." Archbishop Kenrick has officiated for 54 years as administrator of the affairs of the diocese of St. Louis, and four years ago, amid such impressive ecclesiastical ceremonies as were never witnessed on this continent, rounded out the jubilee of his career. The excitement of this occasion proved too much for his enfeebled mind and since then he has not been in a condition to attend to the duties of his rank.

MOBBED BY STRIKERS.

A Crowd of Hungarians Try To Kill a Man Who Pleaded for Them.

Perth Amboy, N. J., June 4.—A force of 150 Polish and Hungarian laborers, with a few Americans, struck yesterday at the M. Guggenheim & Sons' smelting works here, for an increase in their wages from $1.10 to $1.50 per day. They have squatted in the woods south of the works and present a bold appearance to any new comers who look for work. Tom Laskey, an interpreter, who is one of the strikers, attempted to parley with the company's representative yesterday, but he was refused an audience. When he returned to his comrades they attempted kill him because he had not been successful. Laskey was rescued by the police. A large force of deputies, under city marshal J. F. Flaherty, patrolled the works last night.

TURKEY WILL MAKE AMENDS.

Full Satisfaction To Be Given for the Insults to Envoys.

Constantinople, June 4.—The Turkish government has promised the representatives of the powers that full satisfaction will be given for the outrageous behavior of the Turkish gendarmes at Mush, who forcibly entered the residence occupied by the foreign envoys, attempted to arrest one of their servants, and used insulting language towards the envoys.

Brown Again Escapes the Gallows.

Washington, June 4.—John Brown, convicted of murder before Judge Parker of the United States court for the western district of Arkansas, has been granted a new trial by the United States supreme court. Twice has Brown been rescued from the gallows because of the difference of opinion between Judge Parker and the United States supreme court as to what constitutes, in all respects, a proper charge to the jury.

Yale Athletics.

New Haven, Conn., June 4.—There is said to be a plan afloat at Yale to renew athletic contests, including boating with Cornell, and also to substitute class contests with Harvard for a time to bridge over the present athletic ill-feeling between the two universities.

Mrs. Langtry's New Play.

London, June 4.—At the Grand theatre, Islington, last night Mrs. Langtry produced her new play Gossip, which is based on a novel written by Jules Claretie. The plot includes several American characters. The play is sprightly, and scored a success.

Pierce Defeats Abbott.

Boston, June 4.—The twenty round contest between Leslie Pierce and Stanton Abbott was awarded to Pierce on points.

Bismarck's Health Improved.

The State convention of the Prohibition party will be held at Newark the 13th and 14th of this month.

The young ladies of Westfield threaten to boycott every young man in that town who plays ball with the female nine on Friday of this week. The girls of Westfield are of the right kind.

The implication which the Rev. Mr. Martine of Dunellen made in his argument before the Common Council last night that the councilmen who had visited the Framingham sewage beds went there with the intention of bringing home only the best side of their visit, came with poor grace and little consistency from a man of his standing in the community. The city officials who have visited these beds are men whose integrity and honesty, in public as well as private affairs are unquestioned; and the insinuation that they have pictured only the best side of the system as in operation elsewhere and left the undesirable effects in obscurity, was as ridiculous an argument in opposition to the adoption of the ordinance as it was unjust to the officials to whom he referred.

The right of way for a new pipe line is being purchased through our county, and of course every one is delighted. It shows an improvement in business, competition in carrying, and gives the farmers on whose lands the right of way is purchased good prices for the privilege. In Tioga county, in an adjoining State, $.0 per rod is paid, and our farmers of course should have as much. That is not as near tide water as we are. One thing the farmers should be on guard, and that is to require money, not promises. We have heard where they made promises, paid $1 and got the permit or deed, and then the promise as to the balance was not kept. Cash in hand is the motto, and then sign.—Somerset Democrat.

Parties representing a syndicate similar to the above have been in North Plainfield seeking signatures for a few days past. When the Democrat says that $20 per rod has been paid for right of way in another state they should understand that land in the county they mention you can purchase an acre of ground at that price. A rod is only sixteen feet, remember.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mrs. Thos. Eggers, 139 Florida St., San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result everything else, then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottle at Randolph's drug store. Regular size, 50c and $1.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mrs. Marion Ackerman is quite ill at the Revere House.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destored forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflammed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh, that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

BIG FIRE IN NEWARK.

Ballentine's Brewery Loses $225,000 By Flames.

Newark, June 4.—A big fire, which could be seen for many miles around this city, destroyed several of the buildings of P. Ballentine & Sons' brewery this morning.

The massive eight-story brick structure on Front street and the Passaic River, with its wealth of grain, is a total loss, with the exception of the charred walls.

The fire was only got under control at 10 o'clock this morning. It is calculated that the total loss will be about $225 000. The insurance is about $70,000. The cause of the fire is unknown.

A Charitable Man.

Commissioner of Alms Vanderbeek desires to acknowledge through The Press the receipt of some money by one of the city's most progressive citizens for the benefit of a certain poor family in this city, and thanking the gentleman for his kindness and confidence. Money so donated will be faithfully expended.

Johanna Hilarious Again.

Johanna Haley's familiar face was in city court this morning. Johanna has been there before so many times that they are too numerous to mention. Her offence was undue hilarity on Cottage place. Judge Coddington thought 60 days in the county jail would allow her to recuperate.

LEGISLATURE IN SPECIAL SESSION.

Committee of Inquiry Charge That There Have Been Grave Fraud.

Trenton, June 4.—The Legislature convened in special session at noon today. The Legislative Committee of Inquiry into State House frauds do not mince words, and charge openly that there has been gross fraud practised in furnished supplies, stationary and other contracts by which the State, they say, has been robbed right and left.

The report was submitted with many suggestions of laws to prevent future frauds.

New Jersey Naval Reserves.

At the meeting of the Second Division of the First Battalion of Naval Reserves held in Newark last night very little was done in the way of drilling. The time was taken up in forming the gun and boat crews, etc. The next drill will be on the Portsmouth in Jersey City. The men have a great deal of work to do in order to have it ready for the cruise next August.

A New Discovery By The Shakers.

For more than a hundred years the Mount Lebanon Shakers have studied the cultivation of medicinal plants and sought to extract from them their healing essences. Their labor has not been spent in vain. They have made a discovery that will prove a blessing to mankind. It consists of a cordial that causes immediate relief in cases of indigestion. The importance of this discovery will be apparent when we realize that nearly nine-tenths of all our sufferings are caused by dypepsia or indigestion. Nearly every person you meet has this digestive trouble in some of its varied forms—sick headache, distress after eating, pain and fullness in the chest after eating, palpitation of the heart, etc., are but symptoms of indigestion. To relieve these sufferings has been the study of the Shakers, and they have succeeded. The reason the Shaker Digestive Cordial has such an immediate and salutary effect is that it causes the food eaten to be digested before there is time for it to ferment and sour on the stomach. When the food is so digested it gives strength and vigor to the feeble body, makes one feel bright and cheerful, and makes one gain in flesh.

The Digestive Cordial is so prompt in its action that the very first dose will have a perceptibly favorable result. It gives immediate relief.

In order to prove this statement, small trial bottles placed in the druggists hands can be obtained for ten cents each. This trial bottle will have a decided beneficial effect and will satisfy anyone that the Cordial is adapted to his case. After a trial give praise to the Shakers of Mount Lebanon, N. Y.

George Demarest captured two large carp in Tier's lake this morning—the first of the sea4on.

While at Peekskill, N. Y., Mr. J. A. Scriven, a prominent manufacturer of New York City, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Such good results were obtained from its use that he sent back to the druggist from whom he had obtained it for two more bottles of the same remedy. When you have a cough or cold give this preparation a trial and like Mr. Scriven you will want it when again in need of such a medicine. It is a remedy of great worth and merit. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

INS AND OUTS.

The famous Browns, of Woodbridge, will visit this city, Saturday afternoon, June 22d, and play a game of baseball with the Y. M. C. A. team.

The Y. M. C. A. baseball team will play the Arlington's of Rahway next Saturday at the latter place. This is done on account of the High School Field Day on the Crescent oval, which takes place at that time.

The baseball committe of the Y. M. C. A. had a meeting last night and decided to hold a strawberry festival next Monday evening for the benefit of the nine. The following committee of arrangements was appointed: Robt. Davis, A. C. Wycoff, C. B. Egan and C. J. Miller.

The game of baseball between the Westfields and the Arlingtons of this city at Drake Park, Westfield, Saturday, was won by the Westfield team by a score of 16 to 12. The Westfield team has now defeated the three amateur Plainfield teams. The game with the Stars, the women's baseball team, is scheduled for Friday of this week. The Westfield young ladies say that they will refuse to recognize any of the young men who attend the game.

The Crescents of this city have made an alteration of their club with the following result: P. Winn, third base; M. Heffern, right field; D. Kane, catcher; T. Lyons, short stop; W. Shannon, left field; P. Townly, centre field; W. VanHorn, pitcher; S. Weineiger, second base; A. McGinley, first base; W. Townley, pitcher and centre field. They will play the Flemington Athletic Club on the afternoon of July Fourth on the Crescent grounds and on July 6th they will play the South Orange Athletic Club of Newark. T. Lyons is captain and W. VanHorn manager.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Miss Olive Newell, of East Fifth street, is the owner of a new wheel.

The Excelsior Cycle Club of New York will have a run to this city June 30th.

Howard Miller, of Park avenue, was the victim of a tack when riding his safety near his home, yesterday afternoon.

Miss Arline Crane, of West Eighth street, now rides a new Cleveland Swell Special purchased from the Martin Cycle Company.

George Coard, of East Ninth street, punctured his tire when riding out Park avenue yesterday afternoon. A passing hack conveyed the wheel and its owner back to town and to Martin's where it was left for repairs.

The expulsion of John S. Johnson from the L. A. W. into the professional ranks by the Racing Board of the League of American Wheelmen, and the fact that A. A. Zimmerman had decided to remain in this country until August were regarded as a likely sign that a series of match races between these two riders would be arranged.

An outbreak between the League of American Wheelman and its Class B racing men is momentarily expected. The action of the league in the professional ranks at the opening of the racing season, and the reported dictatorial methods pursued by the Chairman of the L. A. W. Racing Board in governing the racing class, is reported to be the cause of the impending trouble. Sanger and Titus who were entered at the meet in Trenton Saturday, after leaving Plainfield went to Sprinfield to go into training, both feeling that they were unable to compete in the Mercer County Wheelmen's events. The Trenton people made a protest to Chairman Gideon about the absense of these riders, which was a violation of the racing rules of the L. A. W. Chairman Gideon threatened to suspend them for not filling their entry at Trenton, but such action has not yet been taken. The racing men are very indignant at the threat of the Racing Board, and rumors of trouble are numerous. Should the Racing Board suspend a number of the leading Class B riders at this time, a likely result will be a combine of the riders supported by their employers, who will refuse to allow them to race at any of the circuit meets, and as a result the racing season will be spoiled.

Hibbitts' Defalcation.

Traveling Auditor Hartney of the Jersey Central Railroad finished his work yesterday on the books at the freight house and the total defalcation of John W. Hibbitts is found to amount to $992.06.

—Leal's School closes for the summer on Friday, June 21st.

Old People.

Old people who require medicine to regulate the bowels and kidneys will find the true remedy in Electric Bitters. This medicine does not stimulate and contains no whiskey nor other intoxicant, but acts as a tonic and alterative. It acts mildly on the stomach and bowels, adding strength and giving tone to the organs, thereby aiding nature in the performance of the functions. Electric Bitters is an excellent appetizer and aids digestion. Old people find it just exactly what they need. Price 50c a bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

I have two little grandchildren who are teething this hot summer weather and are troubled with bowel complaint. I give them Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and it acts like a charm. I earnestly recommend it for children with bowel troubles. I was myself taken with a severe attack of bloody flux, with cramps and pains in my stomach, one-third of a bottle of this remedy cured me. Within twenty-four hours I was out of bed and doing my housework. Mrs. W. L. Dunagan, Bonaqua, Hickman Co., Tenn.

For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves., T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

While in Topeka last March, E. T. Barber, a prominent newspaper man of La Cygne, Kansas, was taken with cholera morbus very severely. The night clerk at the hotel where he was stopping happened to have a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and gave him three doses which relieved him and he thinks saved his life. Every family should keep this remedy in their home at all times. No one can tell how soon it may be needed. It costs but a trifle and may be the means of saving much suffering and perhaps the life of some member of the family. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

Sometime ago I was troubled with an attack of rheumatism. I used Chamberlain's Pain Balm and was completely cured. I have since advised many of my friends and customers to try the remedy and all speak highly of it. Simon Goldbaum, San Luis Rey, Cal. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

Use it in Time.

Catarrh starts in the nasal passages, affecting eyes, ears and throat, and is in fact, the great enemy of the mucous membrane. Neglected colds in the head almost invariably precede catarrh, causing an excessive flow of of mucous, and if the mucous discharge becomes interrupted the disagreeable results of catarra will follow, such as bad breath, severe pain across forehead and about the eyes, a roaring and buzzing sound in the ears and oftentimes a very offensive discharge. Ely's Cream Balm is the acknowledged cure for these troubles.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles or no pay required. SKETCHES OF LINCOLN.

Incidents of His Career as a Lawyer.

HIS HABIT OF READING ALOUD.

How He Appeared at the Bar—His First Meeting With Edwin M. Stanton—Stanton's Idea of Lincoln at the Time—An Unfortunate Case.

[From "The Life of Lincoln" by William H. Herndon and Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1888, by Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1892, by D. Appleton & Co.]

XVIII.

A law office is a dull, dry place, so far as pleasurable or interesting incidents are concerned. If one is in search of stories of fraud, deceit, cruelty, broken promises, blasted homes, there is no better place to learn them than a law office. But to the majority of persons these painful recitals are anything but attractive, and it is well perhaps that it should be so. In the office, as in the courtroom, Lincoln, when discussing any point, was never arbitrary or insinuating. He was deferential, cool, patient and respectful. When he reached the office, about 9 o'clock in the morning, the first thing he did was to pick up a newspaper, spread himself out on an old sofa, one leg on a chair, and read aloud, much to my discomfort. Singularly enough, Lincoln never read any other way but aloud. This habit used to annoy me almost beyond the point of endurance. I once asked him why he did so. This was his explanation: "When I read aloud, two senses catch the idea—first, I see what I read; second, I hear it, and therefore I can remember it better." He never studied lawbooks unless a case was on hand for consideration, never followed up the decisions of the supreme courts, as other lawyers did. It seemed as if he depended for his effectiveness in managing a lawsuit entirely on the stimulus and inspiration of the final hour. He paid but little attention to the fees and money matters of the firm, usually leaving all such to me. He never entered an item in the account book. If any one paid money to him which belonged to the firm, on arriving at the office he divided it with me. If I was not there, he would wrap up my share in a piece of paper and place it in my drawer, marking it with a pencil: "Case of Roe versus Doe. Herndon's half."

HIS FIRST LAW OFFICE.

As a Talker and Listener.

On many topics he was not a good conversationist, because he felt that he was not learned enough. Neither was he a good listener. Putting it a little strongly, he was often not even polite. If present with others or participating in a conversation, he was rather abrupt, and in his anxiety to say something apt or to illustrate the subject under discussion would burst in with a story. In our office I have known him to consume the whole forenoon relating stories. If a man came to see him for the purpose of finding out something which he did not care to let him know and at the same time did not want to refuse him, he was very adroit. In such cases Lincoln would do most of the talking, swinging around what he suspected was the vital point, but never nearing it, interlarding his answers with a seemingly endless supply of stories and jokes. The interview being both interesting and pleasant, the man would depart in good humor, believing he had accomplished his mission. After he had walked away a few squares and had cooled off the question would come up, "Well, what did I find out?" Blowing away the froth of Lincoln's humorous narratives he would find nothing substantial left.

"As he entered the trial," relates one of his colleagues at the bar, "where most lawyers would object he would say he 'reckoned' it would be fair to let this in or that, and sometimes, when his adversary could not quite prove what Lincoln knew to be the truth, he 'reckoned' it would be fair to admit the truth to be so and so. When he did object to the court, and when he heard his objections answered, he would often say, 'Well, I reckon I must be wrong.' Now, about the time he had practiced this three-fourths through the case, if his adversary didn't understand him, he would wake up in a few minutes, learning that he had feared the Greeks too late, and find himself beaten. He was wise as a serpent in the trial of a cause, but I have had too many scares from his blows to certify that he was harmless as a dove. When the whole thing was unraveled, the adversary would begin to see that what he was so blandly giving away was simply what he couldn't get and keep. By giving away six points and carrying the seventh he carried his case, and the whole case hanging on the seventh he traded away everything which would give him the least aid in carrying that. Any man who took Lincoln for a simple minded man would very soon wake up with his back in a ditch."

His Power as a Lawyer.

Lincoln's restless ambition found its gratification only in the field of politics. He used the law merely as a stepping stone to what he considered a more attractive condition in the political world. In the allurements held out by the latter he seemed to be happy. Nothing in Lincoln's life has provoked more discussion than the question of his ability as a lawyer. I feel warranted in saying that he was at the same time a very great and a very insignificant lawyer. Judge David Davis, in his eulogy on Lincoln at Indianapolis, delivered at the meeting of the bar there in May, 1865, said this: "In all the elements that constituted a lawyer he had few equals. He was great at nisi prius and before an appellate tribunal. He seized the strong points of a cause and presented them with clearness and great compactness. His mind was logical and direct, and he did not indulge in extraneous discussion. Generalities and platitudes had no charm for him. An unfailing vein of humor never deserted him, and he was able to claim the attention of court and jury when the cause was most uninteresting by the appropriateness of his anecdotes. His power of comparison was large, and he rarely failed in a legal discussion to use that mode of reasoning. The framework of his mental and moral being was honesty, and a wrong case was poorly defended by him. The ability which some eminent lawyers possess of explaining away the bad points of a cause by ingenious sophistry was denied him. In order to bring into full activity his great powers it was necessary that he should be convinced of the right and justice of the matter which he advocated. When so convinced, whether the cause was great or small, he was usually successful."

In the summer of 1857 Lincoln was employed by Mr. Manny of Rockford, Ills., to defend him in an action brought by McCormick, who was one of the inventors of the reaping machine, for infringement of patent. Lincoln had been recommended to Manny by E. B. Washburn, then a member of congress from northern Illinois. The case was to be tried before Judge McLean at Cincinnati, in the circuit court of the United States. The counsel for McCormick was Reverdy Johnson. Edwin M. Stanton and George Harding of Philadelphia were associated on the other side with Lincoln. The latter came to Cincinnati a few days before the argument took place and stopped at the house of a friend. "The case was one of great importance pecuniarily," relates a lawyer in Cincinnati, who was a member of the bar at the time, "and in the law questions involved. Reverdy Johnson represented the plaintiff. Mr. Lincoln had prepared himself with the greatest care. His ambition was up to speak in the case and to measure swords with the renowned lawyer from Baltimore. It was understood between his client and himself before his coming that Mr. Harding of Philadelphia was to be associated with him in the case and was to make the 'mechanical argument.'

He Meets Stanton.

"After reaching Cincinnati Mr. Lincoln was a little surprised and annoyed to learn that his client had also associated with him Mr. Edwin M. Stanton of Pittsburg and a lawyer of our own bar, the reason assigned being that the importance of the case required a man of the experience and power of Mr. Stanton to meet Mr. Johnson. The Cincinnati lawyer was appointed for his 'local influence.' These reasons did not remove the slight conveyed in the employment without consultation with him of this additional counsel. He keenly felt it, but acquiesced. The trial of the case came on. The counsel for defense met each morning for consultation.

"On one of these occasions one of the counsel moved that only two of them should speak in the case. This matter was also acquiesced in. It had always been understood that Mr. Harding was to speak to explain the mechanism of the reapers. So this motion excluded either Mr. Lincoln or Mr. Stanton—which? By the custom of the bar, as between counsel of equal standing and in the absence of any action of the client, the original counsel speaks. By this rule Mr. Lincoln had precedence. Mr. Stanton suggested to Mr. Lincoln to make the speech. Mr. Lincoln answered, 'No, you speak.' Mr. Stanton replied, 'I will,' and taking up his hat said he would go and make preparation. Mr. Lincoln acquiesced in this, but was greatly grieved and mortified. He took but little more interest in the case, though remaining until the conclusion of the trial. He seemed to be greatly depressed and gave evidence of that tendency to melancholy which so marked his character. His parting on leaving the city cannot be forgotten. Cordially shaking the hand of his hostess, he said: 'You have made my stay here most agreeable, and I am a thousand times obliged to you, but in reply to your request for me to come again I must say to you I never expect to be in Cincinnati again. I have nothing against the city, but things have so happened here as to make it undesirable for me ever to return.' Lincoln felt that Stanton had not only been very discourteous to him, but had purposely ignored him in the case, and that he had received rather rude, if not unkind, treatment from all hands. Stanton, in his brusque and abrupt way, it is said, described him as a 'long, lank creature from Illinois, wearing a dirty linen duster for a coat, on the back of which the perspiration had splotched wide stains that resembled a map of the continent.' Mr. Lincoln," adds Mr. Dickson, "remained in Cincinnati about a week, moving freely around, yet not 20 men knew him personally or knew he was there. Not a hundred would have known who he was had his name been given to them. He came with the fond hope of making fame in a forensic contest with Reverdy Johnson. He was pushed aside, humiliated and mortified. He attached to the innocent city the displeasure that filled his bosom and shook its dust from his feet."

On his return to Springfield he was somewhat reticent regarding the trial, and, contrary to his custom, communicated to his associates at the bar but few of its incidents. He told me that he had been "roughly handled by that man Stanton;" that he overheard the latter from an adjoining room, while the door was slightly ajar, referring to Lincoln, inquire of another, "Where did that long armed creature come from, and what can he expect to do in this case?" During the trial Lincoln formed a poor opinion of Judge McLean. He characterized him as an "old granny," with considerable vigor of mind, but no perception at all. "If you were to point your finger at him," he put it, "and a darning needle at the same time, he never would know which was the sharpest."

Traveling Deadheads.

Mr. Lincoln had several reasons for not admiring ex-President Tyler, and a mention of him on one occasion brought out an anecdote. "A year or two after Tyler's accession to the presidency," said Mr. Lincoln, "contemplating an excursion in some direction, his son went to order a special train of cars. It so happened that the railroad superintendent was a very strong Whig. On Bob's making known his errand that official promptly informed him that his road did not run special trains for the president. 'What?' said Bob. 'Did you not furnish a special train for the funeral of General Harrison?' 'Yes,' said the superintendent, stroking his whiskers, 'and if you will only bring your father here in that shape you shall have the best train on the road.'"

For Ready Reference.

Lincoln had always on the top of our desk a bundle of papers into which he slipped anything he wished to keep and afterward refer to. It was a receptacle of general information. Some years ago on removing the furniture from the office I took down the bundle and blew from the top the liberal coat of dust that had accumulated thereon. Immediately underneath the string was a slip bearing this indorsement in his hand: "When you can't find it anywhere else, look in this."

THE CHRONICLES OF MARTIN HEWITT

THE CASE OF THE LOST FOREIGNER

By Arthur Morrison.

(Copyright 1895, by the Author.)

I have already said in more than one place that Hewitt's personal relations with the members of the London police force were of a cordial character. In the course of his work it has frequently been Hewitt's hap to learn of matters on which the police were glad of information, and that information was always passed on at once; and so long as no infringement of regulations or damage to public service was involved Hewitt could always rely on a return in kind.

It was with a message of a useful sort that Hewitt one day dropped into Vine Street Police Station and asked for a particular inspector, who was not in. Hewitt sat and wrote a note, and by way of making conversation said to the inspector on duty: "Anything very startling this way to-day?"

"Nothing very startling, perhaps, as yet," the inspector replied, "but one of our chaps picked up rather an odd customer a little while ago. Lunatic of some sort, I should think—in fact, I've sent for the doctor to see him. He's a foreigner—a Frenchman, I believe. He seemed horribly weak and faint, but the oddest thing occurred when one of the men, thinking he might be hungry, brought in some bread. He went into fits of terror at the sight of it, and wouldn't be pacified till they took it away again."

"That was strange."

"Odd, wasn't it? And he was hungry too. They brought him some a little while after, and he didn't funk it a bit. Pitched into it, in fact, like anything, and ate it all with some cold beef. It's the way with some lunatics—never the same five minutes together. He keeps crying like a baby, and saying things we can't understand; as it happens, there's nobody in just now who speaks French."

"I speak French," Hewitt replied; "shall I try him?"

"Certainly, if you will. He's in the men's room below. They've been making him as comfortable as possible by the fire until the doctor comes. He's a long time; I expect he's got a case on."

Hewitt found his way to the large mess room, where three or four policemen, in their shirt sleeves, were curiously regarding a young man of very disordered appearance, who sat on a chair by the fire. He was pale, and exhibited marks of bruises on his face, while over one eye was a scarcely healed cut. His figure was small and slight, his coat was torn, and he sat with a certain indefinite air of shivering suffering. He started and looked round apprehensively as Hewitt entered. Hewitt bowed smilingly, wished him good day, speaking in French, and asked if he spoke the language.

The man looked up with a dull expression, and, after an effort or two, as one who stutters, burst out with "Je la nie!"

"That's strange," Hewitt observed to the men. "I ask him if he speaks French, and he says he denies it—speaking in French."

"He's been saying that very often, sir," one of the men answered, "as well as other things we can't make anything of."

Hewitt placed his hand kindly on the man's shoulder, and asked his name. The reply was for a little while an inarticulate gurgle, presently merging into a meaningless medley of words and syllables; "Qu'est ce qu-il n'a, Leystar Squar—sacre nom—not spik it—quel chemin—sank you ver' mosh—je la nie, je la nie!"

He paused, stared, and then, as though realizing his helplessness, he burst into tears.

"He's been a-cryin' two or three times," said the man who had spoken before. "He was a-cryin' when we found him."

Several more attempts Hewitt made to communicate with the man, but though he seemed to comprehend what was meant, he replied with nothing but meaningless gibber, and finally gave up the attempt, and, leaning against the side of the fireplace, buried his head in the bend of his arm.

Then the doctor arrived and made his examination. While it was in progress Hewitt took aside the policeman who had been speaking before and questioned him further. He had himself found the Frenchman in a dull back street by Golden Square, where the man was standing helpless and trembling, apparently quite bewildered and very weak. He had brought him in, without having been able to learn anything about him. One or two shopkeepers in the street where he was found were asked, but knew nothing of him—indeed, had never seen him before. "But the curiousest thing," the policeman proceeded, "was in this 'ere room when I brought in a loaf to give him a bit of snack, seein' he looked so weak an' hungry. You'd 'a thought we was a-goin' to poison 'im. He fairly screamed at the very sight o' the bread, an' he scrouged hisself up in that corner an' put his hands in front of his face. I couldn't make out what was up at first—didn't trouble to it's bein' the bread he was frightened of, seein' as he looked like a man as 'ud be frightened at anything else afore that. But the nearer I came with it the more he yelled, so I took it away an' left it outside, an' then he calmed down. An' s'elp me, when I cut some bits off that there very loaf and brought 'em in with a bit o' beef, he just went for 'em like one o'clock. He wasn't frightened o' no bread then, you bet. Rum thing how the fancies takes 'em when they're a bit touched, ain't it? All one way one minute; all the other the next."

"Yes, it is. By the way, have you another loaf in the place?"

"Yes, sir; half a dozen, if you like."

"One will be enough. I am going over to speak to the doctor. Wait awhile, until he seems very quiet and fairly comfortable. Then bring a loaf in quietly and put it on the table not far below his elbow. Don't attract his attention to what you are doing."

The doctor stood looking thoughtfully down on the Frenchman, who, for his part, stared gloomily but tranquilly at the fireplace. Hewitt stepped quietly over to the doctor, and, without disturbing the man by the fire, said interrogatively, "Aphasia?"

The doctor tightened his lips, frowned and nodded significantly. "Motor," he murmured just loudly enough for Hewitt to hear, "and there's a general nervous breakdown as well, I should say. By the way, perhaps there's no agraphia. Have you tried him with a pen and paper?"

Pen and paper were brought and set before the man. He was told, slowly and distinctly, that he was among friends, whose only object was to restore him to his proper health. Would he write his name and address and any other information he might care to give about himself on the paper before him?

The Frenchman took the pen and stared at the paper. Then slowly and with much hesitation he traced these marks:

The man paused after the last of these futile characters, and his pen stabbed into the paper with a blot as he dazedly regarded his work. Then, with a groan, he dropped it, and his face sank again into the bend of his arm.

The doctor took the paper and handed it to Hewitt. "Complete agraphia, you see," he said. "He can't write a word. He begins to write 'Monsieur' from sheer habit in beginning letters thus; but the word tails off into a scrawl. Then his attempts become mere scribbles, with just a trace of some familiar word here and there, but quite meaningless, all."

Although he had never before chanced to come across a case of aphasia (happily a rare disease), Hewitt was acquainted with its general nature. He knew that it might arise either from some physical injury to the brain, or from a breakdown consequent on some terrible nervous strain. He knew that in the case of motor aphasia the sufferer, though fully conscious of all that goes on about him, and though quite understanding what is said to him, is entirely powerless to put his own thoughts into spoken words—has lost, in fact, the connection between words and their spoken symbols. Also that in most bad cases agraphia—the loss of ability to write words with any reference to their meaning—is commonly an accompaniment.

"You will have him taken to the infirmary, I suppose?" Hewitt asked.

"Yes," the doctor replied, "I shall go and see about it at once."

The man looked up again as they spoke. The policeman had, in accordance with Hewitt's request, placed a loaf of bread on the table, near him, and now as he looked up he caught sight of it. He started visibly, and paled, but gave no such signs of abject terror as the policeman had previously observed He appeared nervous and uneasy, however, and presently reached stealthily toward the loaf. Hewitt continued to talk to the doctor while closely watching the Frenchman's behavior from the corner of his eye. The loaf is what is called a "plain cottage" of solid and regular shape; the man reached it, and immediately turned it bottom up on the table. Then he sank back in his chair, with a more contented expression, though his gaze was still directed toward the loaf. The policeman grinned silently at this curious manoeuvre.

The doctor left, and Hewitt accompanied him to the door of the room. "He will not be moved just yet, I take it?" Hewitt asked, as they parted.

"It may take an hour or two," the doctor replied. "Are you anxious to keep him here?"

"Not for long, but I think there's a curious inside to the case, and I may perhaps learn something of it by a little watching. But I can't spare very long."

CHAPTER II.

At a sign from Hewitt the loaf was removed. Then Hewitt pulled the small table closer to the Frenchman, and pushed the pen and the sheets of paper toward him. The manoeuvre had its result. The man looked up and down the room vacantly once or twice, and then began to turn the paper over. From that he went to dipping the pen in the inkpot; and presently he was scribbling at random on the loose sheets. Hewitt affected to leave him entirely alone, and seemed to be absorbed in a contemplation of a photograph or a police division brass band hanging on the wall; but he saw every scratch the man made.

At first there was nothing but meaningless scrawls and attempted words. Then rough sketches appeared of a man's head, a chair or whatnot. On the mantelpiece stood a small clock, apparently a sort of humble presentation piece, the body of the clock being set in a horseshoe frame with crossed whips behind it. After a time the Frenchman's eyes fell on this, and he began a rude sketch of it. That he relinquished, and went on with other random sketches and scribblings on the same piece of paper, sketching and scribbling over the sketches in a half mechanical sort of way, as of one who trifles with a pen during a brown study. Beginning at the top left-hand corner of the paper he traveled round it till he arrived at the left-hand bottom corner. Then, dashing his pen hastily across his last sketch, he dropped it, and with a great shudder turned away again, and hid his face by the fireplace.

Hewitt turned at once and seized the papers on the table. He stuffed them all into his coat pocket, with the exception of the last, which the man had been engaged on, and this, a facsimile of which is subjoined, he studied earnestly for several minutes.

Hewitt wished the man good day, and made his way to the inspector.

"Well!" the inspector said, "Not much to be got out of him, is there? The doctor will be sending for him presently."

"I fancy," said Hewitt, "that this may turn out a very important case. Possibly—quite possibly—I have not guessed correctly, and so I won't tell you anything of it till I know a little more. But what I want now is a messenger. Can I send somebody at once in a cab to my friend Butt at his chambers?"

"Certainly; I'll find somebody. Want to write a note?"

Hewitt wrote and dispatched a note which reached me in less than ten minutes Then he asked the inspector: "Have you searched the Frenchman?"

"Oh, yes; we went all over him when we found he couldn't explain himself, to see if we could trace his friends or his address. He didn't seem to mind, but there wasn't a single thing in his pocket—not a single thing, barring a rag of a pocket handkerchief with no marking on it."

"You noticed that somebody had stolen his watch, I suppose?"

"Well, he hadn't got one."

"But he had one of those little vertical buttonholes in his waistcoat, used to fasten a watchguard to, and it was much worn and frayed. So that he must be in the habit of carrying a watch, and it is gone."

"Yes, and everything else, too, eh? Looks like robbery. He's had a knock or two in the face—notice that?"

"I saw the bruises and the cut, of course; and his collar has been broken away with the back button—somebody has taken him by the collar or throat. Was he wearing a hat when he was found?"

"No."

"That would imply that he had only just left a house. What street was he found in?"

"Henry street, a little off Golden Square. Low street, you know."

"Did the constable notice a door open near by?"

The inspector shook his head. "Half the doors in the street are open," he said, "pretty nearly all day."

"Ah, then there's nothing in that. I don't think he lives there; by the bye, I fancy he comes from more in the Seven Dials or Drury Lane direction. Did you notice anything about the man that gave you a clue to his occupation, or, at any rate, to his habits?"

"Can't say I did."

"Well, just take a look at the back of his coat before he goes away—just over the loins. Good day."

As I have said, Hewitt's messenger was quick. I happened to be in, having lately returned from a latish lunch when he arrived with this note:

"My Dear B.: I meant to lunch with you to-day, but have been kept. I expect you are idle this afternoon, and I have a case that will interest you—perhaps be useful to you from a journalistic point of view. If you care to see anything of it, cab away at once to Fitzroy Square, south side, where I'll meet you. I will wait no later than 3.30. Yours. M. H."

I had scarce a quarter of an hour, so I seized my hat and left my chambers at once. As it happened, my cab and Hewitt's burst into Fitzroy from opposite sides almost at the same moment, so that we lost no time.

"Come," said Hewitt, taking my arm and marching me off, "we are going to look for some stabling. Try to feel as though you'd just set up a brougham and had come out to look for a place to put it in. I fear we may have to delude some person with that belief presently."

PIPPETTE'S EMANCIPATION

By Edward Marshall.

CHAPTER II.

(Copyright, 1895, by Bacheller, Johnson & Bacheller.)

It was while she was alone with him, after her parents and his had gone, that he sat smoking his pipe of gloom and bad tobacco, suffering keenly, while she smiled and made a bed with a heart as happy in its sensational triumph over a difficulty which she had created but to overcome, as her fingers were deft.

For half an hour this was most delicious. The hated lover sat and alternately cursed and pleaded, while she, safe in the knowledge of the Alderman and the Mayor and the police and the President and the army and the navy, scorned him, and refused to permit him to even so much as touch her hand. It would have been a little pleasanter if he had fiercely rushed upon her and, seizing her, compelled her to scream for help, and it was a little hard to keep the sorrowful faces of her parents out of her mind; but she made the best of what she had, and enjoyed it all. She was emancipated!

But presently Pietro changed his tone in a way which she had not calculated upon. Majestically, he rose, and the pleading in his face changed to scorn.

"Very well," he declared. "Very well. Let what is be as it is. I go. There are in the sea many good fish of which one fish is but one fish. There are others than you and of them I can catch. Adieu, Pippette! I go to marry the green grocer's lovely daughter, whose eyes are soft as the depths of a well, whose smile is bright as the skies of Naples, and who has long looked upon me out of the corners of her eyes. Adieu! I go!"

Heavens, here was an impossibility come true! While yet in dismayed discomfiture she was trying to contemplate it, Pietro stalked away.

Pippette sat down, limp and nerveless. She thought of that horrid grocer's daughter with disgust. Yet, yes, she had eyes which some might think pretty, and she was always smiling in order to show her white teeth—the bold thing! But Pietro! She had thought him to have more self-respect! He ought to be filled with shame. This was outrageous and incredible.

She had been sitting there five minutes, overwhelmed by this new turn. It was not at all romantic. None of the banker's wife's predictions had included such a contingency as this. And Pietro had looked so handsome as he left the room!

She was aroused from her bitter reflections by his return. Instantly she struggled to regain her lost ground.

"Oh, you have to me come back," she said promptly. "Well, return to your daughter of the green grocer. I for you can find no usefulness in my heart. She will not have you; but go to her."

Pietro's brow was lowering, and his height was masterful. She stopped as he looked at her, for there was a command in his eye which she had never seen before.

"Enough! It is enough," he said slowly. "Keep silence while I speak. The grocer's daughter can wait. I speak, and I wish to be answered and with truth. Attend!"

This, too, was new, but it was interesting and pleasant. There was tragedy in Pietro's tones, and Pippette was willing to accept tragedy in lieu of romance, if only Pietro would keep away from the grocer's daughter.

"I was about to leave this house," Pietro continued impressively, "but paused at the threshold to say good day to neighbors. I was greeted with ridicule and laughter by those who have heard the truth—the truth that you, whom I have loved and was to marry, had cast me from you and called upon an Alderman for protection against me. Their sport cut me like knives, but I said nothing, for it was truth. But then Luigi Rossi—he that lives in the tenement in the rear—spoke up, and with leering laughter declared that he knew the reason why, declared that it was because you loved him, and had recently promised to marry him, that you had cast me from you." Pietro paused, and Pippette rejoiced again. Here was more romance after all. Oh! if Pietro and Luigi would only fight! Would that not be glorious? What greater distinction could come to a maiden than to have two men fight over her. "I did not kill him then," Pietro continued, "because I did not know whether or not he was lying. Now, I ask you if he was lying. If he was he shall die, or I shall die. We both have our stilettos, and they are ever ready. Whichever is the best fighter shall die, and that at once. But if he told the truth, then I shall not fight him. I shall go away and see you never any more. Answer. Did he lie?"

"I SHALL GO AWAY AND SEE YOU NEVER ANY MORE."

Pippette was in her element again. This was most delicious of all. The whole street would talk about her, and tell about her beauty if these two handsome men fought over her. She answered quickly.

"It was not the truth he told. Luigi Rossi is a handsome man, and he is my friend and I like him and may marry him. But I have not promised to."

Pietro's face grew darker. She had added venom to his rage by saying that she liked Luigi, and might marry him. She made it maddening when she added.

"But I would warn you not to fight him. He would cut you into little pieces, and kill you quick!"

That was the last straw. Pietro was not a coward, nor was he a weak man. To have the woman he loved intimate that Luigi Rossi could beat him in a fight was more than he could bear. It was like a scene in a melodrama when he turned and, raising his hand, shouted:

"It is false! It is an insult! You shall see! I go! I go! I shall kill him—dead! And you, I shall never look upon again! Adieu! Adieu!"

With that he turned, with flaming eyes and every muscle quivering with rage. His hand, quick as lightning, had already drawn the stiletto which is ever convenient. Without another glance at her, he rushed through the door, and in an instant she heard him jumping down stairs in great leaps.

Her gratified vanity ended that second. Suddenly she saw the whole thing in its dreadful, real-life aspect. The banker's wife's story book romances were instantly forgotten. She remembered only that she loved Pietro, and that she had sent him into deadly peril. She forgot that she was emancipated. She did not want to be emancipated. Like kinetoscope flashes, pictures gleamed in her mind of Luigi plunging his long, slender dagger into Pietro's heart. Then she saw Pietro kill Luigi, and afterward saw the murderer dragged away to execution. She could see no aspect which did not mean death for Pietro! Death for her Pietro: Her handsome, brave, loving and adorable Pietro! For a moment she crouched, shaking in a chair, with her skirt over her head, swept by abject terror at what her silliness had set afoot.

Then, like lightning, she sprang up and, screaming, "Pietro! Pietro! Stop him! Stop him! Tell him that I, Pippette, am coming!" rushed through the door and down the stairs.

When she reached the bottom she saw people hurrying through the hall, back toward the course. The great tenement was all aroused. A murmur of many excited voices came to her ears, and she almost fainted from fear. She had come too late, she thought, too late! too late!

But, recovering herself, she again sped like the wind to save Pietro. Into the court she dashed, still screaming.

There the sight might well have turned her heart cold. As she entered the two men were just crouching, not six feet separating them, ready to spring upon each other. Glittering knives were in their hands, and she read excitement and horror in the faces of the Italians, who formed a little ring about them. Italians never interfere in an affair of that sort.

It was that ring of spectators that delayed Pippette. She could not force her way through it until the men had, with fierce jumps, like wild beasts, met, and were struggling with murder in their hearts. But at that moment she reached them. Her strength at this crisis was tremendous. How she stopped Luigi's descending dagger with her plump little arm, she does not know now, nor how she turned Pietro's blow aside. She only knows that she did stop the one and turn the other, and that she forced herself between the men and clung to Pietro's brawny, brown neck with loving arms, swearing that she worshiped him, and him alone, and that she had been a wicked, wicked girl.

Two bright-eyed, brown-skinned Italian babies are now, three years later, proof positive that Pippette did not change again. The very next day she and Pietro were married by the same Alderman who had protected her.

So this is the tale of the end as well as the beginning of Pippette's Emancipation. EDWARD MARSHALL.

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the following Ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same.

JAMES T. MACMURRAY, City Clerk.
Plainfield, N. J., June 3, 1895.

A further ordinance to provide for the construction of a system of sewerage.

Whereas, pursuant to the provisions of the act of the Legislature entitled "An act to provide for sewerage and drainage in cities of this State," approved April 7, 1892, and of an ordinance of said city, duly passed pursuant to said act, entitled "An ordinance to provide for the construction of a system of sewerage" approved July 25, 1894, the Common Council hath ascertained and determined and doth hereby ascertain, adjudge and determine to acquire by purchase or condemnation certain land within said city, needed for sewerage purposes, and said Common Council hath deemed it expedient and doth hereby ascertain, adjudge and determine that it is expedient to collect the sewage of said city from sewers constructed under the said act of the Legislature, and to utilize and dispose of the same by its application to land by the method of intermittent downward filtration and broad surface irrigation, and to erect all necessary buildings, works and machinery thereon, and to take and appropriate for said purposes the lands and real estate hereinafter specified, the Common Council having ascertained, adjudged and determined and hereby do ascertain, adjudge and determine that the whole of said lands and real estate is necessary for said purposes, upon making compensation to the owner or owners, as in said act of the Legislature provided, and said Common Council hath deemed it necessary and doth hereby ascertain, adjudge and determine that it is necessary to take and appropriate for such purposes the said lands and real estate in order to effectually construct said system of sewerage pursuant to said act of the Legislature and said ordinance;

And, whereas, the Common Council having duly investigated the premises and considered the same, is of the opinion that the public good requires the construction of said system of sewerage, and particularly the adoption of said plan of sewage disposal, and the taking and appropriation of said lands as authorized by said act of the Legislature, and the Common Council hath so determined, and doth hereby so determine;

The inhabitants of the City of Plainfield by their Common Council do enact as follows:

Sec. 1. That the Common Council doth hereby direct and order that the plan of sewage disposal above specified be and the same is hereby adopted, in connection with the ordinance aforesaid, and that the land hereinafter specified being needed for said sewerage purposes, and the Common Council deeming it necessary to take and appropriate the same for such purposes, be taken and appropriated for the purposes aforesaid, pursuant to the provisions of said act of the Legislature upon making compensation to the owner or owners thereof, as in said act provided, that is to say; the first tract now owned by Letitia S. Penfield, is described as follows, butted and bounded as follows: The first lot lies in Plainfield township (now city) Union county, and begins at a stake near the middle of Greenbrook a little west of the bridge and runs South twenty-six and three-quarter degrees East five chains and sixty-seven links to a stone in the road (Rock avenue); thence South seventy-one and a quarter degrees West two chains and ninety-five links; thence South seventeen degrees East six chains and twenty-four links to a stone, thence North seventy and three quarter degrees East three chains and thirty-six links to a stone in the aforesaid road, thence with said road South sixteen and a half degrees East three chains and seven links to a stone, thence still with said road South twenty-six and a half degrees East thirteen chains and ninety links to the centre of North street (now West Front street), thence with the middle of said North street North fifty seven degrees East six chains and thirty-eight links to a stake, thence North twenty-five degrees West twenty-four chains and eight links to a stake in Greenbrook; thence down said brook the various courses thereof to the place of beginning, containing sixteen acres and eighty-five hundredths of land be the same more or less.

Being the same tract the undivided one-half of which was conveyed to George Smock by deed of Isaac V. Brokaw and wife, dated September 6, 1869, and recorded in Union county Clerk's office in Book 39 of Deeds for said County, on pages 562, etc., and therein described as the first lot and being the property shown in blue on map filed with the City Clerk May 20, 1895, entitled "Map showing land proposed to be taken and appropriated for sewerage purposes, Plainfield, N. J., May, 1895."

The second tract now owned by the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York is described as follows: Beginning at a point in Greenbrook, being the westerly corner of the tract first above described, thence along the line of said property and in Rock avenue South twenty-five degrees thirty minutes East five chains and sixty-seven links to the corner of said first tract; thence South seventy-one degrees ten minutes West two chains and ninety-five links to another corner of said tract; thence South seventeen degrees East six chains and twenty-four links to another corner of said tract; thence North seventy degrees and thirty-seven minutes East three chains and thirty-six links to another corner of said tract, said point being in Rock avenue; thence still along said tract in Rock avenue South sixteen degrees and twenty-seven minutes East three chains and seven links; thence still along said tract in Rock avenue South twenty-five degrees fifty-five minutes East, thirteen chains and ninety links to the centre of West Front street; thence along said centre line of West Front street in a southwesterly direction eight hundred feet more or less to the easterly corner of property owned by —— Milliken; thence along property of said Milliken and others North twenty-five degrees and forty-five minutes West two thousand feet more or less to the middle of Greenbrook; thence in a northeasterly direction along Greenbrook following the various courses of the same eight hundred and fifty feet more or less to the place of beginning. Said second tract being all the property lying northwesterly of West Front street described in the two deeds from Seth B. Ryder, sheriff, and Thomas Forsyth, sheriff, respectively, to the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, one dated October 7, 1881, and recorded in the Union County Clerk's office in Book 151 of Deeds for said county, on pages 362, etc., and the other dated April 14, 1883, and recorded in Union County Clerk's office in Book 163 of Deeds for said county, on pages 345, etc., excepting therefrom a small irregular tract of about two hundred feet frontage on West Front street heretofore sold by said Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York to —— Milliken, and said second tract being also shown colored in red on the map before mentioned filed with the City Clerk May 20, 1895.

ESTABLISHED MAY 10, 1887. PLAINFIELD, N. J., WEDNESDAY, JUNE 5, 1895. TWO CENTS A COPY—$5 A YEAR.

JUNE SCHOOL BUSINESS.

Regular Meeting of the Board of Education.

ROUTINE MATTERS TRANSACTED.

Vertical Penmanship System to Be Extended to All Primary Schools—Irving School Bonds Ordered Paid—Board Grants the Right of Way on East Fifth Street to Street Railway.

The regular June meeting of the Board of Education was held last evening, all the members being present except Mr. Lounsbury. A small batch of bills was presented and ordered paid.

Prof. H. M. Maxson presented specimens of vertical penmanship from the scholars of the Washington school, which the board were very much pleased with. They decided to extend the system to all primary grades.

Clerk Clark read a communication from the Fourth of July celebration committee, asking that the board appoint a committee to act with them. The board regretted their inability to comply with the request on account of the lateness with which it was received, but expressed themselves as heartily in favor of the project.

Collector Johnson, in a communication, reported $471.79 school money received for May.

A communication from the Mutual Life Insurance Company, giving notice that the $6.25 interest was due on the Irving school bonds, was received, and this, together with the principal, $1,000, was ordered paid.

Clerk Clark was authorized to advertise for bids for furnishing coal to the schoools, and the committee on buildings were empowered to look into the matter of changing the size of the grates in the furnaces with the idea of burning smaller coal, as a matter of economy. They were also instructed to have the furnaces put in condition for next year.

The board instructed the present secretary of the board to sign the petition on behalf of the board, giving the street railway the right of way on East Fifth street back of the Bryant School.

Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh communicated to the board that it was not necessary to place fire escapes on the school buildings below the second floor, and according to a law passed in 1892 the matter was left with the governing body of the city. Mr. Lovell offered a resolution thanking Mr. Marsh for the several opinions he has rendered to the board. It was adopted unanimously.

Prof. Maxson stated that William Kiss, the truant and unruly scholar, had been taken before the Chief of Police and reprimanded, and that any further disobedience of the school laws would necessitate his being transferred to the Reform School. The secretary reported that the acceptances of all prize committees had been received.

The board decided to pay for the absence of all teachers during the year which was caused by illness.

The meeting then adjourned.

Soon to Be the Alumni.

The following are the names of the graduates who constitute the '95 class of the High school:

Frances Estelle Bailey, Valentine Laura Chandor, Edith Marion Darby, Helen Augusta Hazens, Mabel Force, Bertha Shotwell Thorne, J. Vanderveer Belknap, Thomas Dezelle Blair, Frederick Coriell, Henry Baldwin Drake, George Augustus Horne, Charles Burdette Morse, Robert Elwood Sebring, Laura Louise Emmons, Clara Augusta Force, Etta Raybert, Edward Osborne Clark, and Isaac Edward Titsworth.

First National Bank Alterations.

Mrs. L. Adams has been notified by the First National Bank officials to vacate the store which she is occupying in their building, by July 1st, at which time the proposed alterations in the bank quarters will probably be commenced. Mrs. Adams is negotiating for the rental of the store next to the City National Bank on the opposite side of the street.

Julia Magruder's New Novel.

Miss Julia Magruder, whose story of "The Princess Sonia," in the Century, is attracting such favorable comment, has given her new novel to The Ladies' Home Journal. It is called "The Violet" and deals with the question of second marriage. C. D. Gibson, the illustrator, is making a series of pictures for the novel.

Getting Ready for Commencement.

The North Plainfield public school has commenced to practice their special music for the commencement exercises. William E. MacClymont will act as musical instructor.

PRETTY CHURCH WEDDING.

The Hebert-Miller Nuptials Celebrated Last Evening.

A pretty church wedding was that in Holy Cross church last evening at seven o'clock, when Miss Kate Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Speir Miller, of Mercer avenue, was married to Frederick Lyddon Hebert, of North Plainfield.

Around the chancel was a handsome display of the choicest flowers, in the centre of which stood several palms.

Long before the hour for the ceremony the church was filled with a large number of both Plainfield and North Plainfield relatives and friends of the contracting parties.

Previous to the appointed hour for the ceremony to be solemnized, H. S. Sammond, organist of the Park Congregational church in Brooklyn, rendered a select programme of music from well known composers. When the bridal party appeared they were preceded by the ushers, who were followed by the maids of honor, Miss May Goodwin, of New York, and Miss Jeanette Bryan, of North Plainfield, and by Miss Blanche Miller, sister of the bride, as bridesmaid. Each carried handsome bouquets of white and pink roses. The bride was accompanied by her father. She was gowned in white satin and wore a veil.

The familiar notes of Mendelssohn's wedding march was rendered in a faultless manner as they entered the church.

When the altar was reached they were met by the groom, and best man, A. W. Cummings, of Brooklyn, and Rev. T. Logan Murphy, who performed the impressive and beautiful service of the Episcopal church in joining the happy couple in the holy bonds of wedlock.

They retired from the church after the ceremony while Lohengrin's wedding march was being played.

After the wedding a reception was given at the home of the bride's parents on Mercer avenue to the relatives and a few friends.

The ushers, all from Brooklyn, were: Harvey Hebert, W. H. Hebert, brothers of the groom, Arthur Tater, Alfred Titterton.

FOR WOMAN SCHOOL SUFFRAGE.

Plainfield's Women Make a Strong Delegation at Trenton.

Trenton, June 4.—A committee of women, consisting of Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, of Plainfield; Rev. Mrs. Antoinette Blackwell, of Elizabeth; Mrs. S. R. Krom and Mrs. D. W. Pond, of Plainfield and Mrs. Alexander Christie and Miss Christie, of Bayonne, appeared before Senators Voorhees and Skirm this morning.

Mrs. Hall, who is a daughter of Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, acted as chairman. Dr. Hussey, of East Orange, also accompanied the ladies. They urged the passage of an amendment to the Constitution allowing women to vote at school elections. They handed in a number of petitions from all parts of the State in favor of the amendment. The petition from Union county was signed by several thousand names.

The Hospital Ambulance.

TheMuhlenberg hospital ambulance, which has been in course of construction for the last two months in New York, is expected to arrive in Plainfield at most any time. The manufacturer promised to deliver it by June 1st, but there has been some delay. It will be kept in Roberts' livery stable on North avenue.

Watchung Avenue Extension.

The Borough Council will meet in regular session Friday evening of this week, when those who desire to be heard in favor of or in opposition to the proposed extension of Watchung avenue will be given a hearing. There has been but little opposition to the project, and in all probability it will eventually be consummated.

Good Treatment Here.

J. Erwin Hilpot, proprietor of the Berkeley hotel at Bound Brook, is today conducting one of the best hotels that is patronized by Jerseymen. Harry A. Kiely is the manager.

Freehill's Trial.

The trial of Fred Freehill, alias John Sloan, the murderer of Officer Jewell at Rahway, and whom Craig A. Marsh, of this city, will defend, commences June 17th.

Sewer Contracts Set Aside.

Through the efforts of Craig A. Marsh, of this city, counsel for the Locust Grove people, the Westfield sewer contracts were set aside in the Supreme Court at Trenton yesterday.

Uncle Sam's Man Here.

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

Board of Directors Hold an Important Meeting.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE LIBRARIAN.

Miss E. L. Adams Makes an Interesting Report for the Year, Which Shows That the Library Is Increasing in Influence—13,292 Volumes on Hand.

The regular meeting of the Board of Directors of the Public Library and reading room was held last night. The meeting was called to order at 8:30 o'clock, President Tyler in the chair. Present Directors, M. W. Tyler, J. B. Dumont, Rowland Cox, J. Evarts Tracy, W. H. Larrabee, and W. M. Stillman, were present. The minutes of the meeting of May 7th were read and approved.

It was moved and carried that the Treasurer's annual statement, and statistics furnished by the librarian, and other matters of the annual report be referred to the president and vice-president to make up the annual report of the library for the year ending May 31, 1895.

It was moved and carried that the report of the treasurer on the Babcock houses be received, and his actions thereto approved.

On motion the matter of the adjustment of the insurance policies was referred to the treasurer with power.

The annual report of the librarian was, on motion, referred to the Library Committee.

Miss Adams, in the opening of her report, speaks of the growth and usefulness which the library is attaining. She mentioned a number of gifts of especial value to the patrons of the library. As an evidence of how well the library was appreciated she said that she was constantly called upon to answer questions from all classes and ages. One of the needs of the library was a more complete set of reference books. A valuable factor in making the library efficient was the coöperation with the schools, and to the students a great deal of assistance was given in preparing essays and debates. During the year there had been 39,848 visitors to the building, as against 35,195 last year. There was some complaint about the ventilation of the reading rooms and particularly in the winter months.

With persons who were anxious to keep posted on current events reference books were in great demand. Forty school teachers had applied for cards.

In the home circulation a large increase was noticeable. The number of books added during the year was 965, against 465 last year. Miss Adams too occasion to thank the Daily Press for the open use of its columns to library matters.

The committee having charge of the matter of providing ways and means for housing books, reported an estimate of A. B. & W. J. Westervelt, of New York, to do the work for $3,450.

The treasurer reported the following bills, which, on motion, were ordered paid:

Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Co.	$ 9.86
Samuel H. Allen	40.80
Miss Adams	50.00
W. H. Williams	15.90
Miss E. E. Davie	30.00

The request of the assistant librarian for a two weeks vacation was, on motion, granted at such time to be most convenient for the library, to be determined by the librarian.

It was moved and carried that the application of the Sisters of Charity for library tickets as teachers in St. Mary's parochial school for the procuring of books for school use in that institution be granted, on their complying with the library rules governing the distribution of teachers' tickets.

A motion was made, seconded and carried that the salary of the librarian for the ensuing year beginning with July 1st, be fixed at $800.

The communication of the librarian as to the "two book system" was, on motion, referred to the library committee.

The librarian's report for the month of May was read and, on motion, ordered received and placed on file.

The librarian's report for year ending May 31st, 1895, was as follows:

Vols. on accession-book May 31st, 1894	12,327
" added by purchase	724
" " gift	194

CAMP HAND READY TO CELEBRATE.

Committee Appointed to Arrange for Invited Guests.

There was a good attendance of members at the meeting of John Hand Camp, No. 28, S. of V., last evening. Reports from the various committees, including the Memorial Day committee, were received and filed.

The subject of the Fourth of July celebration was brought up and discussed freely, the members deciding to go into it actively and join the parade. They also decided to invite camps from nearby towns and cities to participate in the event. H. J. Martin, C. F. Stephens, and Willard Sutton were appointed a committee to arrange for the latter.

The question of the camp celebrating their first anniversary was considered, and William Boe, Cyrus Moore, Fred DeCamp, and H. S. Thatcher were appointed a committee to assist the good and welfare committee in arranging the affair.

Interest in the camp continues to grow, and the members are striving to make Camp 28 the best in the state. All sons of veterans eligible to join should secure application cards from any one of the members and help swell the ranks of this patriotic order.

FIRST BOROUGH ELECTION.

Citizens of Fanwood Will Elect Their Commissioners June 20th.

The election of the Borough Commissioners of Fanwood, made possible by the special election creating a borough government a short time ago, will be held in the club house on South avenue on June 20th. Seven commissioners will be elected, of which two will be for one year, two for two years, and three for three years.

Crop Prospects.

In the weekly New Jersey crop bulletin of the weather service, the following reports from Union county are printed:

PLAINFIELD—All crops are doing fairly well, but grass needs more rain as the hot weather has dried up the ground. Fruit is in good condition and very little injury from recent frost is reported. Rainfall, 1.13 inch; highest temp., 99 degrees. JOHN NEAGLE.

WESTFIELD—Fine growing weather; warm, with sufficient rain and sunshine to force crops forward rapidly; red, white and crimson clover in bloom, also raspberries, blackberries and wild cherries. Heard a belated 17-year locust June 2d. D. C. CRANE.

Bothered by Flower Thieves.

William Palmer Smith, of Belvidere avenue, Netherwood, owns the piece of property, opposite his handsome residence on the same avenue, which he has converted into a pretty park. He has been much annoyed by persons picking the flowers, and otherwise making themselves at home on these private grounds. Lately Mr. Smith has placed several signs in the park, requesting that no flowers or shrubs be picked on those premises.

Where Mr. Leggett Will Move.

Since the sale of the property on the corner of Park avenue and East Front street to the City National Bank, Howard Leggett is contemplating moving his pharmacy, after his lease expires next spring, to the corner store in the Y. M. C. A. building. In fact, if the Watchung avenue extension project is carried out it is quite probable that Mr. Leggett will make this move.

Ex-Gov. Green's Will.

The will of the late ex-Gov. Robert S. Green was offered for probate yesterday before Surrogate Parrot. It is one of the shortest testaments on record and is written in the testator's own hand. The ex-Governor's entire estate is bequeathed to his wife, Mary E. Green, and she is made sole executrix. There is not one special bequest.

Mr. Sebring's Telephone Line.

The neighbors over the mountain at Mt. Bethel are now in close communication with the outside world. A private telephone line runs from that place to the Bound Brook telegraph office. The line is owned by ex-Councilman C. P. Sebring.

Lower Prices at Home.

Doane & Edsall say, "Many people of this city, who have compared our prices on trunks with those of the dealers in New York city, buy at home discovering from the comparison that our prices are much lower."

Massive Floral Production.

Mrs. E. C. Morse, of Chatham street, has a rosebush in her front yard, standing five feet high, which is a marvel of floral production, having at present 424 full blown roses on it, and unfolded roses too numerous to count.

—The marriage of Miss Katheryn Yates to Harry Borden will be a quiet one this evening.

CAN THIS BE POSSIBLE?

Dunellen Men Will Take the Risk of Going on Sewage Beds.

A meeting of the Dunellenites who are opposed to the location of the Plainfield sewage beds on land owned and situated witnin the limits of Plainfield, was held last night.

When a Press representative asked one of the men who has taken an active part in the opposition movement, what was done at the meeting he replied that "it was a barn meeting."

Further questioning elicited a reply that "only routine business was transacted."

However, it was learned that it was finally decided that they would stop reading books and hearing what other people had to say for a while, and investigate the sewage matter personally. To that end P. W. Brakeley, president of the borough, and Alfred E. Nelson, engineer and letter writer, were delegated to go to the Framingham sewage beds and bring home the side which the Plainfield councilmen left on their visit.

MISS PHILBROOK GAINS HER POINT.

Is Taking Her Examination Today With Other Young Law Students.

In the Branch Supreme Court at Trenton yesterday morning James Minturn made a motion to admit Miss Mary Philbrook, of Jersey City, who is well-known in Plainfield, to examination for attorney-at-law. The motion was agreed to and Miss Philbrook is taking her examination with the young lawyers in Chancery Court this afternoon.

Miss Philbrook is nervous about the outcome, but it is not likely that her pluck will fail her now, after her persistant fight to have the barriers to women lawyers removed.

Ambitious Young Students.

The graduating class at Leal's school consists of eleven boys this year. Of them, Henry Talmadge and Henry Hall will enter Harvard next fall; Louis Chase will enter the Sheffield Scientific school, while Carl Walz and Wesley Abbott will enter Yale proper. Lewis Thomas will resume his studies at Princeton and James Middledith will represent Plainfield at Lehigh University. Llewellyn Bull is trying for West Point, while the other three of the class, Fred Dorman, Albert Sampson and George Bull, will enter business.

There is some talk of graduation exercises, but nothing definite has been decided upon as yet.

Medals for the High School Meet.

Four special medals will be offered at the field day of the Plainfield High School Athletic Association, which takes place Saturday afternoon. F. L. C. Martin has given a silver medal for the quarter-mile bicycle race; William H. Rogers, another for the one-mile bicycle race, and the Eldridge Bicycle Company one for the two-mile bicycle race. The Eldridge Bicycle Company has also offered a gold medal to the contestant scoring the most points. Their medals are now on exhibition in their store.

The P. H. S. A. A. will furnish the other prizes—a silver medal for first place and a bronze one for second.

Christian Endeavor Sociable.

The threatening weather kept many from attending a very enjoyable sociable given by the Christian Endeavor society of the First Baptist church in the church parlors last evening. There was no regular programme, but the evening was spent in playing games and in sociability. Light refreshments were served.

The social committee of the society, who were in charge, consisted of Miss Grace Yerkes, chairman, Mrs. George Batchelor, Mrs. W. Budd Vail, Mrs. Charles Conover, John McLaughlin, and Henry J. Brewer.

A Drive to Mizzen Peak.

A party from Plainfield last night paid a visit to Mizzen Peak cottage and enjoyed a dinner such as can be only obtained outside of New York city.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mrs. Thos. Eggers, 139 Florida St., San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result everything else, then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottle at Randolph's drug store. Regular size, 50c and $1.

CHURCH STATISTICS.

Final Volume Sent Out Last Saturday.

COMPILED BY PLAINFIELD MEN.

The Work was Done Under the Careful Direction of Dr. H. K. Carroll, Assisted by Charles E. Buell—The Book is a Complete and Competent Church History of the United States.

The final volume of church statistics of the eleventh census of the United States, of 1890, comprising 812 pages, and embellished with colored maps which show at a glance the location of the people of various religious beliefs, was sent out from the office of the Secretary of the Interior, at Washington on Saturday, June 1, 1895.

The work of gathering and compiling the statistics, and preparing the histories of the 145 demoninations of the United States, which goes to make up this publication, was done under the direction of Dr. H. K. Carroll, as special agent, and was completed June 30th, 1893, since which time the volume has been awaiting the preparation of maps to accompany the tables, and has been in the process of printing. The importance of this publication is second to that of the population statistics, and has received the largest comment in both religious and secular papers.

The attempt had been made by each census during fifty years, to gather and publish the statistics of churches, but this is the first time that a success has been achieved. The tables and histories of the several denominations were first published in bulletin form and submitted to the officials, and representative men of each denomination for careful perusal, and, after receiving the full endorsement of these, as being in every way correct, the final volume, which has just been issued, was made ready for publication. The work is exhaustive in its scope, including all religious bodies in the United States, including the territories, and Alaska, that had a form of organization in 1890.

By having the ecclesiastical endorsement the statistics and histories of the denominations represented is received as authentic and reliable, and being taken just a century after the signing of the Constitution which made us a nation, the growth of the church element during that time is furnished as a basis from which to make computations of future growth. The work of gathering and compiling these statistics occupied three years. The expense of procuring the same being less than one-half of one percent. of the entire cost of the entire eleventh census, and not more than the cost of firing the salutes in the naval parade during the Columbian exposition.

The supervision of the details was entrusted to Charles E. Buell, of this city, of whom Dr. Carroll said, in a report on the work made to the Superintendent of Census:—"Charles E. Buell has been my able and faithful co-laborer, superintending the details with skill and efficiency. His experience in the tenth census has made his services invaluable."

Dr. Carroll proved himself to be the right man in the right place, being skilled in the most essential part, the various matters of church organization, and in church history, and especially competent to correspond with the officials of the churches to bring the results sought, and upon which so much depended. The plan for the schedules, involving the questions to be answered by the officials and representative men of all denominations, and upon which success might depend, is due to Hon. Robert P. Porter, Superintendent, and it proved to be the foundation of the success that was achieved.

Too much praise cannot be given for the faithful and efficient work of the clerks in compiling the statistics after they had been collected. Some idea of their faithfulness can be gained from the fact that several of them gave their services to complete the table after they had been dropped from the pay-roll, so interested were they in the success of the publication with which they had been so identified.

The publication just issued is a lasting tabulation that will be used as a book of reference by students of church matters during long years to come, and is a matter of general interest throughout the land. It is published for gratuitous distribution; but can be obtained only through a request from a member of Congress, or a United States Senator, or to the Secretary of the Interior, excepting requests from libraries and newspapers, which may receive attention without the accompanying solicitation of a Member or Senator.

FIRE IN OIL REGIONS

Great Loss in Pennsylvania Forest Tov. ns.

People Compelled To Flee for Their Lives—Hamlets Entirely Obliterated—Many Oil Wells Burning No Relief Expected Until Rain Falls. Water Shipped in Barrels by Rail.

Bradford, Pa., June 5.—The forest fires which started in Elk county last Saturday and which are raging to-day in several sections were the most destructive in the history of this region of the country. At Russell City the people after becoming exhausted from fighting the flames were forced to flee for their lives. They were obliged to leave everything and run to a clearing two miles distant at Higland Corners.

Fires in Every Direction.

Nothing is left of Russell City. The fire is again burning in the vicinity of the oil works. The rains of last night only partially checked the flames. The Northern Oil company has twenty oil wells and a number of tanks burning at this place. It is impossible to estimate the loss. The woods leading to Clark's mills are a mass of flames on both sides of the road. There is fire in every direction, and all efforts to check its progress seem futile.

Entirely Obliterated.

Coon Run, three miles from Russell City, was entirely obliterated by the fire. The place consisted of 200 buildings, a pump station, school-house and sawmill. A. B. Fowler, the superintendent of the Northern Oil company, says that while he and his men were at work backing fire a stifling breeze came up, increasing the fire, and they ran to the town and aroused the people, telling them to flee for their lives. Men, women and children made a wild race for the railroad track, a distance of five miles. So far as known all escaped.

Many Oil Wells Burning.

The fire at West Kane, which threatened the destruction of that place, is now under control. The damage done was the burning of nine oil well rigs owned by the Griffith estate, one engine house and one dwelling house. The fire reported at Knapp's Creek is still burning and has done a large amount of damage. The fire has spread to Bell's camp, and thirty-five oil wells are now on fire.

Rain the Only Relief.

Kansas Branch, Rixford, Davis City, Summit City, Dallas City, Oil Valley, Limestone State Line, Derrick City and Red Rock were all threatened, and the rain of last night only saved the place. The sky is black with smoke and the mountains are invisible. The heat was intense. The fire at Ormsby is reported raging again this morning. The place is without protection of any kind, and the flames are devouring a large area of standing timber. Sawmills and a number of houses have been consumed.

Water Shipped in Barrels.

Two carloads of empty barrels were shipped to Ormsby yesterday morning to be used to convey water to the oil field, which were threatened. Just before 3 o'clock the fire had reached the oil field at West Branch. The dense smoke indicated that several wells and tanks were on fire.

$1 an Hour for Labor.

Olean, N. Y., June 5.—One hundred and fifty men left her to fight the forest fires at the Four-Mile and Knapps creek districts, between here and Bradford, and owners were paying one dollar an hour for men to fight the fires.

New Jersey Foresters Elect Officers.

Newark, N. J., June 5.—The New Jersey high court of the Independent Order of Foresters in annual session in this city last night elected W. T. Bingham, Elizabeth, past chief ranger; Conrad Bennett, Trenton, high chief ranger; James C. Calvert, Elizabeth, high secretary, and A. C. Wenzel, Newark, high treasurer. W. T. Bingham, B. A. Banker and Rev. G. A. Buckle of Elizabeth are the representatives to the supreme court, London, Eng.

Wind Storm in Ohio.

Columbus, O., June 5.—The storm which struck this city yesterday afternoon was, in its suddeness and severity, the worst ever experienced here. It came like a shock and a great deal of damage was done to windows and goods on exhibition in store fronts. No rain fell, but clouds of dust made a darkness equal to that of twilight.

Sickness Among French Troops.

Paris, June 5.—General Duchesne, commander of the French forces in Madagascar, has sent from Tamatave a cable dispatch saying that there is much sickness among the men forming the garrison at that town and that fresh troops are urgently needed to take the place of those who are disabled.

Has New Haven Got Control?

New York, June 5.—There is a rumor in Wall street to-day that the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad has secured control, or friends of the road has secured control, of the New York & New England.

Snow in Cripple Creek.

Cripple Creek, Col., June 5. — It snowed nearly all yesterday in the Cripple Creek district, but last night it cleared, although the sidewalks and streets are covered with snow.

South Bridge, Mass., June 5.—The Hamilton Woolen company has advanced wages 10 per cent.

VIOLENCE AT OLNEYVILLE.

First Serious Trouble in Connection with the Big Strike.

Providence, R. I., June 5.—The first outbreak of violence in connection with the big strike at Olneyville developed yesterday. There were three assaults committed on operatives who offended strikers and their sympathizers by going to work, and there was a conflict between the strikers and police at the Atlantic mills when the establishment was being closed at the end of the day. A girl named Logan while entering a rear gate was assaulted, slapped and kicked by strikers. Joseph Goodness, a weaver in the Riverside mills was assaulted by three fellows who punched him, knocked him down and kicked him. Mrs. Maggie Barton, a Riverside mill weaver, was attacked by men and women with umbrellas and parasols when going home at the end of the day and had to be assisted to her home by a policeman.

Clash with the Police.

The strikers and their sympathizers to the number of over 4,000 assembled in a great crowd around the Atlantic mill gates immediately after 6 o'clock and waited half an hour for the help to emerge from the mills. A squad of police endeavored to keep the street in front of the mill open. When the workers appeared some of the crowd began too hoot and yell "scab." The police had been ordered by the mayor to capture the first one who raised this cry and John E. Houlihan was arrested. The crowd tried to block the way to the station but five mounted policemen charged the mob and the prisoner was lodged in a cell. There was no clubbing done by the police nor any further violence on the part of the strikers.

MILKMAN BLACKHAM'S ARREST

Accused of Causing the Typhoid Fever Epidemic at Stamford.

Stamford, Conn., June 5.—The typhoid fever scare which attracted the attention of the public a month or more since, has taken on a sensational phase in the arrest of Henry J. Blackham, the muchberated milkman. A great deal of feeling has been expressed against Blackham since the local and state boards of health announced that they had traced the origin of the epidemic back to his dairy, where his milk cans had been washed in water drawn from an infected well. The pulpit, too, took the matter up, and one minister suggested that Blackham should be tarred and feathered and then ridden out of town on a rail. There was talk of criminal proceedings, but no move was made until last evening when a warrant was served on Blackham charging him with manslaughter in causing the death of one John F. Kink, a victim of the fever epidemic. During the epidemic there were four hundred cases of fever and twenty-one persons died from it.

MRS. POPE CONVICTED.

Sentenced to Life Imprisonment for the Murder of Her Husband.

Detroit, June 5.—Mrs. Nellie Pope was convicted yesterday afternoon of complicity in the murder of her husband and was sentenced to state prison for life. As sentence was passed Mrs. Pope bowed her head and sobbed. Little Bernice, her daughter, sprang into her mother's arms, and throwing her arms around her mother's neck, cried piteously. Mrs. Pope kissed the child time and time again, all the while hugging her closely to her breast. The verdict and sentence is received with general approval. Mrs. Pope kissed her sister and Bernice good-bye outside the jail doors. She was taken to Jackson in the afternoon, but later will be returned to the house of correction to serve out her sentence. Mrs. Pope had to spend a couple of hours in jail before the train which was to convey her to Jackson was due and she improved the time by getting helplessly drunk.

ITALIAN DEPUTY SHOT.

The Attempt at Assassination Supposed To Be Work of Anarchists.

Rome, June 5.—Signor Ferrare, who was elected to the chamber of deputies in the recent elections, was shot and mortally wounded by unknown persons at Rimini Monday evening. Deputy Ferrare was accosted on a street by a group of unknown men, who first insulted him and finally fired several shots at him with a revolver. When Ferrare fell the men ran away. The attempted assassination was undoubtedly the work of anarchists.

IN OLD TENNENT CHURCH

Interesting Exercises of Jersey Synod Pilgrims.

Many Relics of Historic Presbyterianism Displayed—The Conch Shell Used by Rev. Dr. Brainard To Call His Indian Congregation to Worship—A Table Used by Him in 1609.

Asbury Park, N. J., June 5.—The exercises yesterday connected with the Boyd-Tennent pilgrimage of the New Jersey synod were very interesting. A special train conveyed the pilgrims to Old Tennent in the afternoon. A procession was formed and the guests marched to the old church, historic not only in Presbyterianism but on account of its connection with revolutionary times.

Interesting Services.

Rev. Frederick Brace, of Blackwood, N. J., moderator of the New Jersey synod, presided. Probably the most interesting part of the service was the greeting by Rev. Frank R. Symmes, the pastor of Old Tennant church. After welcoming the pilgrims he exhibited many relics of historic Presbyterianism. They included a conch shell which was used by Rev. David Brainard, one of the early missionaries of Tennent church, to call his Indian congregation to worship. The conch shell fell into the hands of a Wisconsin woman, who presented it to the Presbyterian Historical society. Mr. Symmes gave an exhibition of the manner in which the shell was used.

A Table Used in 1609.

There was also exhibited the original deed and charter of the church and the old table used by Rev. David Brainard to administer communion to his Indian congregation in 1609. Under the floor, near the altar, Rev. Wm. Tennent, jr., lies buried. Mr. Symmes pointed out to his audience blood stains in one of the pews where one of the wounded soldiers of the battle of Monmouth was placed.

The Pioneer Guard.

Rev. Howard Duffield, D. D., of New York, made an able address on the "Pioneer Guard of New Jersey Presbyterianism." The pioneer guard were the eleven men who studied at Log college, Hartsville, Pa., the original institution of learning connected with the Presbyterian church of this country. The college was founded by Rev. Wm. Tennent, sr., while on a preaching circuit.

Life of Francis Makemie.

"The Presbyterian Historical Society," was the subject of an address by Rev. Henry Sharpe, D. D., of Philadelphia. Dr. Sharpe gave a brief history of the life of Francis Makemie, who is often called the father of the Presbyterian church in America. While moderator, Mr. Makemie, John Hampton and Jedediah Andrews met at the old Scots church near Freehold and ordained John Boyd as the pastor.

MORE COLIMA SURVIVORS.

Five Persons Picked Up Exhausted on the Beach.

San Francisco, June 5.—An Examiner dispatch from the City of Mexico says that five more persons from the foundered steamer Colima have been added to the list of the saved. They are Jose Pequerros of Acapulco, A. S. Maria, J. J. Nonnins, and two others whose names have not yet been obtained. The two whose names are unknown are stopping with ex-consul McClellan at St. Vincent.

Picked Up Nearly Dead.

It is not known wheather they are passengers or sailors. The five were picked up nearly dead by one of the rescuing crews on the beach, and the three whose names are known are at Pueblita on their way to Colima. The sailors from the rescuing steamer Masatlan, who were capsized in the sea, all escaped. The hurricanes in the Pacific which wrecked the Colima have continued to rage, and have done much damage to shipping within their range.

TURKEY WILL NOT YIELD

Refuses Reforms Suggested by the Powers.

The Envoys Meet and Decide To Refer the Whole Matter to Their Respective Governments — Situation Very Serious—Is Turkey's Action Backed by Some Power?

Constantinople, June 5.—The reply of the Turkish government to the notes of the representatives of Great Britain, France and Russia, in regard to the proposed reforms in Armenia, has been delivered to the envoys. The answer is not satisfactory. The Turkish government does not agree to the principle of the control of the proposed reforms by the powers. After receiving the reply, the envoys of the three powers held a meeting at which they decided to refer the whole matter to their respective governments.

The Position Is Serious.

As last week the British embassy informed the porte that Great Britain had resolved not to accept any modifications of the propositions affecting reforms in Armenia, and the representatives of the other powers interested have made the same declaration to the porte the position has become extremely serious.

Has Turkey Backing?

The reply of the Turkish government causes surprise, and it is thought that such an answer is not given without encouragment from some European power. But the presence of the British Mediterranean squadron, consisting of seventeen ships, at Beirut points to an agreement between Great Britain, France and Russia to force Turkey to comply with the demands of the powers.

LIFE CONVICT PARDONED.

Charles Giblin Released from Sing Sing by Gov. Morton.

Albany, June 5.—Governor Morton has pardoned Charles Giblin, who is serving a life sentence in Sing Sing prison for the killing of a baker's wife in New York city, it being claimed at that time that Giblin was trying to pass counterfeit money. In November, 1889, Giblin's sentence of death was commuted to imprisonment. For more than two years past he has been confined to the hospital suffering from a complication of diseases, and the physician now reports that he cannot possibly survive more than a few weeks. His wife has died recently, and a very urgent appeal was made that out of consideration for his children, he be permitted to die outside the prison.

AFTER THIRTY YEARS.

Richard Allen Receives a Check for 35 Cents Due Him from Uncle Sam.

Albany, June 5.—After more than thirty years Richard W. Allen, of this city, has effected a settlement with the United States navy department. During the late civil war he served in the navy as landaman, and the final settlement disclosed the fact that Uncle Sam was indebted to him to the amount of 35 cents, which he received yesterday by check from the navy pay office at Washington. Mr. Allen says that the government will never be called upon to pay the 35 cents, as he intends to frame the check and keep it as a memento. On the left end is a fine portrait of the late Admiral Farragut, under whom he served.

MULCTED FOR $25,000.

Paine Secures a Verdict in His Libel Suit Against the New York World.

New York, June 5.—One of the largest verdicts ever rendered against a newspaper in a libel suit in this county was found yesterday in the supreme court by a jury before Judge Ingraham against the Press Publishing company (World) for $25,000 damages. The action was brought by William L. Paine to recover $50,000 damages. Mr. Paine is a lawyer and for twenty years prior to the time that he came to this city he had resided in Wilkesbarre, Pa., where he practised his profession. The World published from its correspondent at Wilkesbarre a story to the effect that Mr. Paine had eloped from that city with the wife of a friend, Mrs. Maggie Lee, and had come to this city and married her, and, after squandering her money, had deserted her.

Was No Elopement.

The fact was that Mr. Paine was married to Mrs. Lee. There was no elopement whatever. She obtained a divorce from her husband about four months prior to the time of her marriage to Mr. Paine. They came to this city and took up their residence here and have been living here peaceably ever since. They have four children, two by this marriage and two being Mrs. Paine's children by her former marriage.

THE EASTERN SITUATION.

Transfer of the Island of Formosa. Mr. Foster Coming Home.

Shanghai, June 5.—Li Ching Pang, son of Viceroy Li Hung Chang, and John W. Foster, who have been to the island of Formosa for the purpose of formally transferring it to the Japanese, according to the terms of the treaty of Shimonoseki, have returned here. Mr. Foster, in an interview after his return, stated that Admiral Viscount Kabayma, formerly chief of the Japanese navy department, has been appointed governor of Formosa. The formal transfer of the island and the Chinese property there was effected at Kee Lung on June 2, when the necessary documents were exchanged. Mr. Foster will return to the United States by the first steamer.

Reassuring Outlook.

St. Petersburg, June 5.—Very favorable advices have been received here regarding the prospects of a definite settlement of the questions remaining in dispute between the powers and Japan.

SATOLLI'S PLAIN WORDS.

Tells Foreign Residents That They Should Learn Our Tongue.

New York, June 5.—A morning paper to-day says: A number of Catholics in Connecticut appealed to the bishop of Hartford to send them a priest of their own nationality. He declined on the ground that the assistant priest in the parish was already of their race, that the rector and also the teachers in the schools spoke their language. They appealed to the papal delegate. He replied in the same fashion, and said among other things that they could not expect more to be done for them in a country which did not use their language; and that as they voluntarily entered the United States with the intention of becoming citizens, it was for the best interest of all to learn the national language as soon as possible and conform to the national customs; keeping up their native tongue out of reverence of their native land, but not out of contempt for their adopted country, nor with any desire to annoy their spiritual and civil superiors.

INNOCENT MEN IN JAIL.

Shannon and Henry Were Convicted of Crimes Confessed by Others.

New York, June 5.—It has just been discovered that Patrick Shannon and John Henry, who were sentenced in last August by Judge Fitzgerald in the court of general sessions to a year's imprisonment for burglary, are innocent. William Dunn and John Williams have confessed to committing the crime for which Shannon and Henry were sentenced.

JERSEY REFORM BILLS

Measures Introduced in the Senate at Trenton.

Recommendations Made by the Special Investigating Committee. Changes Proposed in the Advertising and Printing Laws—Efforts To Repeal Seventeen Different Acts

Trenton, N. J., June 5.—The house and senate consumed the greater part of the day in conferences over the policy to be pursued during the session. There was a diversity of opinion touching the wisdom of passing bills before the senate investigating committee gets through with its work. It was finally agreed to consider the bills recommended by the committee, but how many, if any, will pass cannot be foretold. As the house must wait upon the action of the senate, it adjourned till to-morrow morning.

To Repeal Printing Acts.

The senate sat last night and Senator Voorhees, in behalf of the investigating committee, introduced the following bills, all of which were advanced to a third reading without reference: To repeal all existing acts relative to the printing, advertising and distribution of the laws, proceedings of the legislature and public documents. There are seventeen different acts repealed by this bill and the repealer takes effect Oct. 1, 1895.

To the Lowest Bidder.

One repealer provides that advertisements shall be made for bids during September to print the laws. Specifications are to be prepared under direction of the governor, comptroller and treasurer, who shall award the contract to the lowest responsible bidder.

Appropriation Bill.

No. 837-A. The state appropriation bill, appropriates to every department of the state the amount of moneys for salaries and all other expenses. No. 838—Provides that the comptroller shall advertise each September for proposals to print senate and house journal, minutes of joint meeting and executive sessions and all current printing of the legislature and the contract to be awarded to the lowest responsible bidder. All printing to be done in the state.

Saves $250,000 a Year.

The appropriation bill mentioned above will, it is claimed, save the state, principally by reducing the printing bills, about $250,000 per year. The senate met again this morning at 10 o'clock and began final action on some of the bills.

CORRUPTION IS CHARGED.

Main Points of the Report of the Senate Investigation Committee.

Trenton, N. J., June 5.—The report of the select committee which has been inquiring into the management of the various state departments was laid before the senate soon after it assembled yesterday. The report is a voluminous document of some 10,000 words. The charges of extravagances in the state house expenses is first alluded to, and the committee say:

Systematic Swindling.

In the furnishing of coal, lumber and other supplies for the state house, there was deliberate systematic swindling. Quantities and prices were falsely raised, goods being billed to the state and paid for that were never furnished; large percentages were added to bills, sometimes undoubtedly for the benefit of state officers, at other times, possibly, for the benefit of the dealer.

Great Waste.

The charge of fraud brought out in the rebuilding of the assembly chamber and in buying the heating apparatus therefor is stated, and the removal of bids, correspondence and other documents from the state house is declared to be an unprecedented act. On this subject the committee conclude: We think that from 1889 to 1894 there was great waste and, in not a few cases, corruption and bribery of officials in the reconstruction, furnishing and supplying of the state house.

Expenses and Printing.

The committee next review the results of their inquiries into the expenditure of the state. They can see no reason for the increase in the legislative expenses from $58,578 in 1875 to $125,249 in 1893. The present system of printing the laws in newspapers and the manner of printing of public documents and stationary is severely criticised, and the committee say they find no parallel for the reckless waste in any other state, and, notwithstanding the great cost, the laws are not published promptly.

Changes Recommended.

The committee recommends a reduction in the fees of the clerks of the court of chancery and supreme court, and also that the secretary of state be required by law to turn over the fees of his office to the state treasurer and make his returns at the end of each term. They recommend that the bureau of statistics and labor be abolished. The consolidation into one board of the state board of taxation and state board of assessors is recommended. They further recommend the abolition of the salaries of the board of riparian commissioners and the granting of a greatly reduced appropriation for engineering and other expenses. The committee gives the board of pardons a severe raking.

Attorney-General Olney is likely to succeed the late Mr. Gresham as Secretary of State.

Elizabeth is rejoicing over the running of the first trolley car on her streets last Monday.

The street railway extension petition came in with the cold wave. It is to be hoped that it will not go out with it.

Gov. Werts yesterday vetoed the bill, House 476, prohibiting justices of the peace from holding court in a lawyer's office, on the ground that the bill is entirely too sweeping in its provisions.

Chancellor McGill yesterday appointed Judge Alfred Reed of the Supreme Court as Vice Chancellor to succeed the late ex-Governor Green. This creates a vacancy in the Supreme Court, which will have to be filled by the Governor, with the approval of the Senate.

There should be but little, if any, opposition from the residents of North Plainfield to the Watchung avenue extension project which will be considered by the Borough Council at their meeting on Friday evening. With this thoroughfare opened up where it is proposed, a vast improvement will have been gained on both sides of the brook.

In many portions of Middlesex county the township authorities are having proper sign boards placed along the country roads designating the points to which they lead. The man who proposed this move should have a medal. Not a medal, however, on account of his originality, because the system was in vogue when the present generation of public officials were wearing knee pants, but because he has a realization of how perplexing it is for a stranger to pick his way at a point where a highway diverges into several directions.

Hahne & Co., proprietors of the big Newark department store on Broad street, have written a letter to the Newark Evening News offering to close their establishment at noon on Saturdays during July and August, provided the Newark manufacturing firms pay off their employes each Friday. On Fridays Hahne & Co. will keep open until nine o'clock, so that the city's shoppers may have ample time to buy their supplies during the cool part of the day. By doing this the thousand employes of Hahne & Co., will secure nine half holidays at a time of the year when rest and recreation are best enjoyed and most needed. When such a large concern as Hahne & Co., takes the initiative it ought to follow that other Newark houses follow suit, and by so doing increase the benefit to a class of people who, although well paid and generally in comfortable circumstances, are still deprived of many of the pleasures which make life bearable during the heated term. Hahne & Co., are to be commended for their generous action.

—A business meeting of the W.T.A. S. will be held in Reform Hall tomorrow afternoon.

CHURCH CHIMES.

The annual meeting of the First Church of Christ will be held one week from tonight.

The official board of the Methodist church meet this evening to transact their regular business.

Mrs. Jenkins, an evangelist of considerable note, of Bridgeport, delivered an interesting and profitable address before the Christian Alliance meeting last night.

The Ladies Aid Society of Grace M. E. church are making big preparations to entertain and serve a great many guests at their strawberry and ice-cream festival tomorrow and Friday nights.

The Young Ladies Missionary Band, composed of members from both the First and Crescent Avenue Presbyterian churches, held their last meeting of the season yesterday afternoon at four o'clock in the chapel of the First Presbyterian church. The president, Miss Tracy, presided. The service was a devotional one and fittingly closed the winter and early summer work.

THE SECRET ORDERS.

The Independent Fife and Drum corps had a business meeting and rehearsal last night.

The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children will hold their annual meeting, June 10.

The slides belonging to the Plainfield Camera club returned from the circuit yesterday and were exhibited at the meeting last evening. It was decided by the members to give a complimentary dinner in the near future.

SUMMER EXCURSION BOOK.

The Most Complete Publication of Its Kind.

The passenger department of the Pennsylvania railroad company will, on June 1st, publish its annual summer excursion route book. This work, which is compiled with the utmost care and exactness, is designed to provide the public with short descriptive notes of the principal summer resorts of eastern America, with the routes for reaching them and the rates of fare. There are over four hundred resorts in the book, to which rates are quoted, and over fifteen hundred different ways of reaching them, or combinations of routes are set out in detail. The book is the most complete and comprehensive handbook of summer travel ever offered to the public.

Its 210 pages are enclosed in a handsome and striking cover, in colors. Several maps, presenting the exact routes over which tickets are sold, are bound in the book. It is also profusely illustrated with fine half-tone cuts of scenery along the lines of the Pennsylvania railroad and elsewhere.

Any doubt as to where the summer should be passed will be dispelled after a careful examination of the contents of this publication.

On and after June 1st may be procured at any Pennsylvania railroad ticket office at the nominal price of ten cents, or, upon application to the general office, Broad Street station, Philadelphia, by mail for twenty cents.

—Assistant-Chief Martin and sisters vacated their old homestead on West Second street, and moved into their new home on Westervelt avenue today.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destored forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflammed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh, that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

A SUDDEN DEATH.

Demise of James Conneely a Shock to His Many Friends.

The sudden death of James Conneely, at his home on Madison avenue, yesterday afternoon, was a severe shock to his many friends. He had been apparently in good health, excepting a slight trouble with his heart, and yesterday he remained at home. Dr. Fritts called in the morning and told Mrs. Conneely that there was nothing serious about the indisposition of her husband. He was called later but was not at home.

In the early part of the afternoon Mr. Conneely sent one of his sons to the First National Bank to make a deposit. As he was coming down the bank steps he was met by Walter Hetfield, Jr., who told him his father was dead.

Dr. Manning, who lives near Mr. Conneely's home, was sent for, but life had left the body when he arrived.

A widow and five children, three girls and two boys, survive him.

The funeral services will be held Friday morning at St. Mary's church.

Mr. Conneely came to this country from Ireland in 1864, and immediately took up his residence in Plainfield, where he worked for a number of years for the late John Taylor Johnston. Fifteen years ago he engaged in the liquor business, which was his occupation until death ensued.

Mr. Conneely was a member of the Exempt Firemen, and Catholic Benevolent Legion. At one time he was an active member of No. 2 Engine Company.

AN EVENING OF MUSIC.

Pleasant Event at the Home of Mrs. F. T. Ketcham.

From the South.

Rev. E. N. McDaniels, of Charleston, S. C., is at 638 West Third street, trying to raise money for an industrial school to be located at Summerville, S. C. Mr. McDaniels says that in rural districts education is neglected, and that missionary work is as much needed in South Carolina as in foreign lands.

Death of Mrs. Slocum.

The many friends of Miss Jane M. Slocum in this city will be pained to hear of the death of her mother, Phebe Palmer Slocum, in Watertown, N. Y. Mrs. Slocum was a life-long member of the Society of Friends, in which she held the honored position of Elder.

Payed Up and Released.

Bernard Tracey, who has been serving a sentence of six weeks in the county jail, for non-payment of taxes, was released yesterday.

Charles Dey, the celebrated inventor, has purchased a Cleveland Swell Special from the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company.

Our Country's Wealth.

The computation of the exact wealth of a country is surrounded with great difficulties. Statician Gannett, however, concludes that in 1880 the wealth of the United States was $43,642,000,000, or an average of $870 to each inhabitant; that it was about $62,600,000,000 in 1890, or about $1,000 to each inhabitant, and that at both dates it was greater than the wealth of any other nation.

It may be interesting to add that he puts the wealth in 1850 at $7,136,000,000; in 1860 at $16,160,000,000, and in 1870 at $30,069,000,000, with per capita wealth at $308, $514 and $780 respectively, thus showing steady and great gains up to this time. Our population did not quite treble in forty years, but our wealth, in this computation, increased nearly ninefold. Enormous has been the increase in the value of land.

Who hold all this wealth? Mr. Gannet finds that 5 per cent. of it is owned by millionaires; 27 per cent. by people worth from $100,000 to $1,000,000 each; 25 per cent. by those worth from $10,000 to $100,000; 37 per cent., the largest percentage, by those worth from $1,000 to $10,000 each, and 6 per cent. by those owning less than $1,000 each.

Ethics of Good Clothes.

The business woman cannot afford to disregard the conventionalities of dress. She who is wisest and most far seeing follows in the wake of present day fashions, avoiding exaggeration or absurdities so far and so long as possible, but even adopting them when she finds herself forced to do so or remain conspicuous among women. Men have small patience with the woman who departs from conventional dress standards, nor have they much admiration for that other woman who holds all matters of dress in contempt and regards her clothes as a question of covering only. The woman whose dress is neat, stylish, becoming and suitable to the time and place is the woman with whom they like best to deal. They do not want diamond earrings to flash in their eyes when dictating to their stenographer, but they resent it as almost an affront to themselves if her dress is antiquated in pattern, ill fitting and unbecoming. True, they have not deep objections to dress reform so long as it is cleverly concealed. They do not object to an uncorseted figure when the carriage is such that the lack of corsets cannot be detected; but they are very apt to make remarks about the poor woman who throws away her stays and does not learn to use her backbone. Good clothes may not be an essential to success, but they are more or less of an index of ourselves, and it is only the women who are sure of their position in every way who can afford to let the index be misleading. Business women who are depending upon their own exertions for a comfortable livelihood dare not do so.

While at Peekskill, N. Y., Mr. J. A. Scriven, a prominent manufacturer of New York City, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Such good results were obtained from its use that he sent back to the druggist from whom he had obtained it for two more bottles of the same remedy. When you have a cough or cold give this preparation a trial and like Mr. Scriven you will want it when again in need of such a medicine. It is a remedy of great worth and merit. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

Shiloh's Cure, the great cough and croup cough, is in great demand. Pocket size contains 25 doses, only 25c. Children love it. Sold by all druggists.

Old People.

Old people who require medicine to regulate the bowels and kidneys will find the true remedy in Electric Bitters. This medicine does not stimulate and contains no whiskey nor other intoxicant, but acts as a tonic and alterative. It acts mildly on the stomach and bowels, adding strength and giving tone to the organs, thereby aiding nature in the performance of the functions. Electric Bitters is an excellent appetizer and aids digestion. Old people find it just exactly what they need. Price 50c a bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

I have two little grandchildren who are teething this hot summer weather and are troubled with bowel complaint. I give them Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and it acts like a charm. I earnestly recommend it for children with bowel troubles. I was myself taken with a severe attack of bloody flux, with cramps and pains in my stomach, one-third of a bottle of this remedy cured me. Within twenty-four hours I was out of bed and doing my housework. Mrs. W. L. Dunagan, Bonaqua, Hickman Co., Tenn. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves., T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

While in Topeka last March, E. T. Barber, a prominent newspaper man of La Cygne, Kansas, was taken with cholera morbus very severely. The night clerk at the hotel where he was stopping happened to have a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and gave him three doses which relieved him and he thinks saved his life. Every family should keep this remedy in their home at all times. No one can tell how soon it may be needed. It costs but a trifle and may be the means of saving much suffering and perhaps the life of some member of the family. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

Sometime ago I was troubled with an attack of rheumatism. I used Chamberlain's Pain Balm and was completely cured. I have since advised many of my friends and customers to try the remedy and all speak highly of it. Simon Goldbaum, San Luis Rey, Cal. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

SKETCHES OF LINCOLN.

Incidents of His Home and Office Life.

RIPPLES ON THE DOMESTIC SEA.

Sunday In the Office With the Boys—The Servant Question—Sympathy For Mrs. Lincoln—A Badly Matched Pair—Mary Owens' Opinion.

[From "The Life of Lincoln" by William H. Herndon and Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1888, by Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1892, by D. Appleton & Co.]

XIX.

A knowledge of Lincoln's personal views and actions, a glimpse through the doorway of his home and a more thorough acquaintance with his marked and strong points as they developed will aid us greatly in forming our general estimate of the man. When Mr. Lincoln entered the domain of investigation, he was a severe and persistent thinker and had wonderful endurance; hence he was abstracted and for that reason at times was somewhat unsocial, reticent and uncommunicative. After his marriage it cannot be said that he liked the society of ladies—in fact, it was just what he did not like, though one of his biographers says otherwise. Lincoln had none of the tender ways that please a woman, and he could not, it seemed, by any positive act of his own, make her happy. If his wife was happy, she was naturally happy or made herself so in spite of countless drawbacks. He was, however, a good husband in his own peculiar way, and in his own way only.

Conjugal Infelicity.

If exhausted from severe and long continued thought, he had to touch the earth again to renew his strength. When this weariness set in, he would stop thought and get down and play with a little dog or kitten to recover, and when the recovery came he would push it aside to play with its own tail. He treated men and women in much the same way. For fashionable society he had a marked dislike, although he appreciated its value in promoting the welfare of a man ambitious to succeed in politics.

If he was invited out to dine or to mingle in some social gathering and came in contact with the ladies, he treated them with becoming politeness, but the consciousness of his shortcomings as a society man rendered him unusually diffident, and at the very first opportunity he would have the men separated from their ladies and crowded close around him in one corner of the parlor, listening to one of his characteristic stories. That a lady as proud and as ambitious to exercise the rights of supremacy in society as Mary Todd should repent of her marriage to the man I have just described surely need occasion no surprise in the mind of any one. Both she and the man whose hand she accepted acted alone the lines of human conduct, and both reaped the bitter harvest of conjugal infelicity. In dealing with Mr. Lincoln's home life perhaps I am revealing an element of his character that has heretofore been kept from the world, but in doing so I feel sure I am treading on no person's toes, for all the actors in this domestic drama are dead, and the world seems ready to hear the facts. As his married life, in the opinion of all his friends, exerted a peculiar influence over Mr. Lincoln's political career, there can be no impropriety, I apprehend, in throwing the light on it now. However cold and abstracted her husband may have appeared to others, however impressive, when aroused, may have seemed his indignation in public, he never gave vent to his feelings at home. He always meekly accepted as final the authority of his wife in all matters of domestic concern. This may explain somewhat the statement of Judge Davis that, "as a general rule, when all the lawyers of a Saturday evening would go home and see their families and friends, Lincoln would find some excuse and refuse to go. We said nothing, but it seemed to us all he was not domestically happy." He exercised no government of any kind over his household. His children did much as they pleased. Many of their antics he approved, and he restrained them in nothing. He never reproved them or gave them a fatherly frown. He was the most indulgent parent I have ever known.

Sunday at the Office.

He was in the habit, when at home on Sunday, of bringing his two boys, Willie and Thomas—or "Tad"—down to the office while his wife attended church. He seldom accompanied her there. The boys were absolutely unrestrained in their amusement. If they pulled down all the books from the shelves, bent the points of all the pens, overturned inkstands, scattered law papers over the floor or threw the pencils into the spittoon, it never disturbed the serenity of their father's good nature. Frequently absorbed in thought, he never observed their mischievous but destructive pranks—as his unfortunate partner did, who thought much, but said nothing—and even if brought to his attention he virtually encouraged their repetition by declining to show any substantial evidence of parental disapproval. After church was over the boys and their father, climbing down the office stairs, ruefully turned their steps homeward. They mingled with the throngs of well dressed people returning from church, the majority of whom might well have wondered if the trio they passed were going to a fireside where love and white winged peace reigned supreme. A near relative of Mrs. Lincoln, in explanation of the unhappy condition of things in that lady's household, offered this suggestion: "Mrs. Lincoln came of the best stock and was raised like a lady. Her husband was her opposite in origin, in education, in breeding, in everything, and it is therefore quite natural that she should complain if he answered the doorbell himself instead of sending the servant to do so. Neither is she to be condemned if, as you say, she raised 'merry war' because he persisted in using his own knife in the butter, instead of the silver handled one intended for that purpose." Such want of social polish on the part of her husband of course gave Mrs. Lincoln great offense, and therefore in commenting on it she cared neither for time nor place. Her frequent outbursts of temper precipitated many an embarrassment from which Lincoln with great difficulty extricated himself.

Mrs. Lincoln, on account of her peculiar nature, could not long retain a servant in her employ. The sea was never so placid but that a breeze would ruffle its waters. She loved show and attention, and if, when she glorified her family descent or indulged in one of her strange outbreaks, the servant could simulate absolute obsequiousness or had tact enough to encourage her social pretensions, Mrs. Lincoln was for the time her firmest friend. One servant, who adjusted herself to suit the lady's capricious ways, lived with the family for several years. She told me that at the time of the debate between Douglas and Lincoln she often heard the latter's wife boast that she would yet be mistress of the White House. The secret of her ability to endure the eccentricities of her mistress came out in the admission that Mr. Lincoln gave her an extra dollar each week on condition that she would brave whatever storms might arise and suffer whatever might befall her without complaint. It was a rather severe condition, but she lived rigidly up to her part of the contract. The money was paid secretly and without the knowledge of Mrs. Lincoln. Frequently after tempestuous scenes between the mistress and her servant Lincoln at the first opportunity would place his hand encouragingly on the latter's shoulder, with the admonition, "Mary, keep up your courage." It may not be without interest to add that the servant afterward married a man who enlisted in the army. In the spring of 1865 his wife managed to reach Washington to secure her husband's release from the service. After some effort she succeeded in obtaining an interview with the president. He was glad to see her, gave her a basket of fruit and directed her to call the next day and obtain a pass through the lines and money to buy clothes for herself and children. That night he was assassinated.

A man once called at the house to learn why Mrs. Lincoln had so unceremoniously discharged his niece from her employ. Mrs. Lincoln met him at the door, and being somewhat wrought up gave vent to her feelings, resorting to such violent gestures and emphatic language that the man was glad to beat a hasty retreat. He at once started out to find Lincoln, determined to exact from him proper satisfaction for his wife's action. Lincoln was entertaining a crowd in a store at the time. The man, still laboring under some agitation, called him to the door and made the demand. Lincoln listened for a moment to his story. "My friend," he interrupted, "I regret to hear this; but, let me ask you in all candor, can't you endure for a few moments what I have had as my daily portion for the last 15 years?" These words were spoken so mournfully and with such a look of distress that the man was completely disarmed. It was a case that appealed to his feelings. Grasping the unfortunate husband's hand, he expressed in no uncertain terms his sympathy and even apologized for having approached him. He said no more about the infuriated wife, and Lincoln afterward had no better friend in Springfield.

In Time of Storm.

Mr. Lincoln never had a confidant, and therefore never unbosomed himself to others. He never spoke of his trials to me or, as far as I knew, to any of his friends. It was a great burden to carry, but he bore it sadly enough and without a murmur. I could always realize when he was in distress without being told. He was not exactly an early riser—that is, he never usually appeared at the office till about 9 o'clock in the morning. I usually preceded him an hour. Sometimes, however, he would come down as early as 7 o'clock—in fact, on one occasion I remember he came down before daylight. If, on arriving at the office, I found him in, I knew instantly that a breeze had sprung up over the domestic sea, and that the waters were troubled. He would either be lying on the lounge looking skyward or doubled up in a chair with his feet resting on the sill of a back window. He would not look up on my entering and only answered my "Good morning" with a grunt. I at once busied myself with pen and paper or ran through the leaves of some book, but the evidence of his melancholy and distress was so plain and his silence so significant that I would grow restless myself, and finding some excuse to go to the courthouse or elsewhere would leave the room.

The door of the office opening into a narrow hallway was half glass, with a curtain on it working on brass rings strung on wire. As I passed out on these occasions I would draw the curtain across the glass, and before I reached the bottom of the stairs I could hear the key turn in the lock, and Lincoln was alone in his gloom. An hour in the clerk's office at the courthouse, an hour longer in a neighboring store having passed, I would return. By that time either a client had dropped in and Lincoln was propounding the law, or else the cloud of despondency had passed away, and he was busy in the recital of an Indiana story to whistle off the recollections of the morning's gloom. Noon having arrived, I would depart homeward for my dinner. Returning within an hour, I would find him still in the office, although his house stood but a few squares away, lunching on a slice of cheese and a handful of crackers, which, in my absence, he had brought up from a store below. Separating for the day at 5 or 6 o'clock in the evening, I could still leave him behind, either sitting on a box at the foot of the stairway, entertaining a few loungers, or killing time in the same way on the courthouse steps. A light in the office after dark attested his presence there till late along in the night, when, after all the world had gone to sleep, the tall form of the man destined to be the nation's president could have been seen strolling along in the shadows of trees and buildings and quietly slipping in through the door of a modest frame house, which it pleased the world, in a conventional way, to call his home.

In her domestic troubles I have always sympathized with Mrs. Lincoln. The world does not know what she bore or how ill adapted she was to bear it. Her fearless, witty and austere nature shrank instinctively from association with the calm, imperturbable and simple ways of her thoughtful and absentminded husband. Besides, who knows but she may have acted out in her conduct toward her husband the laws of human revenge? The picture of that eventful evening in 1841, when she stood at the Edwards mansion clad in her bridal robes, the feast prepared and the guests gathered, and when the bridegroom came not, may have been constantly before her and prompted her to a course of action which kept in the background the better elements of her nature. In marrying Lincoln she did not look so far into the future as Mary Owens, who declined his proposal because "he was deficient in those little links which make up the chain of woman's happiness."

Lincoln's Homely Speech.

A lady called one day at the hotel where the Lincolns were stopping in Chicago to take Mrs. Lincoln out for a promenade or a drive. She was met in the parlor by Mr. Lincoln, who, after a hurried trip up stairs to ascertain the cause of the delay in his wife's appearance, returned with the report that "she will be down as soon as she has all her trotting harness on."

Colloquial Corruptions.

They (the Lincolns) were also called Linkhorns. The old settlers had a way of pronouncing names not as they were spelled, but rather, it seemed, as they pleased. Thus they called Medcalf "Medcap," and Kaster they pronounced "Custard." — MS. Letter, Charles Friend, March 19, 1866.

RECLAIMED FROM DEATH.

The Terror of Man Thwarted.

In the Grasp of that Dread Disease, Consumption.—Life Given Back.—Almost Miraculous.

Fortunately, perhaps, the Consumptive does not realize his own condition. His is a disease of continual waste until he meets a death that is in reality one of starvation.

It is now generally conceded that this disease is incurable,—that is, by any known medicine. Change of climate, or some life-infusing food that will give new flesh, blood, and strength, and induce the various organs of the body to assume their normal functions,—this is the only hope.

The only way to do this effectually is to give the patient Bovinine, that great raw food product, the greatest concentration of the life-giving elements of raw beef known to modern science. In this connection the results obtained by Dr. J. H. Head of Atlanta, Ga., in the treatment of a case of consumption, are interesting.

Dr. Head relates briefly how a man about thirty-five years of age came to him for treatment. He had lost forty pounds in weight in six months; he suffered with a bad cough and experienced severe night sweats; he was unable to do any work; most of his family had died of consumption, and on examination his right lung was found to be seriously affected, and as the doctor remarked, "He was in a good way to have an early funeral."

But note what happened. He was given Bovinine. In two weeks he had gained seven pounds, his appetite had returned, he was able to do a good day's work, and most of the distressing symptoms had vanished; and at the time of writing the doctor felt sure of a complete cure.

This is but one of many similar cases. Bovinine will give new life and strength, make new blood and flesh, stop waste, ward off disease, and turn the current of life's river again into its natural channel. Give it one trial while there is yet hope.

"Why, what do you want stables for? And why make me your excuse?"

"As to what I want the stables for—really, I'm not altogether sure myself. As to making you an excuse—well, even the humblest excuse is better than none. But come, here are some stables. Not good enough, though, even if any of them were empty. Come on."

We had stopped for an instant at the entrance to a small alley of rather dirty stables, and Hewitt, paying apparently but small attention to the stables themselves, had looked sharply about him, with his gaze in the air.

"I know this part of London pretty well," Hewitt observed, "and I can only remember one other range of stabling near by; we must try that. As a matter of fact, I'm coming here on little more than conjecture, though I shall be surprised if there isn't something in it. Do you know anything of aphasia?"

"I have heard of it, of course, though I can't say I remember ever knowing a case."

"I have seen one to-day—very curious case. The man's a Frenchman, discovered helpless in the street by a policeman. The only thing he can say that has any meaning in it at all is 'Je la nie,' and that he says mechanically, without in the least knowing what he is saying. And he can't write. But he got sketching and scrawling various things on some paper, and his scrawls, together with another thing or two, have given me an idea. We're following it up now. When we are less busy, and in a quiet place, I will show you the sketches and explain things generally; there's no time now, and I may want your help for a bit, in which case ignorance may prevent you spoiling things, you clumsy ruffian. Hullo! here we are, I think."

We had stopped at the end of another stable yard rather dirtier than the first. The stables were sound but inelegant sheds, and one or two appeared to be devoted to other purposes, having low chimneys, on one of which an old basket was rakishly set by way of cowl. Beside the entrance a worn-out old board was nailed, with the legend, "Stabling to Let," in letters formerly white, on a ground formerly black.

"Come," said Hewitt, "we'll explore."

We picked our way over the grassy cobblestones and looked about us. On the left was the wall inclosing certain back yards, and on the right the stables. Two doors in the middle of these were open, and a butcher's young man, who, with his shiny bullet head, would have been known for a butcher's young man anywhere, was wiping over the new-washed wheel of a smart butcher's cart.

"Good day," Hewitt said pleasantly, to the young man. "I notice there's some stabling to let here. Now where should I inquire about it?"

"Jones, Whitfield street," the young man answered, giving the wheel a final spin. "But there's only one little place to let now, I think, and it ain't very grand."

"Oh! Which is that?"

"Next but one to the street there. A chap 'ad it for wood choppin', but 'e chucked it. There ain't room for more'n a donkey an' a barrow."

"Ah, that's a pity. We're not particular, but want something big enough, and we don't mind paying a fair price. Perhaps we might make arrangements with somebody here who has a stable."

The young man shook his head. "I shouldn't think so," he said doubtfully. "they're mostly shop people as was all the room th[illegible] couldn't do nothink, I know. There 'ere two stables ain't scarcely enough for all 'e wants as it is. Then there's Barkett, the greengrocer 'ere, next door. That ain't no good. Then next to that there's the little place as is to let, and at the end there's Griffith's at the butter shop."

"And those the other way?"

"Well, this 'ere first one's Curtis', Euston road—that's a butter shop, too, an' 'e 'as the next after that. The last one, up at the end—I dunno quite whose that is. It ain't been long took, but I b'lieve it's some foreign bakers. I ain't ever see anythink come out of it, though, but there's a 'ouse there, I know—I seen the food took in."

Hewitt turned thoughtfully away. "Thanks," he said. "I suppose we can't manage it, then. Good day."

CHAPTER III.

(Copyright 1895, by the Author.)

He walked to the street as the butcher's young man wheeled in his cart and flung away his pail of water.

"Will you just hang about here, Butt?" he asked, "while I hurry round to the nearest ironmonger's? I shan't be gone long. We're going to work a little burglary. Take note if anybody comes to that stable at the further end."

He hurried away and I waited. In a few moments the butcher's young man shut his doors and went whistling down the street and in a few moments more Hewitt appeared.

"Come," he said "there's nobody about now; we'll lose no time. I've brought a pair of pliers and a few nails."

We re-entered the yard at the door of the court stable. Hewitt stooped and examined the padlock. Taking a nail in his pliers, he beat it carefully against the brick wall. Then, using the nail as a key, still held by the pliers, and, working the padlock gently in his left hand, in an astonishingly few seconds, he had released the hasp and taken off the padlock. "I'm not altogether a bad burglar," he remarked. "Not so bad, really."

The padlock fastened a bar, which, when removed, allowed the door to be opened. Opening it, Hewitt immediately seized a candle stuck in a bottle which stood on a shelf, pulled me in and closed the door behind us.

"We'll do this by candle light," he said, as he struck a match. "If the door were left open it would be seen from the street. Keep your ears open in case anybody comes down the yard."

The part of the shed that we stood in was used as a coachhouse, and was occupied by a rather shabby tradesman's cart, the shafts of which rested on the ground. From the stall adjoining came the sound of the shuffling and trampling of some impatient horse.

"I AM NOT ALTOGETHER A BAD BURGLAR."

We turned to the cart. On the name board at the side were painted in worn letters the words, "Schuyler, Baker." The address, which had been below, was painted out.

Hewitt took out the pins and let down the tailboard. Within the cart was a new bed mattress, which covered the whole surface of the bottom. I felt it, pressed it from the top, and saw that it was an ordinary spring mattress; perhaps rather unusually soft in the springs. It seemed a curious thing to keep in a baker's cart.

Hewitt, who had set the candle on a convenient shelf, plunged his arms into the furthermost recesses of the cart, and brought forth a very long French loaf, and then another. Diving again, he produced certain loaves of the sort known as the "plain cottage"—two sets of four each, each set baked together in a row.

"Feel this bread," said Hewitt, and I felt it. It was stale, almost as hard as wood.

Hewitt produced a large pocketknife and with what seemed to be superfluous care and elaboration cut into the top of one of the cottage loaves. Then he inserted his fingers in the gap he had made and firmly but slowly tore the hard bread into two pieces. He pulled away the crumbs from within, till there was nothing left but a rather thick outer shell.

"No," he said, rather to himself than to me, "there's nothing in that." He lifted one of the very long French loaves, and measured it against the interior of the cart. It had before been propped diagonally, and now it was noticeable that it was just a shade longer than the inside of the cart was wide. Jammed in, in fact, it held firmly. Hewitt produced his knife again, and divided this long loaf in the centre. There was nothing but bread in that. The horse in the stall fidgeted more than ever.

"That horse hasn't been fed lately, I fancy," Hewitt said. "We'll give the poor chap a bit of this hay in the corner."

"But," I said, "what about this bread? What did you expect to find in it? I can't see what you're driving at."

"I'll tell you," Hewitt replied. "I'm driving after something I expect to find, and close at hand here, too. How are your nerves to-day? Pretty steady? The thing may try them."

Before I could reply there was a sound of footsteps in the yard outside, approaching. Hewitt lifted his finger instantly for silence, and whispered hurriedly "There's only one. If he comes here we grab him."

The steps came nearer and stopped outside the door. There was a pause, and then a slight drawing in of breath as of a person suddenly surprised; at the moment the door was slightly shifted again, and one eye peeped in.

"Catch him!" said Hewitt aloud, as we sprang to the door. "He mustn't get away!"

I had been nearer the doorway, and was first through it. The stranger ran down the yard at his best, but my legs were the longer, and half way to the street I caught him by the shoulder and swung him round. Like lightning he whipped out a knife, and I flung in my left instantly on the chance of flooring him. It barely checked him, however, and the knife swung short of my chest by no more than two inches; but Hewitt had him by the wrist and tripped him forward on his face. He struggled like a wild beast, and Hewitt had to stand on his forearm and force up his wrist till the bones were near breaking before he dropped his knife. But throughout the struggle the man never shouted, called for help, nor, indeed, made the slightest sound; and we on our part were equally silent. It was quickly over, of course, for he was on his face, and we were two. We dragged our prisoner into the stable and closed the door behind us. So far as we had seen, nobody had witnessed the capture from the street, though, of course, we had been too busy to be certain.

"There's a set of harness hanging

While I got the straps, Hewitt held the prisoner by a peculiar neck-and-wrist grip that forbade him to move except at the peril of a snapped arm. He had probably never been a person of pleasant aspect, being short, strongly and squatly built, large and ugly of feature, and wild and dirty of hair and beard; and now, his face flushed with struggling, and smeared with mud from the stable yard, his nose bleeding, and his forehead exhibiting a growing bump, he looked particularly repellent. We strapped his elbows together behind, and as he sullenly ignored a demand for the contents of his pockets Hewitt unceremoniously turned them out. Helpless as he was the man struggled to prevent this, though, of course, ineffectually. There were papers, tobacco, a bunch of keys and various odds and ends. Hewitt was glancing hastily at the papers, when, suddenly dropping them, he caught the prisoner by the shoulder and pulled him away from a partly consumed hay truss, which stood in a corner, and toward which he had quietly sidled.

"Keep him still," said Hewitt, "we haven't examined this place yet." And he commenced to pull away the hay from the corner.

Presently a large piece of sackcloth was revealed, and this being lifted left visible below it another batch of loaves of the same sort as we had seen in the cart. There were a dozen of them in one square batch, and the only thing about them that differed from those in the cart was their position. For the batch lay bottom side up.

"That's enough, I think," Hewitt said. "Don't touch them, for heaven's sake." He picked up the papers, he had dropped. "That has saved a little search," he continued. See, here, Butt. I was in the act of telling you my suspicions when this little affair interrupted me; if you care to look at one or two of these letters, you'll see what I should have told you: it's Anarchism and bombs, of course. I'm about as certain as I can be that there's a reversible dynamite bomb inside each of those innocent loaves—though I assure you I don't mean meddling with them now. But, see here, Will you go and bring in a four-wheeler? Bring it right down the yard. There's more to do, and we mustn't attract attention."

I hurried away and found the cab. The meaning of the loaves, the cart and the spring mattress was now plain. There was an Anarchist plot to carry out a number of explosions, probably simultaneously in different parts of the city. I had, of course, heard much of the terrible "reversing" bombs—those bombs which containing a tube of acid plugged by wadding, required no fuse, and only needed to be inverted to be set going to explode in a few minutes. The loaves containing these bombs would form an effectual "blind," and they were to be distributed, probably in broad daylight, in the most natural manner possible, in a baker's cart. A man would be waiting near the scene of each contemplated explosion; he would be given a loaf taken from the inverted batch; he would take it, perhaps wrapped in paper, but still inverted, and apparently the most innocent object possible, to the spot selected, deposit it right side up (which would reverse the inner tube, and set up the action) in some quiet corner, behind a door or whatnot, and make his own escape, while the explosion tore down walls and, if the experiment were lucky, scattered the flesh and bones of unsuspecting people. The infernal loaves were made and kept reversed to begin with, in order to stand more firmly, and (if observed) more naturally when turned over to explode. Even if a child picked up the load and carried it off, that child, at least, would be blown to atoms, which at any rate would have been something for the conspirators to congratulate themselves upon. The spring mattress, of course, was to ease the jolting to the bombs, and obviate any random jerking loose of the acid which might have the deplorable result of sacrificing the valuable life of the conspirator who drove the cart. The other loaves, too, with no explosive contents, had their use. The two long ones which fitted across the inside of the cart would be jammed across so as to hold the bombs in the centre, and the others would be used to pack the batch on the other sides, and prevent any dangerous slipping about. The thing seemed pretty plain, except that as yet I had no idea of how Hewitt learned anything of the business. I brought the four-wheeler up to the door of the stable, and we thrust the man into it, and Hewitt locked the stable door with its proper key. Then we drove off to Tottenham Court road police station, and, by Hewitt's order, straight into the yard.

In less than ten minutes from our departure from the stable our prisoner was finally secured, and Hewitt was deep in consultation with police officials. Messengers were sent and telegrams dispatched, and presently Hewitt came to me with information.

"The name of the helpless Frenchman the police found this morning," he said, "appears to be Gerard—at least, I am almost certain of it. Among the papers found on the prisoner, whose full name doesn't appear, but who seems to be spoken of as Luigi—he is Italian—among the papers, I say, is a sort of notice convening a meeting for this evening to decide as to the 'final punishment' to be awarded the 'traitor Gerard, now in charge of Comrade Pingard.' The place of meeting is not mentioned, but it seems more than probable that it will be at the Bakunin Club, not five minutes' walk from this place. The police have all these places under quiet observation, of course, and that is the club at which apparently important Anarchist meetings have been held. It is the only club that has never been raided as yet, and it would seem the only one they would feel at all safe in using for anything important. Moreover, Luigi simply declined to open his mouth when asked where the meeting was to be, and said nothing when the names of several other places were suggested, but suddenly found his tongue at the mention of the Bakunin Club and denied vehemently that the meeting was to be there—it was the only thing he uttered. So that it seems pretty safe to assume that it is to be there. Now, of course, the matter's very serious. Men have been dispatched to take charge of the stable very quietly, and the club is to be taken possession of at once—also very quietly. It must be done without a moment's delay, and as there is a chance that the only detective officers within reach at the moment may be known by sight, I have undertaken to get in first. Perhaps you'll come? We may have to take the door with a rush."

Of course, I meant to miss nothing if I could help it, and said so.

"Very well," replied Hewitt, "we'll get ourselves up a bit." He began taking off his collar and tie. "It is getting dusk," he proceeded, "and we shan't want old clothes to make ourselves look sufficiently shabby. We're both wearing bowler hats, which is lucky. Make a dent in yours—if you can without permamently damaging it."

GREATEST OF GUNS.

IT WILL SINK BIG SHIPS AT TEN MILES RANGE.

Will Hurl 500 Pounds of Explosive With Deadly Accuracy. Horrible Havoc of This New Marvel of Ordinance Which Distances all Other Guns.

Maxim, the gunmaker, and Dr. Schupphaus, the gunpowder expert, have just invented a new cannon and torpedo powder which will knock all modern war vessels to pieces like eggshells. This big gun will throw a huge cannon ball full of explosives ten miles, and where it strikes it will smash into kindling wood everything within hundreds of feet.

In fact, this new terror doesn't even have to hit a ship to do this. If the shot lands in the water near by it will sink the ship and stun everybody on board from the force of the explosion.

The discovery is called "the Maxim-Schupphaus system of throwing aerial torpedoes from guns by means of a special powder which starts the projectile with a low pressure and increases its velocity by keeping the pressure well up throughout the whole length of the gun." Patents on the system have been taken out in the United States and European countries.

The special powder employed is almost gun cotton, compounded with such a small per cent. of nitro-glycerine as to possess none of the disadvantages of nitro-glycerine powders, and preserved from decomposition through a slight admixture of urea. It is perfectly safe to handle and can be beaten with a heavy hammer on an anvil without exploding.

The secret of its remarkable power lies in a simple mathematical truth which no one had previously thought of. High explosive powder is now loaded into cannon in the form of strips, small cubes or solid cylindrical rods from one-half to three-fourths of an inch in diameter, several feet in length and looking like a bundle of sticks of dark beeswax. When the powder is touched off the ends and circumference of each rod of powder ignites instantaneously and burns toward the center.

The volume of gases generated by combustion grows constantly less, because the burning surface is less, and as it is the volume of gas which gives velocity to the projectile shot from the gun, a loss of velocity is the inevitable result. The projectile does not go so far as it would if the pressure of the gases had increased, or had at least been increased.

In each piece of the Maxim-Schupphaus powder is a lot of small holes running through the entire length of the rod. When the powder is ignited the flame spreads instantaneously not only over the circumference of each rod but throughout the perforations as well. These little holes are burnt out with such rapidity that the difference in the volume of explosive gases generated at the beginning and at the end of the bore of the gun is about in the ratio of sixteen to one.

The projectile therefore leaves the gun with terrific velocity, and each little hole in the rods of the powder does its share toward hurrying it on its mission of destruction miles away from the scene. With a big gun the havoc wrought by this new wonder of modern ordnance would be incalculable.

This new death dealing powder has been fired in field guns and in the heavy coast defense rifles at Sandy Hook with surprising results. From a ten inch gun, loaded with 128 pounds of this powder, a projectile weighing 571 pounds was thrown eight miles out to sea. The pressures on the rods of powder were more uniform than any yet recorded, which is a most important point in deciding the value of a high explosive powder. Without uniform pressures accuracy of aim is impossible.

SLAVE OF AN OUTLAW BAND.

A Strange Story of Crime Told by a Negro Branded by an Outlaw.

By a stroke of good luck George McGowan, a negro about 20 years old, has fallen into the hands of Chief of Police Massey at Wichita, Kan. This youth claims to have been a slave to the allied band of outlaws for ten years. A white ring about his neck shows where he was lassoed from a pony while trying to escape. He is branded "LIL" on his right leg. His initials are cut into his left arm, the work being done, he says, by John Long and Bill Dalton. On his back deep in the flesh is the mark of the obliterating iron used to deface range brands, and over this is another brand, the "half-hitch."

Federal and State officers have been questioning him all day, and he has told them that cattle are stolen on the ranges and shipped by carload lots to Eastern markets. The secret hiding places of the band in New Mexico, Colorado, Kansas and Indian Territory are now known, as are also their signs, grips and passwords.

Chet Long, one of the band, is in jail here, and Handsome Charles Parker, who stole, shipped to Kansas and sold six carloads of cattle, is under heavy guard at the City Hospital. He was desperately wounded in a fight at Ashland, Kan., when his arrest was attempted.

The outlaw's slave is being closely guarded, as threats have been made upon his life. He declares that the train, bank and cattle rustlers are all banded together, and he has given a long list of names to the officers.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Northwestern Americans, who are enormously proud of their mild climate, take pleasure in calling attention to the fact that their towns are on the same parallel of latitude with several Mediterranean cities famous for their delightful climate, and pleasant cities of France. Portland, Or., for example, is in the same latitude as Venice, and San Francisco as Athens. Tacoma is far north of Geneva, Portland considerably south of Paris, and Seattle at the same latitude as N[illegible]

WEST POINT'S HISTORIC CHAIN.

Once it Weighed 180 Tons and Was 1,500 Feet Long.

No visitor to West Point fails to notice the few links of the iron chain that lie around the monument up near the hotel. They are the remains of the great chain which was stretched across the Hudson river during the Revolution, to prevent British warships from sailing past the forts and landing an army of marauding parties. Few people know that just above the entrance to Tuxedo Park, on the east side of the railroad track, are the ruins of the building in which that chain was made. They are known as the old Augusta forge. The western gable and the south wall are all that are standing. It was never anything but a low stone building, a few feet square and built by a country mason. It was called a forge because there iron was reduced from the ore by the old fashioned charcoal method, and its counterparts were common all over the country within the last half century. It was owned by the Sterling Irom Mine Company, one of the large iron manufacturers of the day. Here was reduced the iron taken from the mine, four miles west, and the links hammered out by hand.

When it became apparent to the Continental War Department that a chain was necessary to prevent vessels going above the neutral ground, Secretary Pickering consulted Mr. Townsend, one of the iron kings of the day and an owner of the mine, and shortly after Gen. Putnam gave an order for the chain. In less than six weeks the links were delivered to the army engineer at New Winsor, just west of Newburg, ready to put together. The carting was done by the neighboring farmers with their ox teams. The links were two feet long and two and a quarter inches square, each weighing about 150 pounds. When put together the chain had a swivel at every hundred feet. It was about 1,500 feet long and weighed 180 tons. It was buoyed up by sixteen foot logs, pointed at each end, so as to offer as little resistance to the tides as possible. It was put in place in 1778. The part which is preserved was fished up from the bottom of the river in 1855, but the greater part was sold for old iron to the West Point foundry years before.

A Woman's Trick on a Milliner.

Mrs. Mary A. Friedman, who keeps a millinery store in Baltimore, was the victim of a swindling trick on Thursday. A woman purchased a hat from her, the price of which was $6.50. She told Mrs. Friedman that she did not have the money with her, but if Mrs. Friedman would go with her to her home, 1,222 Bank street, she would give her the price of the hat. Mrs. Friedman accompanied the stranger and carried the hat in her hand. Upon arriving at 1,222 the woman apparently made an effort to open the door. She then told Mrs. Friedman that the door was locked, but that she would take the hat, go in the back way, return to the front door and hand Mrs. Friedman the money. The hat was given to her, the woman disappeared up an alley at the side of the house, and has not been seen since. Mrs. Dippel, the occupant of the house, knew nothing about the woman.

Not Always Veal.

An English clergyman was preaching in a country church in Scotland. He had as his subject "The Prodigal Son." "And the prodigal son went away from his poor old father and remained in a far country for years and years. But after years and years he came back to his poor father, and his poor old father said unto the servants:

"Bring forth the fatted calf which has been kept for my son these years and years."

An old farmer in the audience could contain himself no longer.

"Yer a le'er, it wud hae bin a coo!" he exclaimed.—Ram's Horn.

The Modern Method.

"At last!"

The man with the little bunch of whiskers on his chin smiled significantly.

"Fame is mine!"

His eye flashed proudly.

"My name shall go thundering down the corridors of time. The awe stricken multitude shall be familiar with the classic features of the man who did!"

Hurriedly reaching for pen and paper he wrote, inclosing photo, how he had been snatched from the jaws of death by sixteen bottles of Dr. Lemonoski's Extract of Wild Ax Handles.

RAPID TRANSIT.

Elizabeth People Can Ride in Trolley Cars Now.

The trolley road in Elizabeth was formally opened this morning and hereafter Elizabethans will enjoy the latest street railroad facilities.

At half-past ten o'clock four cars, loaded with specially invited guests of the company, left the Union station on Broad street and made a trip over the entire road, after which the party was conveyed to the Zouave armory, on Broad street, and entertained at dinner.

The first car for the accommodation of the traveling public left the Elizabethport station for uptown, at eleven o'clock.

The new cars will be in operation on all branches of the road in the city. For a short time the terminus of the Newark line will be on North Broad street. It will be a week or two yet before the line at the Newark end will be completed so as to permit of cars running straight through from this city.

In order to guard against accidents, the cars, in addition to being provided with fenders, will be run at a speed not exceeding eight miles an hour.

Capt. J. F. Hubbard, director of the Board of Freeholders, received and accepted an invitation to be present at the opening of the trolley railroad and is in Elizabeth today enjoying the programme as told about above.

New Brunswick's Street Railway Warfare

The State Supreme Court, Tuesday, on application of Allan H. Strong, granted a writ of certiorari removing the electric railway ordinance of New Brunswick to the Supreme Court, together with all proceedings of the City Council in connection with its passage. The prosecutors of the writ are William B. and Mary Vannostwick, of George street and Throop avenue, New Brunswick, who allege that the proposed change from horses to electricity will be an injury to their property, and that the tracks of the company in turning this corner will be so close to the curb that there will not be room for a horse and wagon to pass between. It is generally understood that while the Vannostwicks appear as the ostensible prosecutors, the real opponent of the project is the Raritan River Railroad Company. The opposition of the railroad company is due to the fear that the trolley company intends to extend its lines from New Brunswick to South Amboy, thus coming in competition with the railroad company. This writ has been served on Mayor Williamson, and it will act as a stay of proceedings.

Lillian Russell to Sing.

Lillian Russell's throat trouble has been removed, and after a week's absence from the cast of "The Tzigane" at Abbey's Theatre in New York, she will return tonight and sing the leading part to the close of the season, Saturday evening of next week. Clara Lane, who has been singing Miss Russell's part since last Thursday, has done remarkably good work, and is deserving of much hearty praise; but, of course, her task has been a very embarrassing one, as that of all understudies is, and she is probably the happiest artist in New York today, knowing that Miss Russell is to return.

Our Vision.

Many people are in doubt as to what their eyes should do for them. A test will set you right. If you have headache or your eyes are causing you anxiety or discomfort, consult Leech, Stiles & Co.'s eye specialist, who will be at 107 East Front street, on Thursday, from ten o'clock a. m. to five o'clock p. m. No charge to examine your eyes. Glasses are prescribed only when needed, and are guaranteed to relieve the trouble for which they are prescribed.

Principal Clark Discharged.

The opposition to A. T. S. Clark, principal of the Metuchen school, culminated Tuesday night in his discharge and the election of a successor. This action was taken at a meeting of the Raritan Township School Board.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mrs. Thos. Eggers, 139 Florida St., San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result everything else, then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottle at Randolph's drug store. Regular size, 50c and $1.

A MILITARY WEDDING.

Brilliant Event At Holy Cross Church Last Night.

THE BROOKS-ELY MARRIAGE.

An Elaborate Display of Flowers, Combined with the Red, White and Blue and Handsome Gowns, Make Up a Pretty Scene—Groom, Best Man and Ushers All Dressed in Military Clothes.

One of the most brilliant events of the season was the marriage last night in Holy Cross church of Miss Marion P. Brooks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Brooks of Rockview avenue, to Lieutenant Frank D. Ely of the Sixth Infantry, U. S. Army, located at Fort Thomas, Kentucky.

It was the first military wedding that has ever been witnessed in this city, and it was charming in every particular.

The front part of the church was tastefully arranged with the choicest of flowers and interspersed were handsome American flags prettily draped, giving a picture of beauty seldom observed.

The church was opened promptly at seven o'clock when a large number of people were awaiting to enter. They were met by LaRoy S. Upton, of the Twenty-first Infantry, of Governors Island, Warren H. Mitchell, of the Second Artillery, of Fort Adams, Rhode Island, James M. Williams, of the First Artillery, of Davids Island, and Dwight E. Altman, of the Second Artillery, of Fort Warren, who were the ushers. They wore the full dress uniform of the U. S. Army and made a handsome appearance.

The bridal party was gowned as follows: Bride, Miss Marion P. Brooks, white satin, trimmed with point lace and chiffon, carrying lilies of the valley; maid of honor, Miss May Sandford, white chiffon, embroidered with silver, carrying white roses; bridesmaids, Miss Anna Stewart, of Plainfield, figured organdie over pink silk, carrying pink roses; Miss Florence V. B. Myers, of New York, figured organdie over blue silk, carrying pink roses; Miss Edith Potts, of New York, figured organdie over yellow silk, carrying yellow roses; Miss Margaret Harrison, of Brooklyn, figured organdie over lilac, carrying yellow roses; Ray and Mabel Hooley, flower girls, and nieces of the bride, pink and baby blue organdie, carrying daisies; groom, Lieutenant Frank D. Ely, and best man, Frank D. Webster, of the Sixth Infantry, of Fort Thomas, full dress uniform of the United States Army.

Organist George Hoskings presided at the organ, and gave a rendition of a choice programme while the guests were being seated. Every seat was taken, and there was hardly standing room when the first notes of Mendelssohn's wedding march was heard. The bridal party entered, preceded by the ushers, then came the flower girls, followed by the bridesmaids, and maid of honor, with the bride leaning on the arms of her father. When near the chancel the party separated, allowing the bride and her father to pass to the altar, where they were met by the groom, the best man, and the pastor, Rev. T. Logan Murphy. The party then formed a circle around the altar, when the service of the Episcopal church was performed by Rev. Mr. Murphy. The father gave the daughter away in marriage. The responses by the bride and groom were noticeably clear. The bridal party left the church the reverse of entering, while the wedding march from Lohengrin was being played.

After the ceremony an informal reception was given at the home of the bride's parents, which was attended by only the relatives and near friends.

The happy couple left town last night for Lake Mohonk, where they will remain a week. They will then return to Plainfield. The latter part of July they take up their residence at Fort Worth, Ky., where Mr. Ely is stationed. The presents received by the bride and groom were very handsome and costly.

YATES—BORDEN.

The marriage of Miss Kathryn Young Yates, daughter of Joseph W. Yates, to Harry Voorhees Borden, took place very quietly at the residence of the bride's parents, at 128 East Seventh street, at five o'clock yesterday afternoon. The ceremony was to have been performed at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, and a large number of invitations had been sent out, but owing to the severe illness of Mrs. Fred W. Yates, the sister-in-law of the bride, the invitations were recalled, as stated in these columns a few days ago.

At the ceremony yesterday only the relatives of the bride and groom were present. The Rev. K. P. Ketcham officiated, assisted by the Rev. William R. Richards.

The maid of honor was Miss Margaret Yates, sister of the bride. The bridesmaids were Miss Marion Dumont, Miss Alice Borden, Miss Margaret Tracy and Miss Grace W. Cooley. The best man was John W. Moore, and the ushers were A. M. Duxbury, L. D. Lovell, William B. Gilbert, E. L. Walz, Jr., Frank C. Cokefair and Andrew McKinney of New York.

The couple will go on a short wedding tour.

THE FIRST FLOAT.

Paugh-Caugh-Naugh-Sinque Tribe to Have One for the Fourth.

The meeting of Paugh-Caugh-Naugh-Sinque tribe was well attended last evening, and every member seemed to be inspired with the same feeling of patriotism displayed by Senior Sagamore George C. Bedford.

A committee, consisting of John H. Carney, George C. Bedford, J. K. Clark, William Harris and George Serrell, were appointed to get up a float for the parade on the Fourth of July. This committee intend to display the refined and beautiful features of Redmanship. An invitation was extended to Iona council, D. of P., to assist them in making this particular feature of the parade one that will be remembered, and to impress upon the minds of the public that it means something to be a Red Man.

Every member interested in this celebration should visit the wigwam on Wednesday evening next. Important business will be transacted, followed by a collation of ice-cream and cake. Good cigars will be passed around.

HAS MUSICAL TALENT.

Frank C. Doremus To Finish His Studies in Germany.

Frank C. Doremus, a grandson of Mr. Doremus, of Washington avenue, sailed today for Germany, where he goes to pursue his musical studies. Mr. Doremus was formerly a pupil in the North Plainfield public school, but deciding to make music a profession, left it to enter the Metropolitan Conservatory of Music, where he was regarded as a pupil of unusual promise. This young artist, though not having reached his majority, has been heard in select musical circles, and as a pianist plays with a finish and expression that is admirable and enjoyable, and at no distant day will undoubtedly receive the public recognition that his talents deserve. He was accompanied by Mr. Rodler and sister, of Morristown, both talented musicians.

PLOT OF THE FLOWER QUEEN.

A Touching Lesson is Told in a Pretty Way.

The cantata "The Flower Queen", which is to be given in Vincent chapel on Tuesday evening, will be a most enjoyable affair, judging from the careful preparation that is being made. The plot of the cantata is as follows:

The Flowers meet in a secluded dell in the forest, to choose their Queen. A person discontented with the world, seeks in the same place retirement from its cares and disappointments. The Flowers tell of love and duty, and the Recluse, learning that to fill well the station allotted by Providence, is to be happy, resolves to return again to usefulness and contentment among his fellow creatures.

New Meat Market.

George Egel, for a number of years manager for Mrs. D. I. Smalley, has rented the store now being built by George Kirch, at the corner of Grandview avenue and Somerset street, where he will open a first-class meat market.

Mrs. Smalley has secured Charles Arnold, who for a number of years conducted the business now run by Fred Endres on Liberty street, as manager in place of Mr. Egel.

The Claret Flowed.

Charles I. Young, a tinner, met with quite a severe accident yesterday while at work on a new building being erected on Berckman street, in which he cut a fearful gash in his left wrist with a piece of tin, causing the loss of a great deal of blood, but not disabling him for work.

A Letter From Mr. Warren.

Mulford Estil received a letter yesterday from Edward S. Warren, who is living in Sodaville, Nebraska. He says that he is getting along nicely and that he is improving from his recent injuries.

There will be a strawberry festival in Marconnier M. E. church on Tuesday evening of next week.

Y. M. C. A. STATE MEET.

A Day of Good Sport to Be Had at Orange, July 27th.

The State athletic meet of the Y. M. C. A. will be held at Orange, Saturday, July 29th. The events are as follows:

One Hundred Yards Dash.
Twelve Pound Hammer.
Running High Jump.
Pole Vault.
One Mile Run.

All members in good standing in the Y. M. C. A. may enter the events by sending their names and fifty cents to T. E Bleich, Rahway, N. J., before July 15th. Pantathlon rules and system of scoring will be used. All contestants scoring 200 points in any or all of the events, will receive a bronze medal; 300 points a silver medal; 400 points a gold medal. The following is what must be done to score an average of 200, 300 or 400 points:

One Hundred Yards Dash, 11 3-5 seconds, 11 1-5 seconds and 10 4-5 seconds.

Twelve Pound Hammer, 70, 80 and 90 feet.

Running High Jump, 4 feet, 4 inches, 4 feet, 9 inches and 5 feet, 2 inches.

Pole Vault, 7 feet, 6 inches, 8 feet, 4 inches and 9 feet, 2 inches.

One Mile Run, 6 minutes, 5 minutes, 40 seconds and 5 minutes, 20 seconds.

Three athletes of any association shall constitute a team, and the team scoring the highest number of points will receive a special prize in addition to the medals. The team prize will consist of a silk banner, with the names of the winners thereon.

CATHOLIC YOUNG MEN.

Annual Field Day Sports to Be Held at Newark August 10th.

The Diocesan Union, of which the C. Y. M. L. of this city is a prominent member, have decided on the following events for their field day sports which will be held in Caledonian Park at Newark on August 10th:

100 yards dash, 300 yards run, 440 yards run, novice one-mile run, one-and-a-half-mile bicycle race, putting the sixteen-pound shot, and high jump.

Gold and silver medals will be given to first and second place men. A handsome banner will be given to the society scoring the most points. The points will be counted as follows: five for first, three for second, and one for third. After the athletic sports a reception will be tendered to the visiting societies, followed by a banquet.

The Union adopted a button something on the style of the National Union of Y. M. C. S.

The next meeting of the Union will be held at Orange the first Sunday in July.

Short Runaway.

A horse, attached to a wagon standing in front of Edward White's dry goods house, yesterday afternoon started to run away. There were two small children in the wagon and they were unable to manage the horse. When Somerset street was reached, J. B. Martin, who happened to be standing on the corner, saw the trouble and captured the horse. It was returned to the woman who owned the rig and who had been shopping.

Await the Action of Superiors.

At the meeting of Gazelle Engine Company, No. 1, last evening the members decided they could nothing with the invitation to participate in the Fourth of July celebration, as they were under control of the Board of Engineers. They, however, extended a vote of thanks for the courtesy.

Bill Boards Razed.

The board fence which has stood for a long time on the property owned by A. D. Thompson, next to Roberts livery stable on North avenue, was taken down today, leaving an open space through to Second street.

J. E. Mosher, it is understood, has asked for permission to erect an "A" tent on the ground, where he intends serving ice cream.

Bound to be a Success.

The promotors of the coming semi-annual games of the Plainfield High School Athletic Association are well satisfied with the signs of the field day which promises to be the most successful ever held by the association, despite the efforts of a Plainfield newspaper to injure its prospects by publishing untrue reports concerning the meet.

No Sunday Work.

"No Sunday work," is the announcement P. M. Decker, proprietor of the Hotel Grenada barber shop, makes in his advertisement in today's Press. Mr. Decker has a finely appointed shop, and will probably retain all his customers by this move.

ABOUT THE BICYCLISTS.

Difficulties Monte Scott Encountered at Millburn.

CABANNE A WINNER AT ALBANY.

If the Conditions Had Been Proper Scott Would Have Finished First, As Well As Have Won the Time Prize—Tyler and Bald Gave Cabanne a Hard Race—Local Cycling Notes.

The Jersey City News last night published the following about Plainfield's famous bicyclist:

Monte Scott, the crack road racer and holder of the world's amateur record for five, fifteen, twenty and twenty-five miles on the road, visited a prominent sporting goods house in New York shortly after the Irvington-Milburn race, and after his wonderful performance of that day he was naturally the centre of attraction. His recital of how he won the Irvington-Millburn time prize and incidents attached to the trip are certainly interesting and show conclusively that had Monte Scott been in anything like condition, he not only would have won the fast time prize easier, but would have been well up at the finish. Scott is engaged in business in Pawtaucket, R. I., and did not train a particle for the Irvington-Milburn road race, and in fact it was at the last moment that he decided to enter. He has been at his business every night until ten or eleven o'clock. He left Pawtucket the day previous to the race and arrived in New York city at eight o'clock in the evening, and not only carried his own wheel, but his baggage as well. He arrived at Cortlandt street, where the bridge across West street rather mixed him up, and, of course, he lost the train he had intended to take for Milburn.

After finally getting under way he told one of the intelligent conductors to let him out at Millburn station. Instead he was taken four or five stations the other side. He got out and rode back to Millburn and in a very timid way approached what was sure to be a crowded hotel. The hotel proprietor refused to grant him any courtesies whatever, and told him the house was full from top to bottom, and that the rooms had, in fact, been engaged for weeks ahead, so, in sheer desperation, Scott turned away. One of the cyclists, who was in the hotel office at the time, recognized him as he turned away, and told the proprietor he was practically the scratch man in the race on Decoration Day. Monte Scott saw he had a friend and went back and told the proprietor he would sleep on a cot, sofa or anything to get a night's rest for the morning's race. The proprietor then relented and put a cot up in one of the halls for him, and this is where the record-holding cyclist secured his night's rest previous to the race.

In the morning he awoke—a sad man, stiff, and in anything but a pleasant frame of mind. He left the hotel and went up the road to another one, which happened to be the headquarters of the Spalding team, where he made his predicament known. The trainer gave him a tip-top rubbing, and a few minutes later saw him off in the great Irvinton-Millburn road race. This shows just what kind of stuff there is in Scott, and it is assured that the next time he is going to ride in a road race he will leave much earlier and be better taken care of.

CABANNE'S CLEVER CYCLING.

Won Two Hard Races at the Albany Tournament.

At yesterday's races in Albany Cabanne took two of the three events, giving him a record of six out of eight open events in which he has competed this season. Cabanne met Tyler and Bald in the contests, and won out on each occasion, the last with a great finishing sprint for the last fifty yards.

In the mile open race Cabanne had a poor position and on the last lap was forced to fall back behind the bunch and then come around. Sims rounded the turn first and Bald shot his bolt at the head of the stretch. The track was not safe for fast riding, there being no bank, but these men forgot the fact, and Cabanne slid through the bunch like a streak, and barely ten yards from home nipped Bald for a bare six inches when the tape was crossed. Tyler fell away on the last lap. The time was 2:19 3-5, good for the track and day. The finish of the two-third mile, open, Class B, was another brilliant coup for Cabanne, who came like mad around the lower bank, caught Bald, and the two passed Maddox and plunged desperately into a duel. In the last twenty yards Cabanne won the contest by a tire's width only, but it was a win, nevertheless. Bald retaliated by taking the half-mile open from the field of eleven, among the number being Cabanne, who ran fifth.

SANCTION FOR ANOTHER MEET.

Crescent Wheelmen May Have Another Day of Races.

The Board of Governors of the Crescent Wheelmen met last evening to settle accounts of the Memorial Day Circuit meet. It was learned that the expenses were about $1,000 and the receipts about $1,700 leaving a balance of $700. The members decided that the affair was a complete success in every respect.

The club has received sanction from Chairman Gideon of the Racing Board for a meet on Labor Day, but the members have not fully made up their minds as to what they will do.

Eleven new members were received and two resigned at the meeting.

The Fourth of July celebration was talked of but was laid over till the meeting of the Wheelmen next Wednesday.

CYCLING COMMENT.

The Plainfield Bicycle Club meet next Monday evening.

Conductor Dodwell of the Central Railroad now enjoys his spare time on a wheel.

The Crescent Wheelmen will meet in regular session next Wednesday evening.

Orville Waring, of North Plainfield, rides an L. A. W. special wheel of which he is very proud.

Will Sebring, of LaGrande avenue, is the proud possessor of Apollo wheel, purchased of Charles Lister.

On the Crescent Oval yesterday the following one-mile records were made: Arthur Crane, 2:18; U. B. Crane, 2:53; Mr. Price, 2:45.

The Hudson County Wheelmen have arranged to have 200 tents erected at Asbury Park on Saturday, July 6, for the use of members and their friends during the National League of American Wheelmen meet July 8 to 10, inclusive.

It is now practically settled that Walter Sanger will meet Charles F. Murphy in a series of mile races at the Kings County Wheelmen's meet at Manhattan Beach, June 29th. The winner of two of the three mile heats will be given a prize of the value of $1,000 if the Racing Board of the League of American Wheelmen will sanction such a prize.

Encouraged by the Secretary of War, Major-General Miles and others, preparations have been made for a competitive bicycle road race this week between the postal service and military, the postal service taking a message from Postmaster Hesing, of Chicago, to the Postmaster at New York, and the military a message from Gen. Ruger to Gen. Miles. More than 500 riders and substitutes will be necessary to carry the messages—more than were ever in a race before. The finish is expected to be an exceedingly exciting spurt and will be awaited at an appointed station in New York by Gen. Miles. Medals and prizes for those making the best average time will be given. The time schedule is seventy-two hours. The route after leaving Chicago takes in Laporte, South Bend, Goshen, Ind.; Fremont, Elyria, Painesville, Ashtabula, O.; Northwest Pennsylvania, Buffalo, Batavia, Rochester, Syracuse, Utica, Schnectady, Albany, Poughkeepsie, Sing Sing, Tarrytown, Yonkers, to New York.

Easier For the Mail Carriers.

Along the line of improvements in the post office department in this city the letter carriers were supplied yesterday with shoulder saddles which will make it much easier for them in carrying their mail pouches. It is made of steel, well padded underneath, and fastens neatly to a hook on the shoulder. It also has a catch to hold the strap.

Fell in a Faint.

A middle-aged woman named Mrs. Graggin, a stranger in this city, while passing Trinity Reformed church this morning fell to the sidewalk in a fainting spell. A passerby carried her to the church steps, and in a few minutes she revived. She was taken away in a carriage.

Merit Recognized.

Tier's ice cream is much sought after these warm days. He furnishes cream for the festivals to be given in Trinity Reformed, Grace M. E. churches, C. Y. M. L., and Hope chapel this evening.

Cases Adjourned.

Judge Coddington appeared in court at Elizabeth this morning and secured an adjournment of the McClurg and Goldstein cases to next Monday.

NEARLY ENDED IN A ROW

Illinois Democratic Silver Convention Was Noisy.

A Plank in the Platform Endorsing Altgeld Forced Out, But the Governor Is Received with a Wild Demonstration—Free Silver Coinage at 16 to 1 Declared For.

Springfield, Ill., June 6.—Had it not been for the timely action of secretary of state W. H. Hinrichsen, who issued the call for yesterday's Illinois democratic silver convention, the event would have ended in a row. It all came about because of a plank in the resolutions indorsing Governor Altgeld. It had been expressly agreed before the convention was called to order that there was to be no action taken outside of that for which the call provided—the placing of the seal of approval on free coinage and the election of delegates to a national convention, to be held some time in the near future.

Kicked Against an Altgeld Plank.

The trouble began in the committee room where the platform was being prepared. Ten members of the committee voted for the Altgeld plank and nine against insertion. The plank was put in. The platform had been read by ex-Congressman Fithian, chairman of the resolutions committee, a firm friend of the Altgeld plank. A storm of protests had arisen all over the hall and it looked as if the pacemaking silver convention of the west would end in a schism which would be fatal to the future of the white metal. At this juncture Hinrichsen rose and waved his hand, and instantly the uproar was hushed.

Hinrichsen Makes a Request.

"Gentlemen," he said, "I have a personal request to make of you. I do not believe there is anybody in this hall who has any more right to make such a request than I have. It is this: That the part of the resolutions endorsing Gov. Altgeld be stricken out, and for this I ask unanimous consent. The members of the state administration did not expect to be endorsed by this convention, either as individuals or as a whole. If such endorsements were made the object of this convention would be nullified."

Altgeld's Name Dropped.

Judge Samuel H. McConnell, the permanent chairman of the convention, joined his request to that of Mr. Hinrichsen, and Chairman Fithian, without even waiting for the convention to ratify the request, read the resolution over again, this time leaving out the objectionable paragraph.

Free Silver Coinage at 16 to 1.

Then the delegates with a yell adopted a platform declaring for free silver coinage at 16 to 1. The platform was in part as follows: Resolved, that we request the democratic national committee to call a democratic national convention to consider the money question not later than August, 1895. If the said national committee refuse to call such a convention, then we invite the democratic state committee of the other states to take concurrent action with the democratic state committee of this state in calling such convention. That the democratic members of congress and members of the senate from this state be and are hereby instructed to use every honorable means to carry out the principle above enunciated.

Yelled Like Cowboys.

After several speakers had been heard it became apparent that the convention was determined to hear Gov. Altgeld, despite his protest that he would under no circumstances speak. The governor was on the floor below, in his office, and a committee was sent out to conduct him in. His appearance was the cue for the noisiest demonstration of the day. Men stood on chairs, yelled like cowboys at the opening of a reservation, and spun their silk hats on the end of their sticks. Women clapped their hands and, having no canes, swung their bonnets by the strings and howled as if the convention was a university football game. It was fully five minutes before a semblance of order could be patched up. The governor said, in part:

Money Stricken Down.

"Why have you left your various labors to-day to come here? It is because you have felt that the time has come when you must again make a declaration of principles; again make a stand for the tenets of democracy. You have often asked what caused the recent paralysis of industry. If you look back you find that a short time ago about one-half of the money in the world was stricken down, not by the arm of commerce, but by the action of the autocrats and plutocrats of this country. Now, what must we really do? We must raise the purchasing power of the produce of the great masses of the country.

Get Back of the Gold Men.

"Honesty and justice demand that this country go back to the principles in vogue when prosperity ruled. The democratic party, standing for the people, is under obligations to right the wrongs of the people. I am told that Cleveland is the friend of the workingman. He has written some beautiful letters, and in them he has told the workingman his dollar would go further than it used to go, but neither he, nor any other man has told the workingman where he is going to get the dollar. There's only one way to head the gold men off, and that is to get back of them. Call a convention this fall and let the democrats of this country send delegates to it. In this event you will find that no man from New York, or from anywhere else, can be elected president of the United States unless he represents the priciples of the democratic party—no plutocrats or clubhangers-on."

To Make English Martyrs Saints.

New York, June 6.—It is reported from Rome that the pope has ordered the sacred congregation to study the possibility of making some English martyrs saints.

Removal of the Auditor of the Navy.

Washington, June 6.—A. B. Morton of Maine, auditor of the treasury for the navy department, has been removed from office.

To Tax Absentee Landlords.

Sydney, N. S. W., June 6.—The assembly has adopted a motion in favor of an income tax on absentee landlords.

ORDER OF EASTERN STAR.

Miss Jessie Ray Elected Grand Matron—Other Officers Elected.

New York, June 6.—The only business transacted at the second days' session of the convention of the grand chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star was the annual election of officers. A spirited discussion preceded the balloting as to the candidates for the principal offices. Finally Miss Jessie Ray was elected grand matron and Dr. J. V. B. Green of this city grand patron. Mrs. Elizabeth Patterson, the retiring grand matron, was presented by the grand chapter with a handsome badge suspended from a diamond crescent. The badge was inlaid with diamonds and rubies and bore five points of the floral star signifying the degree. The remaining elections resulted as follows: Miss Annie Brooks, Brooklyn, associate grand matron; Otto Frassold, Albany, associate grand patron; Mrs. Emma J. McKissock, treasurer; Mrs. Christine Buttrick, secretary; Mrs. Emily Gillen, Brooklyn, grand conductress, and Mrs. Ida Hannigan, Gouveneur, N. Y., associate grand conductress.

THE COLIMA DISASTER.

A Government Inquiry Into Its Causes To Be Made.

San Francisco, June 6.—The federal government is said to have decided to make a thorough investigation of the Colima disaster. It is not improbable that the state authorities also may order an investigation. The federal inquiry will be instituted by Messrs. Talbott and Hillman, inspectors of hulls and boilers. They are watching for the return of the steamer San Juan, which is expected to enter this port to-morrow. One of the first questions to be investigated is the manner in which the ship was loaded, on account of the charge that she was overloaded.

Survivors Reach Port.

Mazatlan, June 6.—A telegram from Acapulco states that the Barracouta has arrived there with Mr Childberg of Seattle and other survivors of the Colima disaster already reported. A telegram direct from Coahuaya says that no women have been saved and no bodies are coming ashore.

TO BE GUESTS OF ARKELL.

A Call for a Meeting of Republican Editors.

Albany, June 6.—William J. Arkell, president of the Republican Editorial association of the state of New York has called a meeting of the executive committee of the association and of the officers at 110 Fifth avenue, New York city, at 9 o'clock June 12. If the weather is clear President Arkell will give the committee a sail down the bay in his private yacht Judge, spending the night either at Long Branch or Coney Island, returning to the city on the 13th. In case of the sail, the meeting will be held on the boat. The meeting is for important business, the consideration of practical work of the association for this year's campaign.

O'BRIEN'S FAREWELL ADDRESS.

He Must Leave the House of Commons After June 12.

London, June 6.—William O'Brien has issued a farewell address to the electors of Cork city, for which parliamentary district he sits in the house of commons as senior member. In his address he says that he will definitely cease to represent Cork city after June 12. Mr. O'Brien's retirement from the house of commons is due to the fact that on June 12 he will be judicially declared a bankrupt, which declaration will vacate his seat in parliament. Mr. O'Brien declined to allow his friends to raise the money necessary to pay Lawyer Chance's judgment.

DAVIS WAS TOO LAX.

Why He Gave Up the Management of the New York Team.

New York, June 6.—Manager Davis of the New York baseball team tendered his resignation yesterday and it was at once accepted by President Freedman. Doyle was appointed manager and captain and took charge of the team. The reason for the change was that Davis was too lax and did not attend strictly to business. He was satisfied to give up his authority and as soon as his arm is in good condition will resume his old place at third base.

BREAK IN ERIE CANAL.

It Will Require Several Days To Mend the Damage.

Amsterdam, N. Y., June 6.—The break in the Erie canal above Pattersonville is so extensive that it will require four or five days to make the repairs. When the break occurred the water rushed in considerable volume into the river. A canal boat loaded with lumber was carried along by the flood and caught in the debris. It was badly wrecked and broke in two. No one was injured.

Servants Are Preferred Creditors.

Albany, June 6.—Mr. Brush's bill giving domestic servants preference when a receiver has been appointed has been signed by Gov. Morton. The bill provides that where a receiver has been appointed the wages of any servant or employe shall have preference above all other creditors, and must be paid out of the first moneys coming into his hands.

Beneficial Rain in Upper Michigan.

Houghton, Mich., June 6.—Heavy rains which have fallen throughout the upper peninsula during the past thirty-six hours are of much value to crops and of great assistance to the lumber operators, who, with high water, will float down from fifty to one hundred million feet of pine logs now hung up on the drives.

Fog Delayed the St. Louis.

New York, June 6.—Pilot E. M. Butler, who took the new American line steamer St. Louis to sea, came up from the station boat of the British steamer Manitou last night and reported that the steamer was detained in the lower bay several hours by dense fog.

Maryland Republicans.

Baltimore, June 6.—The republican state central committee have decided to hold the republican state convention at Cambridge, August 15. This is viewed as a victory for Hon. Lloyd Lowndes, the gubernatorial candidate.

Mr. Gladstone Greatly Improved.

London, June 6.—There has been marked improvement in Mr. Gladstone's health and this morning he went out driving.

CLAVIJO DIED HARD

It Took Five Bullets To Kill Him.

Fell with Three Wounds in His Head, But Breathed Until One More Ball Was Fired into His Head and Another Through His Heart—Horror Among the Crowd.

Madrid, June 6.—Capt. Clavijo, who shot and seriously wounded Capt.-Gen. Prima-Rivera, after the latter had refused him the hand of his daughter on Monday last, and who was tried by court martial and sentenced to death Tuesday, was shot yesterday. An attempt which was made to secure a commutation of the sentence for Clavijo on account of supposed mental disease was brushed aside by the authorities, and the sentence executed without postponement.

He Was Hard To Kill.

Clavijo first fell with three bullets in his head. He still moved after a soldier had fired another shot into his head from under his chin. Even that failed to kill him, and he did not die until another soldier fired a bullet through his heart. The scene created excitement and horror among the crown of spectators present.

CORNELL CREW ARRIVES.

They Are in Fine Trim To Meet the Britons.

Southampton, June 6.—The American line steamer Paris, from New York on May 29, having on board the Cornell university crew, which is to compete in the Henley regatta, has arrived here.

Never in Better Condition.

The college oarsmen were never in more fit condition and they are very sanguine of success. Several of the party were seasick during the first days of the voyage, but they soon recovered and suffered no bad effects. Rope-jumping was indulged in on the passage to give the men exercise and to keep them to weight. Their meals, which were selected for them, were served in their own cabins, and, under the direction of Mr. Courtney, the coach of the crew, every precaution was taken to have them land in England in first-class shape.

Presented with an Address.

At breakfast yesterday morning the crew were presented with an address from 175 of the American passengers, wishing them success in their undertaking. C. S. Francis, manager of the crew, is confident of the result of the visit.

Comment of the English Press.

London, June 6.—The Sporting Life states that "Never since the appearance of the Harvard team in 1862 has a more formidable American 'combine' than that of Cornell thrown down the gauntlet, and they must doubtless be labelled 'dangerous.'"

ARMS TO REPEL SHEEPMEN.

Colorado Cattlemen Threaten To Use Force if Necessary.

Red Park, Col., June 6.—It is reported that sheepmen are driving their herds this way and there is great activity among the cattlemen and settlers. At a meeting of cattlemen resolutions were passed warning the sheepmen not to enter the parks, and a messenger has been sent to deliver this ultimatum at California park. The ultimatum is to the effect that the sheepmen must turn their herds southward within six hours or force will be used. A number of covered wagons, presumably containing arms, were seen near Sibley yesterday. At Hayden there is great excitement and nearly every man is armed.

MUST PAY OUT NO MONEY.

So Globe Trotter Thompson Will Spend a Month in Jail.

Newburyport, Mass., June 6.—Harry Thompson, who says he is climbing around the earth once or twice on a wager of $10,000, was fined $1 in the police court yesterday because he became unduly exhilerated as the result of frequent treats. One of the specifications of his contract being that he shall expend no money which comes into his possession, he could not pay the fine, all his available capital being banked at his last resting place. He will spend the next thirty days in jail, but figures that even that will leave him a little ahead of schedule time.

DECLINES A DECORATION.

Herbert Spencer Says His Opinions Debar Him from Accepting It.

London, June 6.—Herbet Spencer, who was one of the three men outside of Germany who were recently appointed by the emperor knight of the order of merit, has declined the proffered honor on the ground that his opinions, repeatedly expressed in his writings, debar him from accepting it.

New Haven & Hartford Rumor

New York, June 6.—There are many stories in circulation to-day regarding the relations between New York, New Haven & Hartford and New York & New England railroads. If New Haven has secured the property no one interested will admit it. It is believed the rumors are circulated for stock jobbing purposes.

May Be a Cup Defender.

Wilmington, Del., June 6.—W. Gould Brokaw's new steel yacht Amorita was launched yesterday by the Harlan & Hollingsworth company. The yacht is 99 feet long. She will leave for New York in about three weeks. She is expected to be a fast racer and may be a cup defender.

Gail Hamilton's Condition.

Washington, June 6.—Gail Hamilton rested easier last night. Nourishment in the shape of milk was given her which she took naturally. Although much improved she is still seriously ill and the family have only the slightest hopes of her ultimate recovery.

Germanic Makes a New Record.

Queenstown, June 6.—The White Star line steamer Germanic, from New York, has arrived, having made the voyage in 7 days, 2 hours and 21 minutes, beating her best previous eastern record. The route she took covered 2,894 miles.

JUSTICE CAUGHT NAPPING.

Judge Irving Signed His Own Death Warrant for a Dollar.

A prominent lawyer of New Jersey tells a story of New York city judges of forty years ago that always fetches a smile. Judge John T. Irving, the upright and conscientious brother of Washington Irving, is the hero of the alleged incident. It occurred in the days when judges received a fee of $1 for every paper they signed.

One day two prominent New York lawyers, so the story runs, were in Judge Irving's court when he was busily engaged in signing papers. There was a long line of lawyers filing slowly in front of his desk, and as each passed up his papers he at the same time laid down a corresponding number of dollars. The judge would glance at the papers, make a scrawl on each and take up the next package, the pile of greenbacks growing steadily as the line of lawyers thinned out. One of the two lawyers looking on said to his companion:

"I have the highest respect for the judge's integrity, but I'm satisfied he doesn't know half the time what he is signing. Why, watch him. It is impossible for him to get half of an idea of what is on the paper. If he examined each one closely he'd never get done; but he should be more careful, nevertheless."

The other lawyer declared the judge caught at a glance the important sentence or phrase of each.

"Well, I don't believe it," exclaimed the other. "I feel sure, in spite of better intentions, that that one dollar fee acts as incentive and causes his honor to slight his work, and I'm going to prove what I say."

With that he strode out of the room, and presently returned with a legal form signed by the sheriff, and which set forth that on such and such a day and at a certain hour and in a certain place, Irving was to be hanged by the neck until he should be dead. The lawyer then took his place in the line filing before the judge's desk. When it came his turn he held up the paper, folded between his fingers in a nonchalant manner, and laid down his $1 with the other hand.

His honor unfolded his paper and hurriedly plunged his pen in the ink. There was a splutter and a scrawl, and Judge Irving had signed his own death warrant. That night the lawyer went to a social gathering, which Judge Irving was to attend, with the death warrant in his pocket. When he found himself in a corner with the judge he said:

"Judge, I was watching you signing papers to-day and I couldn't for the life of me understand how you can read them all. Do you really read them?"

"Why, certainly. It's a matter of habit, you know. I have acquired it by years of practice. I can at a glance detect the really important sentence or word."

"Well," said the lawyer, producing the death warrant and folding it in such a manner that the name of Judge Irving only was visible, "is that your signature?"

The judge put on his glasses, stared at the paper an instant, and then declared it was his signature. The lawyer then unfolded the paper and handed it to the judge. The latter read it and turned crimson.

After that the signing of papers in Judge Irving's court was as long and tedious a process as it had been rapid and careless before.

FASHION IN FIJI.

It Gives as Much Concern to the Ladies There as Elsewhere.

Fijian women have a most affectionate disposition, although, like all semi-civilized people, they are extremely sensitive and ready to take offense at the veriest trifles. Their skins are usually of a bright dark brown, smooth and glossy as polished marble, and many, while young, possess handsome features and most symmetrical forms; but unfortunately their natural grace speedily disappears after marriage—at least among the common people, who have no attendants to relieve them in the heavier duties of the household. While unmarried their hair, picturesquely adorned with hibiscus and other flowers, is permitted to fall in thin plaits down the back of the neck. This is regarded as a sign of maidenhood. After marriage the plaits are cut off and not allowed to be worn again.

In Suva and Levuka the women generally wear a blouse shaped pinafore of thin white cotton, but in their homes or in the interior districts they are content with the sulu, a kind of loin cloth made from the bark of the native mulberry tree, and wrapped two or three times round the body. The manufacture of this cloth, called tappa, is one of the leading industries in Fiji, the bark being beaten with wooden mallets into thin sheets, which are joined together as required. When taking part in the mekemeke, or native dance, the girls wear a short, thick petticoat of dried grass, adorned with black and yellow tappa streamers, the bodies remaining bare from the waist upward. The hair is decorated with flowers and frequently frizzed and plaited in a fashion somewhat resembling that depicted in Assyrian sculptures.

Unfair Advantage.

"Jack is a hateful fellow."

"Why?"

"He said he would marry some other girl if I refused him."

TROUBLE IN FORMOSA

Collapse of the So-Called Republic.

President Tang Escapes from the Island and His Soldiers Join the Chinese Mobs in Looting and Burning Public Buildings—Foreigners Believed To Be Safe.

Hong Kong, June 6.—The so-called republic of Formosa has collapsed: its president, Tang, has escaped from the island. The foreigners residing there are said to be safe. The Chinese forces in the northern part of the island became disorganized at the approach of the Japanese troops, and the soldiers of the president of the republic joined the mob in rioting, looting and in burning the government building at Taipeh-Fu and Hobe.

Public Buildings Burned and Looted

Shanghai, June 6.—Dispatches published here by the local press indicate great excitement in the island of Formosa. The president of the republic has escaped, and official buildings have been burned by rioters. The natives and the Chinese soldiers are said to be looting in all directions. The foreigners on the island so far have not been molested.

Business at a Standstill.

New York, June 6.—A dispatch was received by E. A. Willard & Co., tea brokers, this city, from Lapraik, Cass & Co., shippers at Amoy, China, saying that in consequence of the capture of Kelung by the Japanese serious troubles had broken out at Hobe, the shipping port of Formosa, and at Taipeh-Fu, the city at which the foreign trade tea firms are situated. This dispatch said that the arsenal had been looted, the official building, called the Yamen, burned, and business generally brought to to standstill.

EXPERIMENT TOO COSTLY.

The Pimlico Running Meeting Ends in Disaster.

Baltimore, June 6.—The Pimlico running meeting ended in gloom and disaster yesterday afternoon. The last race of the day was preceded by an announcement that the meeting would end with the steeplechase; that the experiment had cost $1,500 daily; that the majority of the members of the Pimlico Driving club did not desire and would not support the running meeting, and that the executive committee did not feel justified in continuing the programme for the balance of the week. It was claimed that the Jockey club broke faith in allowing racing at Gravesend in conflict with the Pimlico meeting; that only inferior horses and jockeys were sent here, and that the alleged protection of the Jockey club would not be sufficient to cause arrangements to be made for a fall meeting.

PASSED THE ST. LOUIS.

Augusta Victoria and the New American Liner Exchange Salutes at Sea.

New York, June 6.—The Hamburg-American express steamer Augusta Victoria, from Hamburg and Southampton, arrived at her dock this morning. About six miles east of the lightship she met the new American line steamer St. Louis, bound to Southampton on her initial voyage. Capt. Kaempff ordered the Augusta Victoria dressed in flags and the steamer's orchestra played the American national airs. Both steamers dipped the national colors and salutes were exchanged by blowing steamer whistles.

CAPE COD SHIP CANAL.

Corporation Ready To Begin the Work of Construction at Once.

Boston, June 6.—Benjamin J. Berry, one of the incorporators of the Cape Cod Ship canal bill, which Tuesday became a law, and who has been for ten years endeavoring to secure the passage of such a bill, stated last evening in an interview that the incorporators, all of whom are Massachusetts men, are prepared to begin the work of construction at once; that they feel sure of success, and that in two years ships will be passing through the canal. The work is expected to cost from $5,000,000 to $8,000,000.

JERSEY REFORM MEASURES.

The Publication and Printing Repealers Passed by the Senate.

Trenton, N. J., June 6.—The senate passed, by a vote 18 to 1, Mr. Winton, of Bergen, casting the negative vote, the act repealing seventeen different laws relating to the publication of the laws in the newspapers. The bill providing for the printing of the laws in sheets for free distribution and the bill providing that the legislative printing shall hereafter be done by contract were passed.

French Repulsed in Madagascar.

Paris, June 6.—Advices received here from Antananarivo, Madagascar, dated May 15, say that the French advance into the interior from Mojunga has been repulsed. The mortality among the French troops on account of fevers is increasing.

Bissell in Good Health.

Buffalo, June 6.—The report that ex-Postmaster-General Bissell is bound for Asheville, N. C., for his health is untrue. He is at his home in this city, and is in the best of health. He has no intention of going to Asheville.

Wages To Be Restored.

Easton, Pa., June 6.—The wages of the 500 employes of the Warren pipe foundry and machine shops at Phillipsburg, N. J., will be increased 10 per cent. on July 1.

Eau Gallie Did Not Run.

London, June 6.—Richard Croker's 3-year-old colt Eau Gallie did not run in the Salford Borough handicap at Manchester yesterday.

PANIC AT JIDDAH.

Europeans Have Taken Refuge on the Foreign Vessels.

London, June 6.—A dispatch to the Globe from Constantinople says that a panic prevails in Jiddah, and that the Europeans there have taken refuge on board the foreign vessels in the harbor, fearing that they will be attacked by the Bedouins.

Causes of the Trouble.

Constantinople, June 6.—The chief causes of the aggressiveness of the Bedouins at Jiddah are their objection to the quarantine measures adopted against pilgrims to and from Mecca, and the erection of huts for the use of pilgrims outside the city of Jiddah. These measures are strenuously opposed by the fanatical Bedouins.

The Porte Further Involved.

The porte has become involved in an additional diplomatic complication arising from the wounding of an officer of a French steamship by a Turkish passenger and the subsequent arrest of the Turk. The Turkish officer, who was traveling on the ship from Trebizond to Constantinople, refusing to pay the required sum for the transportation of excessive luggage.

Satisfaction Demanded.

In the course of the ensuing altercation the Turkish officer wounded one of the ship's officers with his sword. The Turkish officer was immediately put under arrest and detained on board after the arrival of the ship at Constantinople. The matter was reported to M. Cambon, the French ambassdor, who has demanded satisfaction from the porte for the wounding of a French citizen.

FORGET HIM AS AN ENEMY.

Col. Sandoval's Address Over the Alleged Corpse of Marti.

Santiago de Cuba, May 27, via Jacksonville, Fla., June 6.—When the lid of the coffin containing the alleged body of Jose Marti was removed in order that the populace might see and identify it, the head was so decomposed that identification was impossible even by those who had known him intimately. Colonel Sandoval, who commanded the Spanish troops in the engagement in which Marti is said to have been killed, then delivered the following address:

All Enmity Must Cease.

Gentlemen: In the presence of him who was in life Jose Marti, and in the absence of any one nearer of kin, I pronounce the usual phrases of these occasions. I request you not to look upon this corpse as that of an enemy, but as the body of a man whose political ideas placed him before the Spanish soldiers. From the moment the spirit abandons the earthly body the Almighty receives the soul with generous pardon; and we, in taking charge of the body, all rancor as towards an enemy ceasing, must give it the Christian burial it deserves.

LAMONT LEAVES WEST POINT.

Reception Given in Honor of the Secretary Last Night.

West Point, N. Y., June 6.—Secretary of War Lamont, Mrs. Lamont and Col. John M. Wilson left for Washington this morning. They arrived here yesterday afternoon and were received at the station by Col. Ernst, Adjt.-Gen. Ruggles, Lieut. Carson and Lieut. Butler. A salute of twenty-one guns was fired in honor of the secretary. The battalion of cadets under command of Col. Mills escorted the party from the brow of the hill and around the officers' quarters to the hotel, where an informal reception was held for half an hour. A reception was held at the superintendent's quarters last evening in honor of the secretary.

MILLVILLE'S TROLLEY WAR.

Mayor Payne and Others Summoned Before Chancellor McGill.

Millville, N. J., June 6.—A climax was reached in the trolley war last evening, when a restraining order was served on Mayor Payne, Contractor Barnes and Eugene Goodwin, commanding them to appear before Vice-Chancellor McGill in Camden to-day and show cause why a permanent injunction should not be issued, preventing them from interfering with the running of cars over the Millville Traction company's road. They will fight the application.

AILSA MAY COME OVER.

A Possible Challenger for the Cup if She Can Beat Valkyrie III.

London, June 6.—The Pall Mall Gazette ascribes the Ailsa's success in the Mediterranean and her failure in England to the fact of her having been designed as a possible challenger for the America's cup in the event that Lord Dunraven should find her superior to the Valkyrie under the conditions governing races in New York bay.

Charged with Malpractice.

New Bedford, Mass., June 6.—Dr. Ezekiel H. Noble was arrested last night on a warrant charging him with criminal malpractice on April 30, on the person of Miss Laura A. Atwood, 20 years old, of Rock Pass. Miss Atwood died Tuesday evening. Anderson W. Kelley, a bookkeeper at Fair Haven, is also under arrest. Both men were unable to secure bail.

Explosion on the Yacht Savoia.

London, June 6.—An explosion of coal gas occured last evening on the Italian royal yacht Savoia, now lying at Dartmouth. Three firemen were seriously injured by the explosion. The Duke of Genoa, who came to England on the yacht, was not aboard of her at the time of the accident.

LIKE A ROYAL EVENT

Grandeur Marks the Burden-Sloane Wedding.

The Guests Present Worth More Than Crœsus—A $50,000 Bridal Gown and $50,000 for a Traveling Outfit—Presents Costing More Than $500,000.

Lenox, Mass., June 6.—This village to-day is in possession of New Yorkers. Last evening two special trains containing over 300 honored invited guests to the Burden-Sloane wedding, which takes place to-day at noon, arrived here from New York city. The town is gay with fashionable people, and last night strings of electric lights glittered around the public square, where a band was playing. The ceremony will be attended by the wealthy element of the metropolis, and at its conclusion receptions will be held at the different cottages for the entertainment of the visitors.

Money Enough To Buy a Kingdom.

The cost of the entertainment last night would endow a free chair of any science to any university. That which will be held to-day, together with the presents that will be an accompaniment of it, would suffice to pay the entire expenses of the government of the state of New York for one year. There is wealth enough represented here to buy outright almost any kingdom in Europe. There is more by far than ever before gathered in any one place at any one time. In the gayest days of the regime of the monarchy in France, when every land was laid under tribute for all that was sparkling in gem and brilliant in fancy, nothing has been that equaled this.

Wealth's Tribute to Wealth.

To accommodate the guests the finest hotel here has been hired and entirely refurnished for the occasion, while the cottages have been built into castles that the visitors may have entertainment worthy of their wealth. It is wealth paying its highest tribute to wealth and it has drafted into its service the most expert decorators and skillful gardeners and musicians, whose fees of themselves mount high into the thousands.

Love and Romance.

And it is a story of love and of romance that brings them here. It is the marriage of an untitled but wealthy young heiress to an equally untitled but wealthy young American who woed and won her, that has brought together this extraordinary gathering of the multi-millionaires of America. The beautiful girl is Adele Vanderbilt Sloane and the fortunate young man is James A. Burden, jr. To wish them well, men and women representing in the aggregate and commanding not less than one thousand millions of dollars have come here.

$50,000 Bridal Gown.

Miss Sloane will be an attractive bride. The bridal gown and pearl trimmings alone, cost $50,000. In the church she will wear the best dress that can be designed and made. The ceremony will take place in Trinity Episcopal church at high noon. The floral decorations, which have been in charge of a staff of florists, are very elaborate. The extensive lawn about Elm court is closely clipped and the foliage and shrubbery are in excellent condition. Mr. Sloane has had two large tents put up on the lawn for the accomodation of his guests, and an excellent band of twenty-five pieces will furnish music for dancing on the green, while another band of fifteen pieces will play in the house.

$500,000 in Presents.

In round figures $500,000 did not purchase the presents. One empire brooch alone, of original design, is valued at $30,000. Then there is an opera glass which cost the donor $5,000. Miss Sloane's traveling outfit, is simply a revelation, has been made in Paris. It contains about everything that can be thought of in connection with a trousseau. It cost about $50,000.

HONORING NASRULLA KHAN.

A Grand Review of Troops for the Visiting Prince.

London, June 6.—There was a grand review of troops at Aldershot yesterday in honor of the visiting Afghan prince, Nasrulla Khan, in which 18,000 men took part. Nasrulla Khan, attired in a scarlet uniform and wearng a sword with a golden scabbard, was accompanied from London by the Prince of Wales, the Duke of Cambridge, the Marchioness of Lorne and Gen. Lord Roberts, and received by Duke of Connaught, who entertained the party at luncheon.

Zimmerman Challenges Johnson.

Asbury Park, N. J., June 6.—Arthur A. Zimmerman, champion professional bicyclist of the world, has challenged John S. Johnson, recently declared a professional, to a race at any distance from one-quarter of a mile to fifty miles, for $5,000 a side.

Two Important Bills Defeated.

Harrisburg, Pa., June 6.—The senate committee on education has killed two very important bills—the Smith bill, providing distribution of the school fund and the bill to give women school teachers the same salary as men when they do the same work.

Doesn't Need Investigation.

Boston, June 6.—In the senate the committee to whom was refersed the Hutchinson order calling for an investigation of the departments of the city government, reported that there seemed to be no occasion for such an investigation.

Annual Supply Measure Signed.

Albany, June 6.—Gov. Morton has signed the annual supply bill which appropriates in round numbers $1,800,000. The most unusual thing connected with the governor's approval of the bill is that he vetoed only two small items.

Waiting for the Loan.

St. John's, N. F., June 6.—Another adjournment of the legislature was had yesterday. The house will not meet until Colonial Secretary Bond concludes his negotiations in London in connection with the loan.

Governor Altgeld says that when the Illinois State Democratic convention decided for free silver they represented ninety per cent. of the party. Senator Palmer says in reference to the same matter that they only represent fifteen per cent. It looks bad for the Illinois Democrats when two such public men disagree as to where their friends are at.

The aptness of what Councilman Frost said Monday night in reference to the city endeavoring to secure only the most expert advisors in the construction of the sewer system, and thereby avoid complications, legal or otherwise, was well illustrated before the Supreme Court at Trenton, Tuesday, when the sewer contracts of Westfield, where they were not so careful, were set aside.

In Bloomfield they have hens, and wherever there are hens there are roosters. Roosters are bound to crow, because that is one of the proper functions of the barnyard king. But the roosters in Bloomfield must be troubled with insomnia, for they do a great deal of crowing in the dark hours of the night. This condition of affairs has created trouble in Bloomfield. Mrs. Geckler asserts that the cuckle doodle do disturbs her sleep and she has therefore made complaint to the Board of Health. These officials investigated the case and found the boisterous rooster to be a member of a model hennery. Now the Board of Health is perplexed, and are awaiting a decision from counsel as to whether or not they have authority to stop the rooster from crowing. For the sake of suffering humanity in the future from such afflictions as undue rooster crowing, it is to be hoped that an affirmative decision will be rendered by the counsel, so that the world may profit from the experiments which may be invoked to stop this nuisance.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destored forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflammed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh, that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

New York Fashion Letter.

In the make up of the summer wardrobe for leaving town, the bicycle gown, or rather the bicycle outfit, is such an important factor that the choice of material and style is a serious question. Mohair or alapaca is a favorite fabric, and is equally desirable for street and traveling costume on account of its light weight. Linen, duck and holland in tailor form, with blazer or Eton jacket and dainty cotton or silk shirts are made up for mid-summer wear. For cooler days the Norfolk jacket increases in popularity. Mohair also appears in the new bathing costumes and is a serviceable fabric as it does not easily absorb water. The "Trilby" jackets, now so popular, are very pretty in mohair, lined with bright colors and trimmed with revers of velvet or silk. These jackets are made up in the same material of the skirt as well as of pique, embroidery and linen to be worn with wool skirts. Fancy waists are more abundant, more varied and more attractive than ever. The styles, fabrics and trimming with their Dresden and Watteau effects are ideal.

"La Mode de Paris" and "Paris Album of Fashion" cost $3.50 each for a year's subscription, or 35 cents a copy. "The French Dressmaker" is $3 per annum, or 30 cents a copy; and "La Mode" $1.50 a year, or 15 cents a copy. If you are unable to procure either of these journals from your newsdealer do n't take any substitute, but apply by mail to Messrs. A. McDowell & Co., 4 West 14th street, New York city.

LOOKS LIKE BUSINESS.

Legal Application To Be Made For Extending Duer Street.

The German Reformed church of Craig place, who will be on the corner of Duer street, if that street is opened to Front street, hold a meeting tonight for the purpose of making the necessary legal application to the Borough Council tomorrow night, asking that the extension be made as proposed.

WATSON GOES TO JAIL.

But He Will Probably Carry His Case Into Higher Courts.

Michael Watson, who was convicted for violating the excise laws in this city, and sentenced to pay a fine and serve a term in the county jail, was this morning taken to Elizabeth by Chief Grant and incarcerated in jail. It is probable that Watson will carry his case into the higher courts, in the hope to escape serving time.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—A business meeting of the McAll auxiliary was held in the Public Library yesterday morning.

—Hillier & Co. are doing a great laundry business nowadays, and their work gives excellent satisfaction.

—A report has been in circulation that J. Goldstein, the Park avenue clothier, has sold out. This is untrue.

—Woolston & Buckle have received the contract for the interior decoration of a handsome residence at Alexander Bay, Thousands Islands, and are now preparing to ship the goods.

Go and Patronize Them.

The members of Whatsoever Circle of King's Daughters of Trinity Reformed church are busily engaged today in preparing for the opening of their strawberry and ice cream festival this evening, and which will be continued tomorrow night. Prof. Conde's symphony orchestra will furnish music for the occasion and a good time is assured to all who attend.

Blimm's Case Adjourned.

In the city court this afternoon the case of Jacob Blimm, arrested for violation of excise laws, was adjourned to next Wednesday, on demand for a jury trial.

St. Mary's Festival Postponed.

The festival to be given by the Children of Mary in the C. Y. M. L. hall last night and tonight, was postponed. It will be held this and tomorrow evenings.

Lack of Evidence.

The case of Mrs. Eskerson against her husband for non-support came up in Justice Mosher's court today. Owing to a lack of evidence the case was dismissed.

Counselor Powers.

J. P. Powers this morning was successful in passing a law examination, and is now a counselor at law.

A great game of ball will be played on Drake park at Westfield tomorrow afternoon at four o'clock, when the Stars, of New York, a female nine, will contest with the local team. A number of Plainfielders will probably attend in disguise.

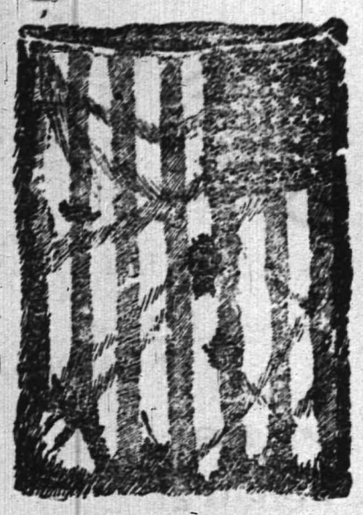
Rev. J. W. Richardson, has been invited and will deliver an address before the Somerset County Christian Endeavor convention to be held in the Congregational church tomorrow evening.

Mr. Perkins, formerly in the clothing business in this city, is renewing acquaintances in Plainfield today.

VETERANS RECALL SUMTER.

At the Annual Banquet the Old Flag is Displayed.

The fourth annual banquet of the Veteran Association of the Department of the South and the South Atlantic Blockading Squadron of the State of New York was held at St. George's Hotel, Brooklyn, recently.



Gen. Stewart L. Woodford presided. At one of the tables were seated six members of the Anderson Zouave Veteran Association in full uniform. They were the guard of honor to the old flag of Fort Sumter, which had been placed in their keeping by the widow of the hero of Fort Sumter and the present owner of the relic.

CHURCH CHIMES.

The Ladies Aid society of Hope chapel, will give an ice-cream and strawberry festival this evening.

Mrs. Emily Pearl Jenkins, of Bridgeport, gave an interesting address before the Young Ladies Christian league, yesterday afternoon.

The quarterly meeting of the Woman's Home Missionary society will be held in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue church on Friday afternoon at four o'clock.

The Christian Endeavor society of Warren chapel will give a Japanese tea and entertainment, to be concluded with tableaus, in the chapel Wednesday evening, June 19th.

The next meeting of the Ministers Association will be held June 10th, at the home of the Rev. M. E. Dwight, on Rockview avenue. A paper will be read by the Rev. Joceylin Johnson.

The menbers of the Christian Endeavor society of the First Baptist church, are requested to attend the anniversary of the Endeavor society of the East Third Street mission, this evening. Besides a literary and musical programme, Dr. Yerkes will speak.

At the annual convention of the East New Jersey Baptist Association at Jersey City Tuesday Rev. D. J. Yerkes of this city delivered a sermon on "The Duties of the Church." He was also made a member of the committee to report a plan for doing the best possible work for the association.

A special service will be held at the East Third Street Mission this evening. The Christian Endeavor societies of the First Baptist church and the mission will participate, and addresses will be made by Rev. Dr. Yerkes, and presidents John McLaughlin and Irving Brady of the societies. Miss Bessie Blair will be the soloist, and Miss Florence Dodge the accompanist.

The Consistory of Trinity Reformed church have granted a vacation to Rev. Cornelius Schenck, their pastor, until September 1st, and longer, if necessary, to enable him to regain his health. Mr. Schenck is a great sufferer from an affliction of the head, causing nearly total deafness. He is being treated by a celebrated New York specialist, who demands that he must have complete rest from church work for a time at least. The Press believes that all of God's people in Plainfield will pray that Mr. Schenck will speedily recover and be restored to his congregation to continue the work of soul saving.

Exempts Won't Celebrate.

At the meeting of the Exempt Firemen last evening the question as to whether parading and taking an active part in the Fourth of July celebration was thoroughly discussed and finally decided that they would not. This was so decided, because so many of the exempts belong to other societies that there would hardly be enough to make a good showing.

Sewer Work Suspended.

The work of trenching Watchung avenue has been suspended for a day or two, owing to its being found necessary to lay the pipes on the west side of the street, on account of the obstruction of old sewer pipes and water pipes in the surveyed line.

Mr. MacPhie to Talk.

D. A. MacPhie, the physical director of the Y. M. C. A., will address the men's meeting at the association building on Sunday at 4:15 p. m. The double male quartette and boy choir will sing selections.

The Sky Was Afire.

The thunder and rain storm last night was the most severe which this vicinity has experienced in a long time, though but little damage is reported.

Sometime ago I was troubled with an attack of rheumatism. I used Chamberlain's Pain Balm and was completely cured. I have since advised many of my friends and customers to try the remedy and all speak highly of it. Simon Goldbaum, San Luis Rey, Cal. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. S. THE BEE HIVE ANNIVERSARY.

Plaut & Co., of Newark, Have Been in Business Twenty-Five Years.

The Newark "Bee Hive", L. S. Plaut & Co.'s dry goods emporium, is this week celebrating the twenty-fifth anniversary of its incorporation. The business that today is one of the largest in the State began life a quarter of a century ago in one-half of a little store at 721 Broad street. The firm's trade grew with the city, outstripping scores of contemporaries, and proving that the American public appreciates business enterprise, particularly when it is modestly yet liberally advertised. The present firm comprises Louis Plaut, Moses Plaut, Oscar Michaels, and Mrs. L. S. Plaut, the widow of the founder of the business.

—The public schools close two weeks from today.

Old People.

Old people who require medicine to regulate the bowels and kidneys will find the true remedy in Electric Bitters. This medicine does not stimulate and contains no whiskey nor other intoxicant, but acts as a tonic and alterative. It acts mildly on the stomach and bowels, adding strength and giving tone to the organs, thereby aiding nature in the performance of the functions. Electric Bitters is an excellent appetizer and aids digestion. Old people find it just exactly what they need. Price 50c a bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

While in Topeka last March, E. T. Barber, a prominent newspaper man of La Cygne, Kansas, was taken with cholera morbus very severely. The night clerk at the hotel where he was stopping happened to have a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and gave him three doses which relieved him and he thinks saved his life. Every family should keep this remedy in their home at all times. No one can tell how soon it may be needed. It costs but a trifle and may be the means of saving much suffering and perhaps the life of some member of the family. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

I have two little grandchildren who are teething this hot summer weather and are troubled with bowel complaint. I give them Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and it acts like a charm. I earnestly recommend it for children with bowel troubles. I was myself taken with a severe attack of bloody flux, with cramps and pains in my stomach, one-third of a bottle of this remedy cured me. Within twenty-four hours I was out of bed and doing my housework. Mrs. W. L. Dunagan, Bonaqua, Hickman Co., Tenn.

For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves., T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

While at Peekskill, N. Y., Mr. J. A. Scriven, a prominent manufacturer of New York City, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Such good results were obtained from its use that he sent back to the druggist from whom he had obtained it for two more bottles of the same remedy. When you have a cough or cold give this preparation a trial and like Mr. Scriven you will want it when again in need of such a medicine. It is a remedy of great worth and merit. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

SKETCHES OF LINCOLN.

He Is Mentioned as a Presidential Candidate.

HIS COOPER INSTITUTE SPEECH.

Speaking In New England—Two Historic Rails—How He Received His Nomination—Deep and Unusual Emotion—Evolution of the Backwoodsman.

[From "The Life of Lincoln" by William H. Herndon and Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1888, by Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1892, by D. Appleton & Co.]

XX.

The opening of the year 1860 found Mr. Lincoln's name freely mentioned in connection with the Republican nomination for the presidency. To be classed with Seward, Chase, McLean and other celebrities was enough to stimulate any Illinois lawyer's pride, but in Mr. Lincoln's case, if it had any such effect, he was most artful in concealing it. Now and then some ardent friend, an editor, for example, would run his name up to the masthead, but in all cases he discouraged the attempt. "In regard to the matter you spoke of," he answered one man who proposed his name, "I beg that you will not give it a further mention. Seriously, I do not think I am fit for the presidency."

The first effort in his behalf as a presidential aspirant was the action taken by his friends at a meeting held in the statehouse early in 1860 in the rooms of O. M. Hatch, then secretary of state. Besides Hatch there were present Norman B. Judd, chairman of the Republican state committee; Ebenezer Peck, Jackson Grimshaw and others of equal prominence in the party. "We all expressed a personal preference for Mr. Lincoln," relates one who was a participant in the meeting, "as the Illinois candidate for the presidency and asked him if his name might be used at once in connection with the nomination and election. With his characteristic modesty he doubted whether he could get the nomination even if he wished it and asked until the next morning to answer us whether his name might be announced. Late the next day he authorized us, if we thought proper to do so, to place him in the field." To the question from Mr. Grimshaw whether, if the nomination for president could not be obtained, he would accept the post of vice president he answered that he would not; that his name having been used for the office of president he would not permit it to be used for any other office, however honorable it might be. This meeting was preliminary to the Decatur convention and was also the first concerted action in his behalf on the part of his friends.

RESIDENCE AT SPRINGFIELD.

A Great Speech.

In the preceding October he came rushing into the office one morning with the letter from New York city inviting him to deliver a lecture there and asked my advice and that of other friends as to the subject and character of his address. We all recommended a speech on the political situation. Remembering his poor success as a lecturer himself, he adopted our suggestions. He accepted the invitation of the New York committee, at the same time notifying them that his speech would deal entirely with political questions, and fixing a day late in Feburary as the most convenient time. Meanwhile he spent the intervening time in careful preparation. He searched through the dusty volumes of congressional proceedings in the state library and dug deeply into political history. He was painstaking and thorough in the study of his subject, but when at last he left for New York we had many misgivings—and he not a few himself—of his success in the great metropolis. What effect the unpretentious western lawyer would have on the wealthy and fashionable society of the great city could only be conjectured. A description of the meeting at Cooper institute, a list of the names of the prominent men and women present or an account of Lincoln in the delivery of the address would be needless repetition of well known history. It only remains to say that his speech was devoid of all rhetorical imagery, with a marked suppression of the pyrotechnics of stump oratory. It was constructed with a view to accuracy of statement, simplicity of language and unity of thought. In some respects like a lawyer's brief, it was logical, temperate in tone, powerful, irresistibly driving conviction home to men's reasons and their souls. No former effort in the line of speechmaking had cost Lincoln so much time and thought as this one. It is said by one of his biographers that those afterward engaged in getting out the speech as a campaign document were three weeks in verifying the statements and finding the historical records referred to and consulted by him.

The day following the Cooper institute meeting the leading New York dailies published the speech in full and made favorable editorial mention of it and of the speaker as well. It was plain now that Lincoln had captured the metropolis. From New York he traveled to New England to visit his son Robert, who was attending college. In answer to the many calls and invitations which showered on him he spoke at various places in Connecticut, Rhode Island and New Hampshire. In all these places he not only left deep impressions of his ability, but he convinced New England of his intense earnestness in the great cause. The newspapers treated him with no little consideration. One paper characterized his speech as one of "great fairness," delivered with "great apparent candor and wonderful interest. For the first half hour his opponents would agree with every word he uttered, and from that point he would lead them off little by little until it seemed as if he had got them all into his fold. He is far from prepossessing in personal appearance, and his voice is disagreeable, and yet he wins your attention from the start. He indulges in no flowers of rhetoric, no eloquent passages. He displays more shrewdness, more knowledge of the masses of mankind than any public speaker we have heard since Long Jim Wilson left for California."

As a Politician.

Lincoln's return to Springfield after his dazzling success in the east was the signal for earnest congratulations on the part of his friends. Seward was the great man of the day, but Lincoln had demonstrated to the satisfaction of his friends that he was tall enough and strong enough to measure swords with the Auburn statesman. His triumph in New York and New England had shown that the idea of a house divided against itself induced as strong co-operation and hearty support in prevention of a great wrong in the east as the famous "irrepressible conflict" attracted warriors to Seward's standard in the Mississippi valley. It was apparent now to Lincoln that the presidential nomination was within his reach. He began gradually to lose his interest in the law and to trim his political sails at the same time. His recent success had stimulated his self confidence to unwonted proportions. He wrote to influential party workers everywhere. I know the idea prevails that Lincoln sat still in his chair in Springfield, and that one of those unlooked for tides in human affairs came along and cast the nomination into his lap, but any man who has had experience in such things knows that great political prizes are not obtained in that way. The truth is, Lincoln was as vigilant as he was ambitious, and there is no denying the fact that he understood the situation perfectly from the start. In the management of his own interests he was obliged to rely almost entirely on his own resources. He had no money with which to maintain a political bureau, and he lacked any kind of personal organization whatever. A letter written by Lincoln about this time to a friend in Kansas serves to illustrate his methods and measures the extent of his ambition. The letter is dated March 10 and is now in my possession. For obvious reasons I withhold the friend's name: "As to your kind wishes for myself," writes Lincoln, "allow me to say I cannot enter the ring on the money basis, first, because in the main it is wrong, and, secondly, I have not and cannot get the money. I say in the main the use of money is wrong, but for certain objects in a political contest the use of some is both right and indispensable. With me, as with yourself, this long struggle has been one of great pecuniary loss. I now distinctly say this—if you shall be appointed a delegate to Chicago, I will furnish $100 to bear the expenses of the trip."

Lincoln's friend, instead of securing that delegation for him, suffered the Seward men to outgeneral him, and the prospects were by no means flattering. "I see by the dispatches," writes Lincoln in a burst of surprise, "that, since you wrote, Kansas has appointed delegates and instructed for Seward. Don't stir them up to anger, but come along to the convention, and I will do as I said about expenses." Whether the friend ever accepted Lincoln's generous offer I do not know, but it may not be without interest to state that within ten days after the latter's inauguration he appointed him to a federal office with comfortable salary attached and even asked for his preferences as to other contemplated appointments in his own state.

In the rapid, stirring scenes that crowd upon each other from this time forward the individuality of Lincoln is easily lost sight of. He was so thoroughly interwoven in the issues before the people of Illinois that he had become a part of them. Among his colleagues at the bar he was no longer looked upon as the circuit court lawyer of earlier days. To them it seemed as if the nation were about to lay its claim upon him. His tall form enlarged until, to use a figurative expression, he could no longer pass through the door of our dingy office. Reference has already been made to the envy of his rivals at the bar and the jealousy of his political contemporaries.

Very few indeed were free from the degrading passion, but it made no difference in Lincoln's treatment of them. He was as generous and deferred to them as much as ever. The first public movement by the Illinois people in his interest was the action of the state convention, which met at Decatur on the 9th and 10th of May. It was at this convention that Lincoln's friend and cousin, John Hanks, brought in the two historic rails which both had made in the Sangamon bottom in 1830, and which served the double purpose of electrifying the Illinois people and kindling the fire of enthusiasm that was destined to sweep over the nation. In the words of an ardent Lincoln delegate, "These rails were to represent the issue in the coming contest between labor free and labor slave, between democracy and aristocracy. Little did I think," continues our jubilant and effusive friend, "of the mighty consequences of this little incident. Little did I think that the tall and angular and bony rail splitter who stood in girlish diffidence bowing with awkward grace would fill the chair once filled by Washington, and that his name would echo in chants of praise along the corridor of all coming time."

Formal Notice of His Nomination.

The news of his nomination found Lincoln at Springfield in the office of The Journal. Naturally enough he was nervous, restless and laboring under more or less suppressed excitement. He had been tossing ball, a pastime frequently indulged in by the lawyers of that day, and had played a few games of billiards to keep down, as another has expressed it, "the unnatural excitement that threatened to possess him." When the telegram containing the result of the last ballot came in, although apparently calm and undisturbed, a close observer could have detected in the compressed lip and serious countenance evidences of deep and unusual emotion.

As the balloting progressed he had gone to the office of The Journal and was sitting in a large armchair there when the news of his nomination came. What a line of scenes, stretching from the barren glade in Kentucky to the jubilant and enthusiastic throng in the Wigwam at Chicago, must have broken in upon his vision as he hastened from the newspaper office to "tell a little woman down the street the news!" In the evening his friends and neighbors called to congratulate him. He thanked them feelingly and shook them each by the hand. A day later the committee from the convention, with George Ashmun of Massachusetts at its head, called and delivered formal notice of his nomination. This meeting took place at his house. His response was couched in polite and dignified language, and many of the committee, who now met him for the first time, departed with an improved impression of the new standard bearer. A few days later he wrote his official letter of acceptance, in which he warmly indorsed the resolutions of the convention. His actions and utterances so far had begun to dissipate the erroneous notion prevalent in some of the more remote eastern states that he was more of a backwoods boor than a gentleman.

"That man with the walking stick? Why, that's Hosea Lurvey, of Brodick, Esq. Looks like if he owned the whole town and part of the next, don't he?"

"Not old Hod Lurvey, of Tick Riege?"

"The very same." Hiram Tucker smiled at his companion's incredulity. "I don't wonder you're s'prised, if you recollect how Mrs. Lurvey used to run things up at the Ridge. Hod had no more to say than the yeller cat down by the fence. But there's many a change in these fifteen years you have been gone."

"I should have thought it would have taken twice fifteen years to make such a pomposity out of Hod Lurvey. He was the worst henpecked man I ever saw," replied Jasper Burroughs, tipping his chair back against the wall, preparatory to a long talk with his old time friend and neighbor.

"I told you about the saddle they bought just before I sold out, didn't I? No? Then I must. They came into the store, and Mrs. Lurvey asked to look at saddles. Of course I thought it was for herself, so I brought out a woman's saddle. She shook her head.

"'I want a man's saddle. It's for my husband.'

"So I took them out into the back shop where there was a lot hanging up. She looked them over, asked the price of this and found fault with that, and finally, picked out the poorest and cheapest of the lot. It was a shame, too, for the Lurveys were well-to-do folks, and it's cheapest in the long run to buy good leather.

"'Mayhap your husband might like to see the saddle, before you pay for it,' I said, pitying the shamefaced little man.

"'Why, don't you know Mr. Lurvey? He always depends upon my judgment. This is my husband,' drawing him forward, as if he had been a bashful boy. 'Make a bow, Mr. Lurvey.'

"He didn't come into the shop again as long as I owned it, he was that ashamed, or else that shrew of his would not let him come to the village alone. I don't suppose he ever had a cent of his own. And now you tell me that pompous old gentleman was Hod Lurvey. Why, it would be nothing short of a miracle."

"It's quite a story, Jasper, but if you don't mind listening, I'll tell you how it came about," replied Hiram Tucker, moving his chair so that he could watch the growing interest in his friend's face. "Things got to such a pass betwix the Lurveys after you went off that I just couldn't stand it, so one day, when Hod was cutting bushes out in the further corner of the pasture, well out of sight of the house, I went over to him and sez, sez I:

"Hod, why don't you assert your independence and take your lawful place as head of your family?'

"You orter to see him start and turn pale. If a cannon ball had taken his head clean off he couldn't have been more surprised.

"'I mean it,' sez I. 'You're a full grown man, and orter take your place in the world as a man, not as a mouse, to be scart by a woman. The Scripture says a man shall be the head of the household. There's no earthly reason why you shouldn't be of yourn.'

"'Do you think so?' he asked, turning very pale. The idea had struck him all to once, and had come nigh being too much for him. It showed plainer than words could done how it had galled him to have things go the way they had.

"'Mrs. Lurvey says I'm not to be trusted,' he added, hopelessly.

"'We'll trust you any time,' sez I. Come out to the village and get what you want at any one of the stores; they'll trust you till harvesting if you'll come out like a man and do your own business.'

"'Do you know, you've come jest in the nick of time?' asked Hod, looking me full in the face. 'Mrs. Lurvey has bargained the farm away, this old farm that father cleared, and she says I have got to sign the deed to-night. I'd ruther sign away my right hand and if you'll stand by me I won't do it.'

"Well, the outcome on't was that the farm warn't sold, but Mrs. Lurvey packed her trunk in a hurry and went down country to her folks, and left Hod with everything to see to, and hayin' jest comin' on. There was ten cows, and seven calves, and five cosset lambs, and hens, and chickens, and ducks, and geese, and turkeys and the three children. The youngest hadn't been weaned and the oldest warn't more'n ten years old. She thought if Hod was conceited enough to think he could run his own business, he might tend to hern as well. But it was the best thing that ever happened to Hod.

"He come over and wanted my Jane Maria go and keep house for him. Now Jane was as capable a girl as one often sees at fifteen, and there was Susan to take her place at home, so I sez 'Go.' Then he told Ben—the boy was growing up as lazy and sassy as a lad need be—that he'd pay him every week if he'd tend to the poultry right up prime. That kept him and the turks both out'n mischief.

"'Twas surprising how self reliant Hod growed from day to day. He didn't ask advice from nobody, but went right ahead. It seemed as if he growed taller. He sartinly did hold his head higher. He got a new suit of clothes, his first boughten suit, and a tall hat and a buggy, and sold two old cows that had been more plague than profit to him, and a lot of other things he had been hankering to do.

"The neighbors begun to hope that Mrs. Lurvey had gone off for good. Hod was getting on so much better without her, when the stage stopped at their door one night, and out she got. Jane had just come to the door with the baby in her arms. Hod was bringing in the milk.

"'What are you here for?' demanded Mrs. Lurvey, looking cross enough to knock the girl's head off. 'Put on your things and go home.'

"'You won't do any such thing, Jane,' commanded Hod, firmly. 'I hired you to work here, and here you shall stay till after harvesting,' and he looked his wife full in the face, like one who meant to be master.

"They had it back and forth for a week, Jane told me, before Mrs. Lurvey would give him a mite of peace, but Hod was as firm as a rock. She might go or stay, as she chose, but he was going to be master in his own house. But such a life as she led him!

"We was afraid Hod couldn't stand the pressure, and if he yielded an inch he was lost. If only he could be got out from that everlasting nagging till he got more self assertion.

"'Why not send him to the Legislater?' asked my wife.

"'Why, he don't know the first thing about politics,' sez I. 'We want somebody to do credit to the town. Hod hain't been out to town meetin' since he took the freeman's oath, twenty odd year ago.'

"But wife said things couldn't go so badly to rack and ruin at the State House as they was going at Tick Ridge, even if he did vote the wrong way, and the only thing that would really help Hod was to show Mrs. Lurvey that some folks respected his opinions, if she didn't.

"'It would be more credit to Brodick to save Hod Lurvey than to send the smartest man in town,' sez she, and we couldn't disagree with her.

"Well, we talked it up one side and down the other at the caucus. Rafe Willey, who had been Representative for five years, and, of course, expected to be again, said he 'naff sight ruther Hod should have it, and would work for him. There was no danger but we could carry the town easy enough. There warn't a man, far nor near, but would give all his old hats to get even with Mrs. Lurvey.

"Hod did not know what was up, but I made him promise to go down and vote. He said he would come over, cross lots and go down with me. When I went out to the barn that morning who should I see but Hod coming up the hill with his old clothes on, and looking as meaching as a whipped dog.

"'She suspected I was going to the village to-day and got tearing mad,' sez he. 'She locked my store clothes up and put the key in her pocket and told me to be lively about the chores, for we was going to pick geese to-day. I fed around, then made tracks for here. I guess I might as well give up just as last. It will have to come. I don't believe that man lives who could stand up against her when she gets in a rage.'

"'You're tired and hungry,' sez I; 'come in to breakfast, then we'll talk things over.'

"I don't suppose I was as sympathetic as I might have been, for if there's anything under the sun that riles me it is to have a man under a woman's thumb.

"It took some argufying to screw his courage up to the pint of buying a second suit of clothes, but he done it; and there warn't a sprucer looking man at town meeting that day than Hosea Lurvey. We had agreed to stop calling him Hod and to call him Hosea or Mr. Lurvey, to see if that wouldn't prop up his self respect a little.

"He voted the straight ticket right through till they come to town representative; then his name was proposed and was greeted with such a cheer that the moderator said it was a waste of time to ballot and we'd elect him by acclamation. Then we escorted him home in fine style.

"Mrs. Lurvey come to the door all primed and loaded to give him a Scotch blessing and was some took back to see so many of us. Colonel Hooker stepped forward and sez, sez he:

"'Allow me, madam, to introjuce to ye our new representative, Hosea Lurvey, of Brodick, Esq.'

"You see, the colonel was flustered; he'd ruther face a cannonade than an angry woman; and Mrs. Lurvey's face was black as a thunder cloud.

"'You've hit it right fer once,' she answered. 'If there is an E-s-q. anywhere it ain't Hod Lurvey that deserves the title, and I ain't overly sure that Brodick does, either, if it's made such a fool of itself. Waal, Mr. Lurvey, of Brodick, Esquire,' making him a mocking bow, 'ye better bid your friends good night and come in. I've got a little account to settle with ye.'

"'Thank ye kindly, but I promised to go down to the Colonel's to supper,' sez he. 'We only come up to tell ye the news.' Then how we cheered for our new representative.

"That night the hull town turned out to serenade him, and on one pretext or another he warn't left alone much for the next few days.

"He hired Nathan Simpson to run the farm whilst he was gone, and told him what to do and how to do it. Mrs. Lurvey might as well have tried to drive a mule as to make Nate go agin Hosea's orders. There was different works at Tick Ridge from that time.

"You never see how Hosea improved when once he had a chance. He took right holt of politics as though he had been brought up to 'em all his life, and it warn't long before he had the repertation of being about as shrewd as they make 'em.

"We knowed, when we met him at the post office on his way home the fust time, that our experiment had succeeded, and he was going home to rule the roost. Mrs. Lurvey seed it, too, and give up trying to hold her own agin him. He has been to the Legislature every other term since. We send Rafe Willey other times. This year he is First Selectman and Overseer of the Poor.

"He has got one of the finest stock farms in the State, and has got things in a different style from any Brodick has ever had afore. He's makin' money faster'n any other man at Tick Ridge and spends more, too. That is where his independence shows itself most, for Mrs. Lurvey is tighter than the bark to a tree, and keeps saying they will be on the town yet. Well, if they be, we'll help 'em out with a deal better grace than if Hod had never proved himself a man. The boys have growed up fine, steady young men, and the gal is one to be proud of.

"You must go over to Tick Ridge, but I warn you that Mrs. Lurvey will introduce him to ye as the Colonel did that night, Hosea Lurvey, of Brodick, Esq."

THE MIDDLE AGED MAN.

His Discovery of a Milk Bill With No Cow on It.

"My wife," said the middle aged man, "attends to all household affairs. She buys all the food supplies and I simply eat what is provided and am grateful. I put up the money and she pays; and I rarely see the bills. But I did happen to see a milk bill the other day and I was amazed to see that there was no cow on it!

"When I was a boy every milk bill had a cow on it. Milk bills in those days were made out on printed blanks about the size of a bank check or a draft, and there was always a cow in one corner. In rummaging over old papers I have come across hundreds of milk bills, and every one of them had a cow on it. I should scarcely have imagined that a milk bill would be valid without one.

"But this bill is just a straight ahead ordinary bill, with no cow, for so many quarts of milk, like a bill of any other merchandise, and, though there is no cow on the bill, they tell me we never had better milk. So I suppose the doing away with the cow is simply a doing away with so much surplusage, and that the modern milk bill only marks the bringing of the milk supply into line with the modern business methods. But I miss the cow; alas! poor cow."

FITZGERALD'S LIFE INSURANCE.

He Wants the Policy to Lapse, but His Divorced Wife Pays the Assessments.

A novel lawsuit was recently tried in Buffalo between United States Commissioner Fitzgerald, his divorced wife, and Harmony Lodge of the A. O. U. W.

Mr. Fitzgerald says that since the divorce was granted last March his former wife has paid and insists upon continuing to pay his insurance assessment in Harmony Lodge. He had his life insured in the order, but after the divorce he decided to allow the policy to lapse. It was made payable to his wife. She does not want it to lapse, and accordingly pays the assessments as they become due.

He notified the lodge officers not to accept payment, but no attention was paid to the notice. Now Mr. Fitzgerald will endeavor to learn whether the courts will allow his former wife to keep the policy in force and so speculate on his life.

A Word in the Colonel's Ear.

The following story is told of the 48th Georgia Regiment.

As the regiment was on the march to Gettysburg some of the soldiers stepped out of the ranks and confiscated a couple of geese, and one of the drummers unheaded his drum and put the captured birds in it.

Shortly afterward the Colonel came along, and noticing the drummer failed to give his usual drum whacks, rode up and said:

"Why don't you beat that drum?"

"Colonel," said the startled man, "I want to speak to you."

The Colonel drew close to him, and said:

"Well, what have you to say?"

The drummer whispered:

"Colonel, I've got a couple of geese in here."

The Colonel straightened up and said:

"Well, if you are sick, you needn't play," and then rode on.

That night the Colonel had roast goose for supper.—Atlanta Constitution.

THE CHRONICLES OF MARTIN HEWITT

THE CASE OF THE LOST FOREIGNER

By Arthur Morrison.

(Copyright 1895, by the Author.)

CHAPTER IV.

We got rid of our collars and made chokers of our ties. We turned our coat collars up at one side only, and then, with dented hats worn raffishly and our hands in our pockets, we looked disreputable enough for all practical purposes in twilight. A cordon of plain clothed police had already been forming round the club, we were told, and so we sallied forth. We turned into Windmill street, crossed Whitfield street, and in a turning or two we came to the Bakunin Club. I could see no sign of anything like a ring of policemen, and said so. Hewitt chuckled. "Of course not," he said. "They don't go about a job of this sort with drums beating and flags flying. But they are all there, and some are watching us. There is the house—I'll negotiate."

The house was one of the very shabby, passe sort that abound in that quarter. The very narrow area was railed over and almost choked with rubbish. Visible above it were three floors, the lowest indented by the door and one window, and the other two by two windows each—mean and dirty all. A faint light appeared in the top floor, and another from somewhere behind the refuse-heaped area. Everywhere else was in darkness. Hewitt looked intently into the area, but it was impossible to discern anything behind the sole grimy patch of window that was visible. Then we stepped lightly up the three or four steps to the door and rang the bell.

We could hear slippered feet mounting a stair and approaching. A latch was shifted, the door opened six inches, an indistinct face appeared, and a female voice asked, "Qui est la?"

"Deux camarales," Hewitt grunted testily; "ouvrez, vite."

I had noticed that the door was kept from opening further by a short chain. This chain the woman unhooked from the door, but still kept the latter merely ajar, as though intending to assure herself still further. But Hewitt immediately pushed the door back, planted his foot against it and entered, asking carelessly as he did so "Qui se trouve Luigi?"

I followed his heels, and in the dark could just distinguish that Hewitt pushed the woman instantly against the wall and clapped his hand to her mouth. At the same moment a file of quiet men were suddenly visible ascending the steps at my heels. They were the police.

The door was closed behind us almost noiselessly, and a match was struck. Two men stood at the bottom of the stairs and the others searched the house. Only two men were found, both in a top room. They were secured and brought down. The woman was now ungagged, and she used her tongue at a great rate. One of the men was a small, meek-looking slip of a fellow, and he appeared to be the woman's husband.

"Eh, messieurs le police," she exclaimed vehemently, "it ees not of 'im, mon pauvre Pierre, zat you sall run in. 'Im and me—we are not of the clob—we work only—we housekeep."

Hewitt whispered to an officer, and the two men were taken below. Then Hewitt spoke to the woman, whose protests had not ceased. "You say you are not of the club," he said; "but what is there to prove that? If you are but housekeepers, as you say, you have nothing to fear. But you can only prove it by giving the police information. For instance, now, about Gerard. What have they done with him?"

"Jean Pingard—'im you 'ave take downstairs—'e 'ave lose 'im. Jean Pingard get last night all a-boosa—all dronk like zis"—she rolled her head and shoulders to express intoxication—"and he sleeps too much to-day when Emile go out and Gerard—he go too, and nobody know. I will tell you anysing—we are not of the clob; we housekeep; me and Pierre."

"But what did they do to Gerard before he went away?"

The woman was ready and anxious to tell anything. Gerard had been selected to do something—what it was exactly she did not know—but there was a horse and cart and he was to drive it. Where the horse and cart were she also did not know. But Gerard had driven a cart before in his work, for a baker, and he was to drive one in connection with some scheme among the members of the club. But le pauvre Gerard at the last minute disliked to drive the cart—he had fear. He did not say he had fear, but he prepared a letter—a letter that was not signed. The letter was to be sent to the police, and it told them the whereabouts of the horse and cart, so that the police might seize these things, and then there would be nothing for Gerard, who had fear, to do in the way of driving. No, he did not betray the names of the comrades, but he told the place of the horse and the cart. Nevertheless the letter was never sent. There was suspicion, and the letter was found in a pocket and read. Then there was a meeting, and Gerard was confronted with his letter. He could say nothing but "Je ia nie"—found no explanation but that. There was much noise, and she had observed from a staircase from which one might see through a ventilating hole. Gerard had much fear—very much fear. His face was white and it moved; he prayed for mercy, and they talked of killing him. It was discussed how he should be killed, and the poor Gerard was more terrified. He was made to take off his collar, and a razor was drawn across his throat, though without cutting him, till he fainted. Then water was flung over him, and he was struck in the face till he revived. He again repeated "Je la nie, je la nie!" and nothing more. Then one struck him with a bottle and another with a stick. The point of a knife was put against his throat and held there, but this time he did not faint, but cried softly, as a man who is drunk, "Je la nie, je la nie!" So they tied a handkerchief about his neck and twisted it till his face grew purple and black, and his eyes were round and terrible, and then they struck his face, and he fainted again. But they took away the handkerchiefs, having fear that they could not easily get rid of the body if he were killed, for there was no preparation. So they decided to meet again and discuss when there would be preparation. Wherefore they took him away to the rooms of Jean Pingard in Henry street, Golden square. But Emile Pingard had gone out, and Jean was drunk and slept and they lost him. Jean Pingard was downstairs—the taller of the two. The other was but le pauvre Pierre, who, with herself, was not of the club. They worked only—they were the keepers of the house. There was nothing for which they should be arrested, and she would give the police any information they might ask.

"As I thought, you see," Hewitt said to me; "the man's nerves have broken down under the terror and the strain, and asphasia is the result. I think I told you that the only articulate thing he could say was 'Je la nie!' and now we know how those words were impressed on him till he now pronounces them mechanically with no idea of their meaning. Come, we can do no more here now. But wait a moment."

There were footsteps outside. The light was removed, and a policeman went to the door and opened it as soon as the bell rung. Three men stepped in, one after another, and the door was immediately shut behind them. They were prisoners.

We left quietly, and although we, of course, expected it, it was not till the next morning that we learned absolutely that the largest arrest of Anarchists ever made in this country was made at the Bakunin Club that night. Each man as he came was admitted and—collared.

Catarrh starts in the nasal passages, affecting eyes, ears and throat, and is in fact, the great enemy of the mucous membrane. Neglected colds in the head almost invariably precede catarrh, causing an excessive flow of of mucous, and if the mucous discharge becomes interrupted the disagreeable results of catarra will follow, such as bad breath, severe pain across forehead and about the eyes, a roaring and buzzing sound in the ears and oftentimes a very offensive discharge. Ely's Cream Balm is the acknowledged cure for these troubles.

NAST, BY HIMSELF.

The Father of Cartoonists Famous During the War and After.

If any one knows genial "Tom" Nast, his hopes, aims, ambitions, and, in addition, can make a picture that should be truthful, it is the same genial "Tom" himself. The above is Nast drawn by himself. The father of caticature in this country is still a powerful master in black and white, although by no means the greatest. His pictures are as powerful as double leaded editorials. He has made and unmade more men in this country than any other single individual. He made Harper's Weekly famous before it became a Mugwump paper, and did as much as any other man in bringing the Tweed ring to grief.

What a Cat Show Developes.

A woman who had a big Angora on exhibition at the recent cat show in New York was overheard saying to it:

"My pecious, if oo don't get zee blue ribbon it won't be because oo don't deserve it." But pecious didn't get it and her mistress declared that everything was all wrong.

Another woman said to one exhibiting a prize cat:

"How old is your darling?"

"Seven years," was the reply.

"I trust he will be spared to you seven more."

"Thank you," said the other woman feelingly. "I pray so."

A PASTOR BICYCLED.

Rev. Mr. McKelvey's Congregation Make Him a Present.

A reception and a surprise were given to Rev. J. O. McKelvey of Warren chapel by the Ladies Aid society of that chapel last evening. In the first part of the evening a programme was provided which consisted of a vocal solo by Miss Margaret Swain, a recitation by Miss Teal, and a vocal solo by Miss F. May Grant. Then L. N. Lovell, the superintendent of the Sunday-school, arose and in a few appropriate words presented Mr. McKelvey with $10 to apply to the purchase of a bicycle. A reply in Mr. McKelvey's usual witty manner followed, after which Miss Grant sang another selection.

The rest of the evening was given up to sociability and conversation while light refreshments were passed by the committee. A large number attended.

No New Temple of Justice.

The Passaic County Board of Freeholders held its monthly meeting Tuesday, and again dashed the hopes of those persons who are anxious to have a new court house built on the site, which the county bought three years ago, in the tract known as Colt's Hill. The committee on the subject announced "No report," and when later Freeholder Feurstein tried to force a test vote on the question, he was shut off by the passage of a motion to adjourn. The board's first step would be to apply to Judge Dixon, of the Circuit Court, for the appointment of commissioners, who, under a law passed by the Legislature last winter, would have power to bond the county to the extent of $200,000 for the building.

Y. M. C. A. Directors Hear Reports.

The regular meeting of the Board of Directors of the Y. M. C. A. was held at the association building last evening. The members present were: W. D. Murray, E. L. Bonny, John Valiant, J. W. Gavett, Stephen Cahoone, George H. Batchelor, A. B. Beers, A. C. LaBoyteaux, T. E. Hazell, H. O. Newman, R. H. Radford, C. E. Boss and George R. Cornwell.

A verbal report was received from the chairman of the committee on social work. Written reports were received from the following committees: Religious work, boys work, women's work, music, membership, and also from the treasurer, physical director, general secretary and assistant.

Went to Sleep in a Bad Place.

Frank McNulty, a laborer on the Passaic branch of the D., L. & W. R.R., was taken sick while at work on Wednesday, and sat down on a tie to rest. He fell asleep, and a few minutes after the Bernardsville express struck him with the result of throwing him into a ditch. He was lucky enough to escape with a broken arm and scalp wound. He is now at his home at Berkley Heights.

Bargains at Boehm's.

No man will give you $1.25 for $1, but he can give you 100 cents for a $1, and that is just what Boehm claims to do. Only the best quality of goods are placed on his shelves, and he will sell as cheap as you can buy elsewhere. His ad this week contains many bargains.

The Census Workers.

Miss Eudora Grant is now busily engaged in the City Assessor's office copying the results of the census enumerators. It will probably be two weeks before the latter conclude their work.

Mr. Swackhamer to Speak.

Lawyer S. S. Swackhamer, of this city, will deliver an address next Sunday afternoon in the Methodist Episcopal church at White House. His subject will be "Life Work."

A Stranger's Imbibing.

A man who had imbibed too freely was arrested last evening by Marshal Mark Dowd. This morning Justice Crosley fined him $4. The man was a stranger in this part of the country.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mrs. Thos. Eggers, 139 Florida St., San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result everything else, then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottle at Randolph's drug store. Regular size, 50c and $1.

ENDEAVOR ANNIVERSARY.

Third Street Mission Have Completed Another Year's Work.

The Christian Endeavor society of the East Third Street mission celebrated their yearly anniversary last night in a most fitting manner. The society of the First Baptist church were present as invited guests, and all had an enjoyable time.

The exercises opened with a song service, assisted by Clifford Braider, pianist, and Robert W. Barnes, violinist.

An address was then made by I. L. Brady, president of the mission society, setting forth the growth and work of the society during the past year. He stated that a native preacher in India was being supported by them.

Dr. D. J. Yerkes followed with an interesting address along the line of Christian Endeavor work and the remarks were helpful.

At the close of the programme cake, oranges and lemonade were served, and the balance of the evening was spent in sociability.

CHILDREN'S SERVICE.

Programme to Be Followed Out at the First M. E. Church.

Special preparations are being made for Children's Day at the First M. E. church. At the morning service on Sunday, Dr. Barnes will preach to the Sunday-school, and attend to the baptism of children. In the evening the Sunday-school will celebrate the day with very interesting exercises.

The following is the programme of music: Morning — Full choir, assisted by Masters Mills and MacKillop, violinist, and Raymond McGee, cornetist; anthem, "O Be Joyful," Mason; offertory, "Consider the Lilies," Mason; Evening—Choir and orchestra, with children's service; "Merry Sunshine," W. L. Mason; offertory solo, "Consider the Lilies," to be sung by L. S. Bond.

To Do Away With Grade Crossings.

The Jersey Central have decided to build bridge crossings in Elizabeth. The work to be done includes the depression of Jefferson avenue, Madison avenue, Catherine street, Spring street and Reid street. Division street has already been depressed, and Oak street is to be closed by the tracks. It extends only from East Grand street to Magnolia avenue.

There will be no arches over any of the streets, as the conditions will not allow of their erection, and in each case a girder bridge of iron, such as now span both Broad and Division streets, will be supported over the streets on stone abutments.

Trolley Preachers.

The trolley has been put to a new use in Passaic county. On Monday night a part of men and women connected with the Passaic Street Mission in Passaic, chartered an electric car on the New Jersey Electric Railway, and went by way of Paterson to Singac and back. Wherever they saw a group of people on the sidewalks or rural roadsides the car was stopped, and the evangelists sang hymns and exhorted the bystanders to seek salvation.

A Double Funeral.

Two very sad deaths occurred at Passaic this week. They were Rebecca and Anna Newman, both sisters, the latter dying on Tuesday and the former yesterday. Both young ladies are well known in Plainfield and their friends will be grieved to hear of their demise. They were active church workers who led exemplary Christian lives. The double funeral will be held Sunday.

Their First Anniversary.

The committee from the Sons of Veterans appointed to arrange for celebrating the first anniversary of John Hand Camp, met Wednesday evening at the home of H. S. Thatcher, when a programme was made out. The affair will probably be held Wednesday, June 19, at Reform Hall.

Needs Furniture.

James Totten, whose home on the mountains was totally destroyed by fire some time ago, has about completed a new house, with the aid of the money subscribed by charitable Press readers. However, he is greatly in need of furniture to make a comfortable home.

FATAL BURNING ACCIDENT.

A Bright Little Boy Loses His Life in a Sad Way.

A fatal burning accident, in which the bright three-year-old son of Charles VanPelt, a farmer living near Union Valley, lost his life, occurred Wednesday morning.

Mrs. VanPelt left the child alone in the house for a few minutes, while she went out into the garden to pick some strawberries. After she left the house it is supposed the little one commenced playing around the stove, and in some manner his clothes became ignited. His father was attracted by the screams of the child and rushing to where he was, found his clothes to be enveloped in a mass of flames. With the assistance of an older son Mr. VanPelt finally succeeded in extinguishing the flames, but not until the child had been horribly burned about the arms and body. Dr. Cory of New Providence and Dr. Jones of Basking Ridge were summoned, and they, together with the parents, did everything possible to alleriate the sufferings of the little fellow, but he was unable to survive the injuries and yesterday morning death ensued. The funeral was held this morning.

TO AID A MISSIONARY.

The Work of the Ramabai Association Is a Good One.

The Plainfield branch of the Ramabai Association held its annual meeting in the Congregationai church yesterday afternoon. Mrs. William Taylor, the president, called the meeting to order. Mrs. Rider took her regular place as secretary. The reports of the different officers and committees were made, and a letter from Ramabai herself, was read.

The Ramabai Association was formed to aid Ramabai, a Hindoo woman, in establishing a school in India for child widows. The school is located at Poona, and is called the Sharada Sadana; there are, at present, fifty-seven pupils.

Ramabai spoke in Plainfield eight years ago and a branch was then formed of all those who were willing to give $1 a year for the support of the school. In the last year, $60 was collected, with a total of $514.55 since the association was formed.

New Fancy Goods Store.

The store on the corner of Park avenue and West Second street, recently occupied by Martin Brothers, will be opened on Saturday, June 15th, with a full line of new and fancy dry goods. The interior of the store is being remodeled and redecorated and when opened will present a handsome appearance. The proprietor, Alexander Pargiter, is a pleasant gentleman, thoroughly experienced in this line of trade, and will doubtless build up a good business.

To Be a Happy Event.

Cards are out announcing the marriage of Miss Lillie Dunn Garretson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Garretson, of West Front street, to George Milton Macintyre, of the firm of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Co. The wedding takes place at the home of the bride, Thursday afternoon, June 20th, at five o'clock.

Too True.

An exchange says: "If a doctor makes a mistake, he buries it; if a merchant makes a mistake, he never tells it; if a lawyer makes a mistake, he crawls out of it; but if an editor makes a mistake, he puts it on a sheet of paper for the world to look at."

Along Legal Lines.

In Justice Newcorn's court today the case of Schorb against Gill was dismissed, and an adjournment was made to June 17th in the cases of the Plainfield Ice Cold Storage Co. against Williams, and Mehl against Boss.

GOOD THINGS GALORE.

Four Church Festivals Held Last Night.

TRINITY'S LAVENDER AND WHITE.

The Whatsoever Circle of King's Daughters Have a Beautiful Decorations, and Pleasant Attendants, All of Which Their Visitors Appreciated—Other Festivals in Grace M. E., Hope Chapel and St. Mary's.

The scene that greeted the eyes of those who entered the Sunday-school room of the Trinity Reformed church last evening was one of rare beauty. Anyone present could have told at a glance who were responsible for the charming effect of the delicate but substantial colors, lavender and white. The Whatsoever Circle of King's Daughters, who by earnest endeavor have made a reputation as workers in His Name, probably never arranged an affair that was more perfect in every detail than the festival given last evening. The rooms were transformed into a parlor-like scene that was attractive. The whole affair represented earnest effort, and since it was planned the activity of the members has increased until last evening, when they were allowed to see their zeal succeed as it deserved.

The central point of admiration was the confectionery booth located in the centre of the room. It was modest in appearance, but artistically arranged. Here the sweetest tooth could be satisfied with the choicest home-made candy. Miss Jennie Quick presided and carefully looked after her many patrons in a most businesslike manner.

To the left was the lemonade booth, which had been beautified by an arrangement of flowers, with here and there a cluster of lemons suspended from the top, giving unmistakable evidence of the kind of business carried on. Miss Minnie Williams and Miss Etta Krymer were in charge, and many thirsty persons in the large audience sought this desirable recess for a glass of refreshing lemonade.

To the right was the flower booth, which gave the impression of an ideal garden spot. The furnace had been so covered with nature's fairest flowers, that it was temporarily forgotten that there was one there. With the evergreens, roses and ferns that had been skilfully arranged, it was exceedingly difficult to keep away, and then Mrs. J. Fred MacDonald, Miss Mabel Wilson, and Miss Emma Gillem, who proved themselves expert florists, made sales that were most satisfactory.

Nearby was a huge parasol suspended from the ceiling, under whose sheltering folds many were found, interesting themselves in a very handsome selection of smaller fans, which Mrs. Harry Marshall convincingly demonstrated was a necessary factor in every one's summer outfit.

At the farther end of the room was the cake table. No one was slow in appreciating this fact, and the supply did not last long. Mrs. F. E. Woodruff and Miss Elizabeth Dunn, whose opinions on cakes are not to be questioned even by the experienced culinary artists, had no trouble in rapidly turning the pastry into the currency that was sought after.

In the rear of the above table were seated P. Ludwig Conde and his symphony orchestra, and at intervals selections were rendered that were entrancing to all. It conveyed the thought of fairyland as the sweet strains came to the ear, making the whole affair ideal.

The decorations throughout were lavender and white, and the members of the King's Daughters were gowned in these colors, the symbol of the society, whose name is legion.

To Miss Mabel Woodruff, as chairman of the committee of arrangements, and Miss Lillian A. Force, as chairman of the decorating committee, assisted by other members of the circle is due the picturesque appearance and success attending the affair. They were assisted by George Gayle, treasurer of the church, who gratuitously erected the booths, the lumber being furnished by Pearson & Gayle.

Miss Virginia VanWinkle had charge of the waitresses, who were gowned in white. They were the Misses Cora Laire, Mary VanFleet, Maud VanDyke, Florence White, May Williams, Nettie Kreitling, Nellie McGinnis, Eva Lance, Josephine Fritz, Mattie Cook, Jeannette Simpson.

In the absence of Rev. Cornelius Schenck, his son, Cornelius Schenck, Jr., was present and filled his father's place at the table.

William Crawford, stationed at the door, did excellent service in receiving the tickets and money, while the check room was in charge of Miss Minnie Arnold and Miss Grace Smith, who did efficient work.

Mrs. O. M. Dunham also did much to make the festival a success by assisting the young women.

The festival will be continued this evening and all are earnestly invited to help the King's Daughters in the grand work in which they are engaged.

WHAT THE MOON SAW.

The Ladies Aid of Grace M. E. Serve Friends.

When the moon peeped through the windows in the Grace M. E. church last evening, it shone on a very pretty scene. Tasteful decorations of ferns, flowers and bunting, and the waitresses in their charming costumes brightened up the interior until it could hardly be recognized. The Ladies Aid society were holding an ice-cream and strawberry festival. The fancy table at one end was crowded with dainty articles of all kinds, while the table itself added beauty to the room by its artistic decorations. Here Mrs. Louis A. Hummer, assisted by Mrs. Ezra Loomis, Mrs. A. Lutkins, Mrs. H. K. Carroll and Mrs. A. A. Taft, sold to all who cared to buy.

The next in order came the candy table with its load of delicions home-made dainties. This charming booth was under the charge of Mrs. A. M. Most, assisted by Misses Carrie Tingley, Agnes Tingley, Grace Carroll, Alice Carroll, Della Voehl, Clara Steiner and Mrs. Winckler.

The lemonade booth, although small, continued to attract a large crowd about it who were well served by Mrs. W. H. Griffin and Miss Belle Lunger.

The flower table at the other end was a perfect bower of flowers and greens, and reflected great credit on those who arranged it. Although well stocked with flowers at the start, the supply rapidly diminished and the vases were almost entirely emptied. This booth was arranged and taken care of during the evening by Miss Margaret Schuck and Miss Alice E. Loomis.

In the church parlors little tables were placed and here ice cream and strawberries were sold. The ice cream committee consisted of Miss Vermeule, Mrs. Higgins and Mrs. Edward Sebring. The strawberries were under the charge of Mrs. Charles Hummer, Mrs. Morton and Mrs. Florence Cobb. Mrs. Lunger and Mrs. Shepherd were in charge of the cake.

The waitresses were the Misses Ella Benner, Mabel Benner, Mabel Loomis, Minnie Marsh, Anna Doeringer and Nellie Vermeule.

Owing to so many other things taking place the same night the attendance was not as large as it otherwise would have been. The festival will be continued tonight also.

FOR ST. MARY'S CHURCH.

The Children of Mary Conduct a Profitable Festival.

The strawberry and ice-cream festival arranged and given by the Children of Mary of St. Mary's church last evening in the C. Y. M. L. hall was a large success. Owing to the storm of the previous night it had been postponed, and the increased patronage accorded last night fully repaid them. Tables were placed in the various rooms, and were very prettily decorated by those in charge. In one of the main rooms a billiard table was transformed into a pleasing picture, through the arrangement of beautiful flowers, in the midst of which were scattered large handsome cakes that attracted the attention of all. The hall was thronged with people, who purchased freely the articles on sale.

Those presiding were:

Ice-cream, cake and strawberry—Miss Colbert, Miss McGrath, Miss Glennon, Miss Mercier.

Lemonade, soda water and Russian tea—Miss Margaret Fosbere, Miss Margaret Churchill.

During the evening the young people enjoyed dancing, music for which was furnished by Eugene O'Reilly. Yesterday afternoon the hall was opened and many of the school children availed themselves of the opportunity of attending. It will be continued this evening.

AT HOPE CHAPEL.

Sale of Strawberries and Ice Cream Swells the Excursion Fund.

A strawberry and ice cream festival was held in Hope chapel, last evening, under the auspices of the Ladies Aid society, for the benefit of the excursion fund. For the past few days the ladies have worked zealously together decorating the interior of the chapel, and otherwise making it pleasant and comfortable for those who would attend, but owing to many other similar amusements last evening, the attendance was not as large as expected.

The ladies who were in attendance at the several are as follows:

Ice cream booth—Mrs. Page, Mrs. Radin, and Mrs. Montgomery.

Flower booth—Mrs. Chamberlain, Mrs. Shepherd, and Mrs. Frank.

Lemonade booth—Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Sweeney.

Candy booth—Mrs. Randolph and Mrs. Gray.

Cake booth—Mrs. Bushby and Mrs. Robinson.

Strawberry booth—Mrs. Higgins and Mrs. Harrison.

Fancy booth—Mrs. Struthers and Mrs. Young.

The committee was composed of Mrs. S. R. Struthers and Mrs. McComas.

The festival will be continued this afternoon and evening.

LAST SAD RITES.

Funeral of James Conneely Held This Morning.

The funeral service of the late James Conneely was held this morning at 9:30 from St. Mary's church, Rev. Father Murphy officiating as celebrant, assisted by Fathers Smyth and O'Hanlon. There was a very large number of people present.

The floral tributes were exceedingly handsome and represented a shield from the Exempt Firemen, a pillow from No. 2 Engine Company, and a bunch of palms tied with ribbon from the Catholic Benevolent Legion.

The remains reposed in a beautiful black trimmed casket, and looked very lifelike.

Those acting as bearers were John Harding, John Wierenga, Jacob Blimm, exempt firemen, and Patrick Kiely, J. J. Kenney and Patrick Diver from the Legion. Interment was made at the Catholic cemetery.

The funeral and interment was conducted under the direction of P. Casey.

LOSS OF THE COLIMA

Graphic Story of the Disaster by Survivors.

Went Down Suddenly During a Furious Storm--The Accident Due to Shifting of the Cargo--Serious Mistake of the Third Officer in Cutting Loose the Deck Load of Lumber--Many Killed by Floating Timber After Being Thrown into the Sea--One Man's Experience with Two Drunken Men on a Raft.

San Francisco, June 7.—The steamer San Juan has arrived here from Panama and way ports with survivors of the wrecked Pacific mail steamship Colima. There was general disinclination among the survivors to give any information, the only reason given for their refusal to be interviewed being that under the circumstances they did not feel disposed to talk. George D. Ross, formerly boatswain's mate on the cruiser Olympia, who was on his way to his home in New York, gave the United Press representative the following graphic account of the wreck:

Story of the Wreck.

"We left Mazatlan Sunday, May, 26 at 4 p. m. with a fair breeze blowing. Toward 9 o'clock in the evening the wind increased a little and continued blowing pretty fresh all night. Next morning at 6 o'clock the wind moderated considerably until about 9 o'clock when it again came up and steadily continued to gain in violence until it acquired the proportions of a hurricane. The wind blew in great gusts, causing the ship to list badly to starboard. The Colima labored heavily and it was evident that we were in a very precarious predicament. The greatest excitement prevailed on board and the faces of the passengers plainly showed that they were keenly alive to their perilous position.

An Officer's Fatal Blunder.

"Unfortunately just at that moment a fatal blunder was committed by the third officer, who cut the lashings of a deck load of lumber. Some of this was washed into the sea and what remained on deck was driven about, knocking down and maming those whom it struck. A particularly heavy sea struck the ship tumbling the foremast and smokestack. Shortly before this, however, a succession of heavy waves had punched a whole in our starboard bow, through which the sea poured. Women screamed and rushed up the companionway imploring the men to save them. The ship gave a couple of heavy rolls, an enormous sea climbed on us, smashed the hurricane deck and with one mighty lurch the ship went down. As she was making her lrst lurch I dived into the sea and when I came up she was out of sight.

Floating Lumber Killed Many.

"People were floating around, clinging to all sorts of wreckage, and sinking under our very eyes. Some who had managed to grasp hold of boxes or planks were knocked senseless and drowned. The force and effect of this floating mass of lumber cannot be described. It caused the death of many who might have been saved.

Shifting Cargo the Cause.

"It is a difficult matter to say to what cause the wreck of the Colima is attributable. She must certainly have shifted her cargo, as her strong list to port showed. I firmly believe that but for the shifting of the cargo she would have ridden out the gale. I had been in the water some little time clinging to one object or another when I finally managed to get hold of a good-sized piece of hurricane deck, upon which I climbed. I drifted about for some time when I observed a rather effeminate-looking fellow on another piece of wreckage, close to me. He seemed about done up, so I seized his raft and hauled him on to mine. We made the rest of the trip towards shore together. He turned out to be Thornton. We were the closest in shore of any of the survivors, and were picked up by the first officer's boat of the San Juan after being twenty-nine hours in the water."

Last Seen of the Engineer.

Ross was severely cut about the head by floating wreckage and had numerous other cuts about the body. T. J. Oriel, an electrician, on his way to Mexico, gave about the same version of the commencement of the storm. He said the Colima during the height of the storm listed so badly after each succeeding rush of waves that she did not recover. "About 9 o'clock on the morning of the wreck," he said, "I went below to the steerage quarters and noticed water coming into the starboard scuppers. Shortly afterward a quartermaster came down, saying the captain wanted to see the engineer. The latter went on deck, but returned to the engine room in three or four minutes looking like a dead man. His face was ashy pale. That was the last seen of him.

Shook Hands and Said Good-by.

"By this time the steerage passengers had all gone below. The seven men from the American cruisers Olympia and Philadelphia tried to console those around them. One of these finally told us we were doomed. We shook hands, said good-by and he knelt on a sack of flour and said his prayers. I then started to go on deck, but the ship listed so badly I could scarcely make my way up stairs. I made for a boat, intending to cut it loose from its fastenings, but was unable to do so. The ship was on her beam ends, and the decks bulged out and were finally rent. I then jumped into the water, seized a box and was washed about from one float to another like many others. Five of us, Tom Fitch, Jack Captenter, two Mexicans and myself, got on a raft and were picked up by a boat in command of Captain Long, formerly captain of the Colima. A Mexican named Zerrable went crazy from drinking salt water."

Two Drunken Men on a Raft.

C. H. Cushing, jr., was in bed during the first part of the blow, but got up in time to be hurled into the sea with a cabin roof. He told his story as follows: "I found myself in the water without knowing just how I got there. By some means or another, just when I had abandoned all hope of being saved I found myself floating near a portion of the cabin roof with two others. They pulled me on the raft. Shortly after we got on the raft a keg of claret floated near and we captured it. It was a long time before we got the keg open, and I am sorry it was ever opened. My two companions drank until they became worse than intoxicated. One of the men fell down and went to sleep, but the other insisted upon quarrelling, and finally attacked me. To save my life I had to knock him overboard. The bath sobered him, and I pulled him aboard again. He began drinking harder than ever and finally fell overboard and was drowned. After his companion awoke he behaved himself, and later we were picked up."

No Discipline; All Was Panic.

George Rowan, another passenger bound for New York, agrees in the main with the previous statements of the survivors and added: "There was absolutely no discipline, no organization of any kind. Everything was a panic. The captain stood on the bridge. Women screamed and the children cried, clinging in desperation to their parents and even to strangers."

Women Were in Their Staterooms.

Sailor A. L. Carpenter was one of the party on the raft. He says that attempts were made to lower the boats, but failed. All the women were in their staterooms for none of them expected that the disaster was upon them. All the survivors are terribly cut and bruised by the floating timber.

FORGIVEN ON THE GALLOWS.

Eisinminger's Affecting Scene with His Victim's Widow.

Waynesburg, Pa., June 7.—John Eisinminger, the third man to be hanged in Green county, was executed yesterday afternoon. The hanging was witnessed by about 300 people, among those present being Mrs. McCoy, the widow of Eisinminger's victim. She called to see him a few minutes before the execution and an affecting scene followed.

Woman's Forgiveness.

She had received the young man's letter, expressing repentance and asking her forgiveness, and she did forgive him. The parting of his young wife almost unnerved Eisinminger. Tears were rolling down his cheeks, and he was nervous as he was being lead to the gallows. Rev. Mr. Stevenson, who had baptised him, read the scriptures, and there was a prayer by Rev. Mr. McKain. He answered the Lord's Prayer, after the noose was adjusted, in a firm tone that a sob now and then broke.

ENTIRELY A SOCIAL AFFAIR.

Dinner Given by Mr. Wanamaker to Gen. Harrison Last Night.

Philadelphia, June 7.—The dinner gaven by Mr. Wanamaker to General Harrison last evening at the ex-postmaster general's country residence at Jenkintown was an exceedingly handsome one, but to judge from the guests it was entirely of a social nature and had no political significance. There were present besides Mr. Wanamaker and General Harrison, Mayor Warwick, District Attorney Graham, Jay Cooke, the banker, Thomas Dolan, the big worsted mill manufacturer; Wm. M. Singerly, Chas. Emory Smith, ex-minister to Russia; P. A. Widener and Wm L. Elkins, and several other gentlemen who have country residences near Mr. Wanamaker's. Governor Hastings was expected to be present, but telegraphed at the last moment that he would be unable to come. but added that he hoped to call upon General Harrison. General Harrison will leave this afternoon for Indianapolis.

CRITTENDEN'S PECULIAR WILL.

Evidently Expected His Widow Would Soon Follow Him.

Newark, N. J., June 7.—The will of Henry Chittenden, of Montclair, who was formerly a millionaire broker of New York, has been presented for probate at the surrogate's office. The document is brief, and does not reveal the extent of the estate, which is supposed to be worth $100,000. It is peculiar, however, in one feature. A clause reads that the widow shall enjoy the income and benefits for the term of her natural life, "not exceeding the term of five years." After that the estate is to be distributed equally between the surviving children, but the issue of any children shall receive a parent's share. If Mrs. Chittenden should die before the term named the property is to be sold and divided as directed.

NAMED BY MAYOR STRONG.

Magistrates and Special Sessions Justices Appointed.

New York, June 5.—Mayor Strong has given out the following appointments as city magistrates: To serve four years William J. Fanning, Herman G. Kudlich, Charles E. Simms, jr. To serve seven years—Henry A. Brann, Leroy B. Crane, Joseph M. Deuel. To serve ten years—Charles A. Flammer, Robert C. Cornell, John O. Mott. The following are appointed special sessions justices: E. B. Hinsdale, to serve ten years; W. Travers Jerome, eight years; E. A. Jacob, six yeas; John Hayes, four years, William C. Holbrook, two years.

Passed by Pennsylvania Senate.

Harrisburg, Pa., June 7.—The senate has passed the house bill giving preference of appointment to honorably discharged soldiers, sailors or marines who fought for the union, and also the bill taxing manufacturers of malt or brewed liquors one thousand dollars annually.

Steamer Culmore Ashore.

Baltimore, June 7.—Private advices received here to-day report that the Culmore went ashore near Port Antonio, Jamaica, on Monday last. She is resting easy and will probably be gotten off without serious damage.

TURKEY IS WEAKENING

Settlement of the Armenian Trouble Expected.

Firm Attitude of the Powers May Force the Sultan To Yield as Gracefully as Possible—The Incident Settled—No Improvement in the Situation at Jiddah.

Constantinople, June 7.—The situation of affairs, so far as the settlement of the question in dispute between the Turkish government and the representatives of the powers regarding reform in Armenia is concerned, shows considerable improvement to-day. This is undoubtedly due to the firm attitude of the powers in positively refusing to accept any modification of the programme which has been mapped ont for the amelioration of the condition of Armenia. The Turkish minister for foreign affairs, Said Pasha, has paid frequent visits to the British embassy since the reply of the porte to the note of the powers was delivered, and it is hoped that it will result in persuading the sultan to accept the inevitable as gracefully as possible.

French Incident Settled.

The incident of the assault upon a French steamship officer by a Turkish officer may be regarded as closed, as the Turkish government has assured the French embassy that it will accord full satisfaction and that an indemnity will be paid to the French officer. His assaliant will be tried before a military tribunal and punished if found guilty.

No Improvement at Jiddah.

Advices received here from Jiddah this morning show that there is no improvement in that quarter. The news received here to-day confirms the statements made by dispatches yesterday, that the sanitary regulations insisted upon by the powers, in order to prevent the introduction of cholera into Europe by pilgrims returning from Mecca, were at the bottom of the recent assaults upon the consular representatives of Great Britain, France and Russia.

Cholera Hospital Destroyed.

The late advices announced that the Bedouins have destroyed the cholera hospital erected at Jiddah for the care of sick pilgrims traveling to and from Mecca. The Turkish garrison at Jiddah has been reinforced, but the foreign population will remain on board the ships in the harbor until the arrival of the warships of the powers, when their safety will be guaranteed and order restored.

OLNEY SEES CLEVELAND.

The President Busy Getting Matters in Shape Before Going Away.

Washington, June 7.—The president is devoting all his time to closing up his business before him that must be attended to before he leaves Washington, so that he may have a few weeks for recreation when he goes to Gray Gables. The business now engrossing his attention is the filling of cabinet and other official vacancies and the examination of charges against office holders. It is the desire of the president to fill all the larger offices now vacant before he goes away. This morning he received a number of callers. Among the first was Attorney General Olney, who remained a short time. Shortly afterwards Acting Secretary Uhl presented some business from the state department and remained with the president for some time.

ADVICES FROM FORMOSA.

Chaos Continues at Taipeh-Fu Germans Bombard Forts at Hobe.

Hong Kong, June 7.—Advices which have reached here from the island of Formosa show that chaos continues at Taipeh-Fu. The native part of the town has been destroyed by fire. During the conflagration the powder magazine exploded and ninety Chinese were killed.

Germans Bombard the Forts.

The German gunboat Itlis bombarded the forts at Hobe because the officials there detained a steamer in which were ex-Governor Tany, who for a time held the position of president of the short-lived republic, and a large number of other refugees. The forts were silenced by the Itis, the Chinese gunners fleeing from their guns. The steamer then proceeded for her destination.

MISS PHILBROOK WINS.

The First Woman To Be Admitted to the Bar of New Jersey.

Trenton, N. J., June 7.—The fight of Miss Mary Philbrook, of Jersey City, to be admitted to the bar of the state has at last been decided in her favor. She was admitted as a regular practitioner yesterday and is the first woman lawyer in the state.

Chicago Bank President Injured.

Chicago, June 7.—Robert Stuart, president of the American Exchange National bank, was thrown from his horse in Washington park yesterday afternoon. His skull was fractured on a stone curb. He is unconscious, but the doctors are hopeful of his recovery.

Jerry Simpson on the Stump.

Topeka Kan., June 7.—Jerry Simpson will leave Medicine Lodge in a wagon for Topeka with his wife and will camp out on the route. He will speak on free silver from the steps of the wagon at every town.

McCoy and Tracy Not Matched.

Boston, June 7.—Kid McCoy denies that he has signed articles to fight Tom Tracy. McCoy says that there was some talk of making a match, but that nothing definite was done.

Captain of Amherst Athletics.

Amherst, Mass., June 7.—H. F. Houghton, '96, Amherst's champion mile walker, has been elected captain of Amherst's track athletic team for the next year.

Big Deal Closed.

Buffalo, June 7.—Webb, Depew, Astor and Twombly have bought the controlling interest in the Depew Improvement company. Nearly $1,000,000 is invested.

President Faure Returns to Paris.

Paris, June 7.—President Faure has completed his official tour of the central and southwestern departments. He returned to Paris late last night.

A New Discovery By The Shakers.

For more than a hundred years the Mount Lebanon Shakers have studied the cultivation of medicinal plants and sought to extract from them their healing essences. Their labor has not been spent in vain. They have made a discovery that will prove a blessing to mankind. It consists of a cordial that causes immediate relief in cases of indigestion. The importance of this discovery will be apparent when we realize that nearly nine-tenths of all our sufferings are caused by dypepsia or indigestion. Nearly every person you meet has this digestive trouble in some of its varied forms—sick headache, distress after eating, pain and fullness in the chest after eating, palpitation of the heart, etc., are but symptoms of indigestion. To relieve these sufferings has been the study of the Shakers, and they have succeeded. The reason the Shaker Digestive Cordial has such an immediate and salutary effect is that it causes the food eaten to be digested before there is time for it to ferment and sour on the stomach. When the food is so digested it gives strength and vigor to the feeble body, makes one feel bright and cheerful, and makes one gain in flesh.

The Digestive Cordial is so prompt in its action that the very first dose will have a perceptibly favorable result. It gives immediate relief.

In order to prove this statement, small trial bottles placed in the druggists hands can be obtained for ten cents each. This trial bottle will have a decided beneficial effect and will satisfy anyone that the Cordial is adapted to his case. After a trial give praise to the Shakers of Mount Lebanon, N. Y.

No need of wearing a shabby Corset, because you dislike breaking in a new one. BALL'S CORSETS are comfortable the first time you put them on.

THE SOUTH IS BOOMING

Business Situation Continues To Improve.

New Cotton Mills To Be Built and Machinery Added to Others—Several Other Big Enterprises Also To Be Started—Marked Improvement in the Iron Trade.

Baltimore, June 7.—Special reports to the Manufacturer's Record, covering the industrial and general business progress of the south during the past week, show continued improvement in the steady increase in railroad earnings and bank clearings as compared with the corresponding period of last year. There is a very marked improvement also in the iron trade, with a very hopeful outlook for the future.

Cotton Interests Active.

Cotton mill interests continue to command wide attention, both on the part of northern investors who are contemplating building mills in the south and on the part of the local people of the south. Among the cotton mills reported for the week are a $500,000 company now being organized to build at Charlotte, N. C.; a 10,000-spindle mill at Athens, Ga.; $25,000 of new machinery being added to a mill at Augusta, Ga., and a new mill at Mt. Holly, N. C.

Other Big Enterprises.

A western company will build a $100,000 plant in Alabama for the manufacture of charcoal and the utilization of the bi-product in making wood alcohol. A cottonseed oil mill company has been organized at Fort Gains, and Rome, Ga., and at Spartans and Blacksburg, S. C. At Greenville, Miss., a $100,000 cooperage plant is to be started, and at Meridian a $1,000,000 lumber company has been organized. A $1,000,000 mining company, composed mainly of northern people, has been organized to operate in West Virginia.

MR. PUGH'S APPOINTMENT.

It Is His Third Attempt To Hold a Job Under Uncle Sam.

Washington, June 7.—William H. Pugh, auditor of the navy department in the treasury department, is a close friend of Secretary Carlisle, which fact doubtless caused the president to continue him in the service of the government. He was commissioner of customs until he fell a victim to the Dockery commission, which legislated him out of office. Secretary Carlisle then detailed him for a special class of work, and, after the enactment of the tariff law, he was made chief of the income tax division. Although Mr. Pugh was again retired from office by virtue of the decision of the supreme court, his friends did not believe he would be dropped from the service, and as soon as the removal of Auditor Morton was announced it was said that he would be the successor.

STEAM YACHT RACE.

Vamoose, Yankee Doodle, Rex and Judge Matched for June 29.

New York, June 7.—At last the race for the fleet of steam yachts, Vamoose, Yankee Doodle, Rex and Judge, has been arranged. George H. Morrill, owner of the Vamoose, has put up a $500 silver cup, and for this trophy the boats mentioned will race on June 29. The course, which is eighty knots long, is between New London and Milton Point. The articles for the race were signed on March 7. The winner of the cup can hold it for one year and then it becomes subject to challenge again. The boats will run "light." In addition to their crew no one will be allowed on board, and every bit of luggage will be sent ashore before the start.

REVOLUTION IN ECUADOR.

Information of Its Success Sent to the State Department.

Washington, June 7.—News of the success of the revolutionists in Ecuador has reached the navy department in a cable dispatch from Captain Watson, of the war ship Ranger, which is now at Guayaquil. The dispatch is dated at Guayaquil, June 5, and reads as follows: "The insurgents have possession of the city. Governor General Flores has resigned. Ignacio Robles, liberal, has been proclaimed military and civil general. Everything is quiet at present. Communication with Quito by telegraph is interrupted."

MEDALS FOR GALLANTRY.

Two Men Honored by the President for Deeds of Daring.

Washington, June 7.—The president has awarded a medal of honor to Capt. C. A. Curtis, second Minnesota infantry, for gallantry at Chickamauga. This officer serving as aide at this time, observed a regiment leaving the line under stress of battle, dashed after it, seized the colors, and rode back with them followed by the regiment into the thick of the attack. A medal was also awarded to William R. Shafer, late first lieutenant company I, seventh Michigan volunteers, for gallantry at Fair Oaks, Va.

Offer for a Big Bicycle Race.

Philadelphia, June 7.—The Riverton (N. J.) Athletic association has made an offer to Zimmerman and Johnson of a purse of $1,000 for a race between these two crack wheelmen. The race is to be mile heats. The association suggests that the race take place on Labor Day (September 2) or any Saturday between June 8 and Septembe 14, which may be agreeable to the two men.

Damages for Personal Injuries.

New Haven, Conn., June 7.—Henry B. Leete, of Guilford, has brought suit against the Southern New England Telephone company, claiming damages in $4,000 for personal injuries. During the big storm of November last Leete was knocked from his wagon by a wire of the company which had fallen across the highway.

President of Lutheran Synod.

Hagerstown, Md., June 7.—Rev. Dr. H. L. Baugher, professor of Greek at Pennsylvania college, Gettysburg, Pa., has been elected president of the general synod of the Lutheran church.

Captain of Lehigh's Lacross Team.

Bethlehem, Pa., June 7.—Burt M. McDonald, '96, of Springfield, Mass., has been elected captain of Lehigh university's lacross twelve for next year.

MORE TROOPS FOR CUBA.

Campos Expects the Arrival of Several Insurgent Leaders.

Madrid, June 7.—The dispatch received from General Campos, upon the contents of which a conference between the colonial minister and the premier was held yesterday, informed the government that several insurgent leaders were expected to land in Cuba almost immediately, and that fresh agitation was in progress. General Campos, in view of this state of affairs, asked for six additional battalions of troops. As the result of a ministerial conference the government will send ten battalions of troops to Cuba without delay.

A General To Assist Campos.

London, June 7.—The Post will publish a Madrid dispatch saying it is almost certain that some general commanding an army corps will go to Cuba to assist Capt.-Gen. Campos in quelling the insurrection. The Cuban war credit that the government will ask the chamber of deputies to grant will be 15,000,000 pesetes. It is announced that Capt.-Gen. Campos has returned to Havana and that the rebels have been victorious in several combats with government troops.

TO DRIVE OFF LAND COMPANIES

Captain Beck Authorized To Engage Additional Indian Police.

Washington, June 7.—The department of the interior has authorized Captain Beck, U. S. A., United States Indian agent of the Omaha and Winnebago Indians in Nebraska, to employ fifty additional Indian police, making in all seventy, with which force he will resume the ejecting of the Flourney and other land companies and their tenants from the lands of these Indians. The companies leased the lands from the Indians, but the leases were never approved by the department and the companies refused to vacate. Upon request the war department sent Captain Beck additional firearms for the use of the police, but refused to send a troop of cavalry or company of infantry, which was asked for. The war department has again been requested for rifles to arm the additional police.

A CLOUDBURST IN GERMANY.

Serious Loss of Life and Property in the Black Forest District.

Stuttgart, June 7.—News of a cloudburst over the Wurtemburg portion of the Black Forest district, causing great destruction of property, has been received here. The downfall of water caused the river Eyach to rise and many houses at Balingen, Fromern, Dirrwangen and Lanfen were swept away. Many persons are missing.

Thirty-two Known To Be Dead.

Later reports from the district visited by the flood show that ten persons were drowned at Balingen, seven persons were killed at Fromern and that nine persons more are missing from the last named place. At Lanfen fifteen persons were killed.

BANKRUPTCY IS NEAR.

The Situation in Newfoundland Is Reaching a Critical Stage.

St. Johns, N. F., June 7.—The legislature will not meet again for about two weeks. The report that the loan arranged for by Colonial Secretary Bond in London is a preferential one, with a lien on the customs revenues, appears to be well founded. It is feared that this will upset all the negotiations, as the imperial government is not likely to permit such a discrimination against the holders of the present bonds. Only twenty-five days remain between the colony and bankruptcy. The press urges the government to press its retrenchment and other measures. The legislature, which met on December 15 last, has done absolutely nothing.

MARTI IN NEW YORK.

Dispatches to Tampa Say That He Is in That City.

Tampa, Fla., June 7.—Several telegrams were received in this city yesterday saying that Jose Marti had arrived safely in New York. The news spread over the city and the wildest enthusiasm prevailed among the Cuban population. Col. Figueredo, the new leader of the revolutionary movement in this city, said that Marti would deliver a speech in this city on Friday evening. Elaborate preparations are making for the occasion.

FIREMEN AT BELLEFONTE.

A Day of Festivities Witnessed by a Big Gathering.

Bellefonte, Pa., June 7.—Ten thousand people viewed the fire demonstration in Bellefonte yesterday. The parade included about 2,000 firemen from Dubois, Clearfield, Philipsburg, Houtzdale, Bellwood, Tyrone, Lock Haven and Bellefonte. Three hundred dollars in prizes were contested for in the afternoon and most all were won by the Hope Steam Fire company of Philipsburg. The day's jollification closed with a wheelmen's parade and a display of fireworks in the evening.

New England Tennis Championship.

New Haven, Conn., June 7.—The final match in the tennis tournament for the New England championship resulted in Howland, of New York, defeating Foote, of Yale, the present champion, by the following score: 0-6, 6-3; 6-0, 6-1. Howland is now entitled to hold the championship cup for one year.

League Games Yesterday.

At New York—New York, 2; Cincinnati, 0. At Boston—Boston, 7; Pittsburg, 5. At Philadelphia—Philadelphia, 8; St. Louis, 9. At Brooklyn—Brooklyn, 12; Louisville, 11. At Baltimore—Baltimore, 10; Chicago, 13. At Washington — Washington, 7; Cleveland, 3.

Promises To Be a Big Strike.

Kingston, N. Y., June 7.—A strike which promises to extend all along the Hudson river has just been started at the brick yards of Albert Terry and Robert Mains, at Steep Rocks, a suburb of this city. Several hundred men are out for an advance of wages.

Scotch Companies in an Oil Deal.

Glasgow, June 7.—It is announced that the Scotch companies have entered into a three years' agreement with the Standard Oil company, the effect of which is to advance the price of candles and scale the price of oil.

Public Building Contract Let.

Washington, June 7.—Fox, Rubey & Co., of Scranton, Pa., have been awarded the contract for constructing the approaches to the public building at Scranton at their bid of $5,672.

SHOCKINGLY BEATEN

Mrs. King the Victim of a Brutal Husband.

Choked, Kicked and Beaten in Her Home at Asbury Park Until Her Life Is Despaired of—She Only Weighs Seventy Pounds—Knocked His Children Down Also.

Asbury Park, N. J., June 7.—A horrible story of wife beating and probable murder has been brought to light in Asbury Park. The victim is Mrs. Jennie King and the wife-beater, protected by the woman whom he injured, left Asbury Park for his home in Bordentown, N. J., where he is now locked up in jail.

Choked His Wife.

Augustus King is the son of Mrs. King, who owns the hotel Gladstone. He is a tall, muscular man, and drinks heavily. About 5 o'clock Tuesday morning King, who had gone out early the previous evening for a night's carousel, returned home very much under the influence of liquor and violently out of humor. After a tirade of abuse, King caught his wife by the throat and choked her.

Struck His Children.

The woman weighs only seventy pounds. King picked her up with both hands, raised her fragile body over his head, and flung her with tremendous force on the dining room floor. May King, a 16-year-old daughter, attracted by the screams of her mother and the noise of the falling body, begged her infuriated father to desist and not kill her mother. With an oath King's uplifted fist landed square in his daughter's face. She fell to the floor like a log. Little Gussie, the youngest child, cried pitifully, and asked her father to stop. King hit the child in the back with his doubled fist. The child fell flat and moaned with pain.

Kicked and Beat Her.

King then returned to his wife, who had struck the floor on her back. He began to kick and beat the prostrate woman regardless of consequences. The cries of the woman, meantime, attracted the neighbors, who rushed to the front door, which was fortunately unlocked, and the brute was quickly forced from his victim.

Did Not Want Him Arrested.

A messenger was at once dispatched for a physician, and Mrs. King was carried to her room. The doctor, after a hurried examination, felt confident the woman would die. He believed her spine was dislocated, but as some doubt existed about the actual extent of the injury to the spine, King's arrest was deferred at the earnest solicitations of his wife, who refused to make a complaint against him. Still intoxicated, the wife beater took an early train for his home in Bordentown.

To Take Her Ante-Mortem Statement

The physician visited his patient yesterday afternoon and found that a change for the worse had taken place, and it was apparent she could not live. The doctor at once notified the coroner. The coroner called at the Gladstone at 6 p. m., prepared to take Mrs. King's ante-mortem statement. The woman was evidently in close touch with death, yet she refused to believe her end was near. Mrs. King tried in every way to protect the absent assailant, and did everything in her power to shield him.

Mrs. King Highly Connected.

The injured woman is said to be highly connected, being related to the Morgans, of New York, and the Mannings, of Trenton. King, the fugitive, was once before arrested for beating his wife, who stood by him with wifely devotion through long years of abuse.

THE BAYARDS ENTERTAIN.

Quite a Sprinkling of Nobility Among Those Present.

London, June 7.—The Hon. Thomas F. Bayard, the American ambassador, and Mrs. Bayard yesterday gave a reception at their residence on Eaton square. Among those present were the staff of the embassy, with the exception of Lieutenant-Commander Cowles, the naval attache, who has gone to Kiel, Baron Erlanger, Sir Henry and Lady Thompson, the Marquis and Marchioness of Bristol, Viscount and Viscountess Boyne, the dowager Countess of Shrewsbury, the Earl and Countess of Mar, the Countess of Cottenham, Lady Helen Stuart, Lady Lyttelton, and Mr. and Mrs. Potter Palmer, of Chicago.

A CHINESE LOAN.

It Was Concluded in Paris with a Russian Guarantee.

London, June 7.—It is learned from the best authority that Paris bankers have concluded a Chinese 4 per cent. gold loan of £16,000,000 guaranteed by Russia. The probable issue price, it is said, will be 93.

Shot in Self-Defense.

Savannah, Ga., June 7.—Frank Keenan was shot last night by Thomas Pounder, an engineer in the fire department. Keenan, who was discharged from the department yesterday, and who attributed his discharge to Pounder's evidence, met the latter last night and attempted to assault him.

Bonds Handed over to the Syndicate

London, June 7.—William E. Curtis, assistant secretary of the United States treasury department, and Logan Carlisle turned over to the syndicate here, at the Rothschild banking house, the last issue of United States bonds, according to contract.

Capt.-Gen. Prima-Rivera Improving.

Madrid, June 7.—The condition of General Prima-Rivera, the captain-general of Madrid, who was seriously wounded by Captain Clavijo last Monday, shows considerable improvement this morning.

WEATHER INDICATIONS.

The Weather Indications for Tomorrow are Warmer, with Westerly Winds.

At 2 o'Clock Leggett's Thermometer Registered 76 Degrees.

The Hudson County Democratic Society have declared in favor of a sound dollar—that is to say, for the gold standard.

The old saying that "there is nothing new under the sun," was proven to the contrary yesterday in Jersey City, where the Sunday-school scholars of the various churches participated in a mammoth parade, and thus took a novel and practical method of exhibiting their strength.

The Board of Education are advertising for sealed proposals from coal dealers to furnish necessary fuel for the public schools during the coming year. The Board reserve the right to reject any or all bids. The Board should reject all bids received from dealers who are not residents of this city, even though some may be lower than those that may be submitted by the home merchants. Last year the contract for supplying coal was awarded to an out-of-town firm, which was a manifest injustice to the coal dealers of this city who pay taxes here and whose expenditures materially help Plainfield's prosperity. The policy of going out of town to buy coal for the sake of saving a few dollars is not a good one. Let Plainfield dealers supply the fuel for Plainfield schools.

In the case of Benny versus O'Brien the court reversed the opinion of the court below and laid down the principal that children born in the United States of parents domiciled here, are citizens of the United States whether such parents are naturalized or not, except in case the children are born of parents in the diplomatic service. This case grew out of the councilmanic election in Bayonne in which Benny, who was born in this country of unnaturalized parents, was declared elected by one vote over O'Brien, a naturalized citizen. O'Brien contested Benny's legal right to hold office and in the Hudson County Court and Justice Lippincott decided that Benny was not an American citizen and therefore not eligible to the office. This opinion is reversed by this last decision.

ALERT'S GOOD TIME.

Banquet Tendered to Retiring Foreman Burnett.

The members of Alert Hose Company met in their parlors last evening and gave their retiring foreman, C. C. Burnett, a royal good time. Charley has held the position for three years and is very popular among the boys. Genuine sociability reigned supreme and all had a jolly time. A banquet was served during the evening that was all that could be desired. A feature was the ice cream which represented the famous Harry Howard, the old time fireman, and at first glance many thought the moulds to represent Charley Fisk. The joke was thoroughly enjoyed. Remarks were made by E. E. Anthony, Joseph Hawkins, Abner Bartlett, T. O. Doane, James Martin and John Murray, Jr. Mrs. Wm. Townley made and served the coffee, which all unanimously agreed was par excellent.

Mrs. Smalley Will Be Manager.

CYCLING COMMENT.

The racing board of the L. A. W. have granted a sanction for the High School meet tomorrow.

For violating rules Jay Eaton, of Elizabeth, has been declared a professional by the L. A. W. racing board.

Charley Murphy has not given up the idea of trying a mile straightway with an engine as pacemaker. Yesterday he said he hoped to be able to complete the arrangements before the week is over.

Arthur Crane, T. Cuming, Mr. Price and U. B. Crane were on the track at the Crescent Oval yesterday. U. B. Crane, who is doing some fast riding, succeeded in lowering his record, 2:48, made the day previous, to 2:30.

Will R. Pitman, the veteran wheelman of this country, suggests that at the national meet of the L. A. W. to be held at Asbury Park, the veterans of the League of American Wheelmen lead the parade on the old ordinary wheels.

The Victor Wheelmen met at the home of Captain Israel Jones last evening and elected the following officers: President, William Jones; vice-president, Alfred Wilson; treasurer, B. Gibson; secretary, William Fisher; captain, Israel Jones. The club will meet next Wednesday evening to transact important business.

A match race between Arthur A. Zimmerman and John S. Johnson, the professional wheelmen, seems likely to take place this season, in spite of Zimmerman's recent refusal to meet Johnson. The latter's challenge to meet all comers, Zimmerman in particular, in a series of races for the world's championship, has finally resulted in Zimmerman agreeing to ride Johnson a series of match races for a $5,000 purse.

It has been decided that Walter Sanger and Charles W. Murphy will ride a series of match races, best two out of three one-mile heats, at Manhattan Beach on Saturday, June 29th. The race will be held under the auspices of the Kings County Wheelmen. C. M. Murphy recently lowered the one-mile competition record, and is consequently looked upon as a winner, as Sanger is reported to be in poor shape.

The Board of Governors of the Crescent Wheelmen have called a special meeting of the club to be held next Wednesday evening. It will be an important meeting from the fact that the committee appointed to secure new club quarters will make a report and some action taken toward that end. The treasurer will also make a report on the Decoration Day meet, and plans for the Fourth of July celebration will be discussed.

W. H. Beegle, chairman of the Race Committee of the National bicycle meet to be held at Asbury Park in July, has received the following telegram from Tom Eck, Johnson's manager, relative to the challenge issued by Zimmerman, champion bicyclist of the world: "Johnson will hold Zimmerman to his challenge, per American Wheelmen. I posted forfeit in good faith. Zimmerman not posted his money and challenge for $5,000 is unreasonable. Will not ride at Asbury Park." Zimmerman has declared all along that he will not race for less than $5,000 a side. Why Johnson will not race at Asbury Park is something prominent wheelmen can not understand, as the track is one of the best in the country. The Race Committee will confer with Zimmerman, tonight.

The action of the League of American Wheelmen in expelling John S. Johnson, the Minneapolis racer, from the amateur ranks and allowing other class B riders to continue in the amateur ranks is being severely condemned by members of the organization.

It is the unanimous opinion that at least eight of the leading racing men riding under the auspices of the L. A. W. are equally as guilty as Johnson of violation of the amateur rules, and that their expulsion must speedily follow or else the Racing Board of the league will be bound to offer some explanation of its conduct in taking action upon the Johnson case and allowing the other riders to continue in the L. A. W.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destored forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflammed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh, that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A Remarkable Girl.

The June number of Tales from Town Topics presents as its leading feature a daintily-told story of metropolitan social life, by L. H. Bickford, entitled "A Very Remarkable Girl", which is a very delightful morsel of light summer reading. Despite the spirit of airy cynicism that pervades the story, the contrast that it affords between sterling strength of character and the emptiness of fashionable life is admirable. Cynthia Platte, a girl full of the life and vigor of a western bringing-up, but brilliant in mind as she is daring in her defiance of the conventionalities, captures the reader's affections at once, and there are other characters equally well drawn, and quite as entertaining. Following the novelette comes the customary array of spicy tales sketches and bits of humorous and sentimental verse gathered from early numbers of Town Topics.—Town Topics Publishing Company, 208 Fifth avenue, New York.

Sells Bros. Enormous Shows at Elizabeth, Friday, June 21.

Its fame rests securely on a triumphal success covering almost a quarter of a century. It is worthily accorded the highest niche in the temple of American amusements, and is the strongest evidence of the "survival of the fittest." The royal road to the people's hearts is unwavering integrity and a strict adherence to fixed principles. Sells Bros. policy in organizing "The Big Show of the World" for 1895 is to excel in presenting to the American public an exhibition morally pure and instructive, greater, grander in its zoological, arenic and invincible special features than ever seen before, and marshaling in a glorious unparalleled unity three hundred sterling acts in three rings and two elevated stages, equestriennes, bare-back riders, racers, thirty-horse riders, trained horses, educated ponies, trained elephants, trained hippopatami, trained seals and sea lions, graimaldis, comical clowns, jolly jesters, of all earth's illustrious mid-air and arenic champions. Remember, the price is within keeping of the times, and has been reduced from fifty to twenty-five cents, including a seat for every visitor. Watch for the grand, sumptuous and superb street parade at ten o'clock a. m. (rain or shine) on the day of the exhibition. Special excursions will be run on all lines of travel at reduced rates.

Sometime ago I was troubled with an attack of rheumatism. I used Chamberlain's Pain Balm and was completely cured. Old People.

Old people who require medicine to regulate the bowels and kidneys will find the true remedy in Electric Bitters. This medicine does not stimulate and contains no whiskey nor other intoxicant, but acts as a tonic and alterative. It acts mildly on the stomach and bowels, adding strength and giving tone to the organs, thereby aiding nature in the performance of the functions. Electric Bitters is an excellent appetizer and aids digestion. Old people find it just exactly what they need. Price 50c a bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

While in Topeka last March, E. T. Barber, a prominent newspaper man of La Cygne, Kansas, was taken with cholera morbus very severely. The night clerk at the hotel where he was stopping happened to have a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and gave him three doses which relieved him and he thinks saved his life. Every family should keep this remedy in their home at all times. No one can tell how soon it may be needed. It costs but a trifle and may be the means of saving much suffering and perhaps the life of some member of the family. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

I have two little grandchildren who are teething this hot summer weather and are troubled with bowel complaint. I give them Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and it acts like a charm. I earnestly recommend it for children with bowel troubles. I was myself taken with a severe attack of bloody flux, with cramps and pains in my stomach, one-third of a bottle of this remedy cured me. Within twenty-four hours I was out of bed and doing my housework. Mrs. W. L. Dunagan, Bonaqua, Hickman Co., Tenn.

While at Peekskill, N. Y., Mr. J. A. Scriven, a prominent manufacturer of New York City, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Such good results were obtained from its use that he sent back to the druggist from whom he had obtained it for two more bottles of the same remedy. When you have a cough or cold give this preparation a trial and like Mr. Scriven you will want it when again in need of such a medicine. It is a remedy of great worth and merit. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

SKETCHES OF LINCOLN.

Parting With His Old Associates In Springfield.

RISE TO NATIONAL PROMINENCE.

How He Prepared His Inaugural Address. The Firm of Lincoln & Herndon—Miserably Uncomfortable In Strange Habiliments—Douglas Holds His Hat.

[From "The Life of Lincoln" by William H. Herndon and Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1888, by Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1892, by D. Appleton & Co.]

XXI.

Before departing for Washington as president Mr. Lincoln went to Chicago for a few days' stay, and there by previous arrangement met his old friend, Joshua F. Speed. Both were accompanied by their wives, and while the latter were out shopping the two husbands repaired to Speed's room at the hotel. "For an hour or more," relates Speed, "we lived over again the scenes of other days. Finally Lincoln threw himself on the bed, and fixing his eyes on a spot in the ceiling asked me this question, 'Speed, what is your pecuniary condition—are you rich or poor?' I answered, addressing him by his new title: 'Mr. President, I think I can anticipate what you are going to say. I'll speak candidly to you on the subject. My pecuniary condition is satisfactory to me now. You would perhaps call it good. I do not think you have within your gift any office I could afford to take.' Mr. Lincoln then proposed to make Guthrie of Kentucky secretary of war, but did not want to write to him—asked me to feel of him. I did as requested, but the Kentucky statesman declined on the ground of his advanced age and consequent physical inability to fill the position. He gave substantial assurance of his loyal sentiments, however, and insisted that the Union should be preserved at all hazards."

Writing His Inaugural.

Late in January Mr. Lincoln informed me that he was ready to begin the preparation of his inaugural address. He had, aside from his lawbooks and the few gilded volumes that ornamented the center table in his parlor at home, comparatively no library. He never seemed to care to own or collect books. On the other hand, I had a very respectable collection and was adding to it every day. To my library Lincoln very frequently had access. When, therefore, he began on his inaugural speech, he told me what works he intended to consult. I looked for a long list, but when he went over it I was greatly surprised. He asked me to furnish him with Henry Clay's great speech delivered in 1850, Andrew Jackson's proclamation against nullification and a copy of the constitution. He afterward called for Webster's reply to Hayne, a speech which he read when he lived at New Salem, and which he always regarded as the grandest specimen of American oratory. With these few "volumes" and no further sources of reference he locked himself up in a room up stairs over a store across the street from the statehouse, and there, cut off from all communication and intrusion, he prepared the address. Though composed amid the unromantic surroundings of a dingy, dusty and neglected back room, the speech has become a memorable document. Posterity will assign to it a high rank among historical utterances, and it will ever bear comparison with the efforts of Washington, Jefferson, Adams or any that preceded its delivery from the steps of the national capitol.

After Mr. Lincoln's rise to national prominence, and especially since his death, I have often been asked if I did not write this or that paper for him, if I did not prepare or help prepare some of his speeches. I know that other and abler friends of Lincoln have been asked the same question. To people who made such inquiries I always responded: "You don't understand Mr. Lincoln. No man ever asked less aid than he. His confidence in his own ability to meet the requirements of every hour was so marked that his friends never thought of tendering their aid, and therefore no one could share his responsibilities. I never wrote a line for him. He never asked me to. I was never conscious of having exerted any influence over him. He often called out my views on some philosophical question, simply because I was a fond student of philosophy and conceding that I had given the subject more attention than he. He often asked as to the use of a word or the turn of a sentence, but if I volunteered to recommend or even suggest a change of language which involved a change of sentiment I found him the most inflexible man I have ever seen."

The Old Signboard.

Early in February the last item of preparation for the journey to Washington had been made. Mr. Lincoln had disposed of his household goods and furniture to a neighbor, had rented his house, and as these constituted all the property he owned in Illinois there was no further occasion for concern on that score. In the afternoon of his last day in Springfield he came down to our office to examine some papers and confer with me about certain legal matters in which he still felt some interest. On several previous occasions he had told me he was coming over to the office "to have a long talk with me," as he expressed it. We ran over the books and arranged for the completion of all unsettled and unfinished matters. In some cases he had certain requests to make, certain lines of procedure he wished me to observe.

After these things were all disposed of he crossed to the opposite side of the room and threw himself down on the old office sofa, which, after many years of service, had been moved against the wall for support. He lay for some moments, his face toward the ceiling, without either of us speaking. Presently he inquired, "Billy"—he always called me by that name—"how long have we been together?" "Over 16 years," I answered. "We've never had a cross word during all that time, have we?" to which I returned a vehement, "No, indeed we have not." He then recalled some incidents of his early practice and took great pleasure in delineating the ludicrous features of many a lawsuit on the circuit. It was at this last interview in Springfield that he told me of the efforts that had been made by other lawyers to supplant me in the partnership with him. He insisted that such men were weak creatures, who, to use his own language, "hoped to secure a law practice by hanging to his coattail." I never saw him in a more cheerful mood. He gathered a bundle of books and papers he wished to take with him and started to go, but before leaving he made the strange request that the signboard which swung on its rusty hinges at the foot of the stairway should remain. "Let it hang there undisturbed," he said, with a significant lowering of his voice. "Give our clients to understand that the election of a president makes no change in the firm of Lincoln & Herndon. If I live, I'm coming back some time, and then we'll go right on practicing law as if nothing had ever happened." He lingered for a moment as if to take a last look at the old quarters and then passed through the door into the narrow hallway. I accompanied him down stairs. On the way he spoke of the unpleasant features surrounding the presidential office. "I am sick of officeholding already," he complained, "and I shudder when I think of the tasks that are still ahead."

He said the sorrow of parting from his old associations was deeper than most persons would imagine, but it was more marked in his case because of the feeling which had become irrepressible that he would never return alive. I argued against the thought, characterizing it as an illusory notion not in harmony or keeping with the popular ideal of a president. "But it is in keeping with my philosophy," was his quick retort. Our conversation was frequently broken in upon by the interruptions of passersby, who, each in succession, seemed desirous of claiming his attention. At length he broke away from them all. Grasping my hand warmly and with a fervent "Goodby," he disappeared down the street and never came back to the office again.

A Metamorphosis.

One who witnessed the impressive scene left the following graphic description of the inauguration and of principal incidents: "Near noon I found myself a member of the motley crowd gathered about the side entrance to Willard's hotel. Soon an open barouche drove up, and the only occupant stepped out. A large, heavy, awkward moving man, far advanced in years, short and thin gray hair, full face, plentifully seamed and wrinkled, head curiously inclined to the left shoulder, a low crowned, broad brimmed silk hat, an immense white cravat like a poultice, thrusting the old fashioned standing collar up to the ears, dressed in black throughout, with swallowtail coat not of the newest style. It was President Buchanan, calling to take his successor to the capitol. In a few minutes he reappeared, with Mr. Lincoln on his arm. The two took seats side by side, and the carriage rolled away, followed by a rather disorderly and certainly not very imposing procession. I had ample time to walk to the capitol and no difficulty in securing a place where everything could be seen and heard to the best advantage. The attendance at the inauguration was, they told me, unusually small, many being kept away by anticipated disturbance, as it had been rumored—truly, too—that General Scott himself was fearful of an outbreak and had made all possible military preparations to meet the emergency. A square platform had been built out from the steps to the eastern portico, with benches for distinguished spectators on three sides.

"Douglas, the only one I recognized, sat at the extreme end of the seat on the right of the narrow passage leading from the steps. There was no delay, and the gaunt form of the president elect was soon visible, slowly making his way to the front. To me at least he was completely metamorphosed, partly by his own fault and partly through the efforts of injudicious friends and ambitious tailors. He was raising—to gratify a very young lady, it is said—a crop of whiskers of the blacking brush variety, coarse, stiff and ungraceful, and in so doing spoiled, or at least seriously impaired, a face which, though never handsome, had in its original state a peculiar power and pathos. On the present occasion the whiskers were re-enforced by brand new clothes from top to toe, black dress coat, instead of the usual frock, black cloth or satin vest, black pantaloons and a glossy hat evidently just out of the box. To cap the climax of novelty, he carried a huge ebony cane with a gold head the size of an egg. In these, to him, strange habiliments he looked so miserably uncomfortable that I could not help pitying him.

Douglas Holds His Hat.

"Reaching the platform, his discomfort was visibly increased by not knowing what to do with hat and cane, and so he stood there, the target for 10,000 eyes, holding cane in one hand and hat in the other, the very picture of helpless embarrassment. After some hesitation he pushed the cane into a corner of the railing, but could not find a place for the hat except on the floor, where I could see he did not like to risk it. Douglas, who fully took in the situation, came to the rescue of his old friend and rival and held the precious hat until the owner needed it again, a service which, if predicted two years before, would probably have astonished him.

"The oath of office was administered by Chief Justice Taney, whose black robes, attenuated figure and cadaverous countenance reminded me of a galvanized corpse. Then the president came forward and read his inaugural address in a clear and distinct voice. It was attentively listened to by all, but the closest listener was Douglas, who leaned forward as if to catch every word, nodding his head emphatically at those passages which most pleased him. There was some applause, not very much nor very enthusiastic. I must not forget to mention the presence of a Mephistopheles in the person of Senator Wigfall of Texas, who stood with folded arms leaning against the doorway of the capitol, looking down upon the crowd and the ceremony with a contemptuous air, which sufficiently indicated his opinion of the whole performance. To him the southern Confederacy was already an accomplished fact. He lived to see it the saddest of fictions."

Characteristic Humor.

I was in Washington in the Indian service for a few days before August, 1861, and I merely said to Lincoln one day, "Everything is drifting into the war, and I guess you will have to put me in the army." He looked up from his work and said good humoredly: "I'm making generals now. In a few days I will be making quartermasters, and then I'll fix you."—H. C. Whitney, MS. Letter, June 13, 1866.

Thanksgiving Proclamation, Oct. 3, 1863.

"No human council hath devised nor hath any mortal hand worked out these great things. They are most gracious gifts of the most high God, who, while dealing with us in anger for our sins, hath nevertheless remembered mercy. It has seemed to me fit and proper that they should be solemnly, reverently, acknowledged, as with one heart and voice, by the whole American people."

His Long Arms.

Mr. Lincoln's remarkable strength resulted not so much from muscular power as from the toughness of his sinews. He did not attribute it to a greater proportion of physical strength, but contended that because of the unusual length of his arms the ball or projectile had a greater swing and therefore acquired more force and momentum than in the hands of an average man.

MEN GROPE.

A WOMAN SEES THE LIGHT.

She Best Understands a Woman's Ills.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

How gladly would men fly to woman's aid, did they but understand a woman's feelings, trials, sensibilities, and peculiar organic disturbances!

Those things are known only to women, and the aid a man would give is not at his command.

This is why so many women suffer.

Twenty years ago Lydia E. Pinkham gave to the women of the world the result of her years of study in the form of her Vegetable Compound,—a universal remedy for all female complaints.

She well deserves the title, "Saviour of her Sex." She saw the light of reason, and gave it to her suffering sisters.

All female diseases put forth their symptoms, such as nervousness, lassitude, paleness, dizziness, faintness, leucorrhœa, faltering steps, sleeplessness, bearing-down pains, backache, and consequent melancholy and the blues.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has for twenty years saved women from all this. Hear this woman speak:—

"Five years ago at childbirth I did not have proper attention. I became very weak; could lift nothing without bleeding from the womb, which was ulcerated badly. I was examined by a physician, and treated for a time, but was compelled to leave the city before I received benefit from the treatment. I decided then to give your medicine a trial. I improved rapidly on the first bottle of Compound, and now feel like a new woman. Ulcers have ceased to form on the womb as they did. I advise all women in any way afflicted with female troubles to take your remedies, and trust that my testimonial will be seen by friends who knew me when I was so sick, and that they may know I am now well, and that I owe it all to your Vegetable Compound." RESCUING A SLAVE.

THE "UNDERGROUND RAILWAY" AN INCIDENT OF THE REBELLION.

A Time that Tried Men's Souls. The Escape of the Negro Boy John. A Day When the College Classes Dismissed Themselves.

It ceases to be a surprise that the underground railway from the slave States to Canada was a popular and successful route when one has met so charming a lady of seventy-five as is Mrs. James M. Fitch. She and her husband and her brother were conspicuous and important managers. During the fifties her home in Oberlin, O., was one of the stations on the line of the railway, and she was a station mistress. What has come to be known in history as the "Oberlin-Wellington Rescue," resulted in the arrest, with many other Abolitionists, of Mrs. Fitch's husband and her brother. That is all written history. A New York Sun reporter who called on Mrs. Fitch to hear her story of some of the incidents of the underground railway enterprise, met her with her daughter, Mrs. James F. Atkinson, at their residence, 62 St. John's place, Brooklyn.

"My husband was a merchant in Oberlin," said Mrs. Fitch, when she had been induced to speak of her own experiences of the time, "and when he built the house we lived in during the days of the underground railway, he decided to have at least two rooms built in the house in which fugitive slaves could be concealed while they were being harbored there on their way to Black river, where they were taken on board a vessel and thence carried to the end of their journey toward freedom in Canada. One room was reached by a blind door cut through the back partition of a closet off a sleeping room. From the sleeping room the closet seemed to extend to the end of the house, and really there was not much room behind it. But there was space enough for a fugitive to remain comfortably while waiting for dark, perhaps, to continue his journey. You know, under the operation of the Fugitive Slave act, our houses could be searched. If any one opened the closet door he would only see some of the children's dresses hung up against the wall. If the searcher were more than usually inquisitive and took down the dresses there was no door visible. Another room was in the attic. The stairs leading to that attic room were so arranged that a searching party going up them would be at a great disadvantage if the fugitive wanted to resist.

"Of course, when a slave was taken to the attic Mr. Fitch would tell him that if the searchers came he would be obliged to admit them to the house."

Mrs. Fitch said this with a quiet smile which irresistibly led to the conclusion that the fugitive was so entrenched that it would have been possible for him from his advantageous position to successfully combat a small army of pursuers if necessary.

This was not the only detail concerning which she spoke with caution, caution born of many years' experience when caution was necessary for the preservation of the life and liberty, not only of the slaves she harbored, but of herself and her family.

"Sometimes," resumed Mrs. Fitch, "fugitives were brought to Oberlin under a load of hay or in closed vehicles, disguised. They would be taken in and fed, and then means would be arranged to pass them safely on to Black river, where there was a vessel owned by a man who—well, who was opposed to the Fugitive Slave act. Before that law was passed a number of escaped slaves had settled in Oberlin. There were many of their friends there, and it was the boast of the Abolitionists of Oberlin that a fugitive slave had never been captured in that city. And that was a fact until the capture of the slave boy, John. His rescue in Wellington and the imprisonment for months in the Cleveland jail of his rescuers did more, we think, to bring about the feeling in the North which resulted in the war than even the Dred Scott decision or any other one thing.

"I remembered the afternoon in September, 1858, when John, a boy about eighteen, was arrested and rescued. John had escaped two years before from the plantation of John G. Bacon, in Mason county, Ky. A neighbor of Mr. Bacon's, one Anderson Jennings, was in Oberlin in pursuit of some fugitives and accidentally met and recognized John. He secured the necessary authority or, at least, what he assumed to be the necessary authority under the Fugitive Slave act, for the arrest of John, but the officers did not dare to act in Oberlin. They hired a lad of thirteen who lived on a farm some distance out of town to entice John away with the offer of employment at unusual wages. That part of the plan worked, and when the slave with the white boy had reached a safe distance from town he was arrested and taken by a roundabout way to the town of Wellington, nine miles away. The officers and their prisoner were met on the road by a young man of Oberlin, who was one of the comparatively few pro-slavery young men of the town. His sympathies prompted him not to disclose the fact of John's arrest, and, indeed, he did wait until he supposed that the slave was safely on board a train from Wellington on his way to Kentucky. Then he boasted of his discovery—too soon, as it turned out.

"The news was all over town in a flash. Men left their work, their business, their offices; they rushed out to the streets and took any vehicle they found without question. Farmers who were about to drive to their homes offered their horses and wagons to the rescuers. At Oberlin College the classes did not wait to be dismissed. The boys broke out from the college buildings bareheaded and started to run to Wellington. They had to race to beat their professors, who joined with the business men on the trip to Wellington in any vehicle they found on the streets. My brother went in his own buggy, fortunately, as it turned out.

"The crowd reached the hotel in Wellington and found that John and the men who had arrested him had not yet been able to take a train, but were still in the hotel, which the rescuers surrounded. The rescuers learned that the party was locked in a room. Word was gotten to them through the window that the slave would not be allowed to go with his captors.

"While the more calm were discussing what plans to adopt to effect the rescue, a powerful and big black, a freedman, dashed the door of the locked room off its hinges, took up John on his shoulders and rushed down to the street. The captors did not dare to follow, as by that time they understood the temper of the rescuers. Directly opposite the door of the hotel was my brother's buggy. The freedman threw the slave into the back of the buggy, and my brother jumped into the seat, lashed the horses, and before even the rescuers all understood what had been done the boy John was being driven out into the country somewhere, no one knew where. The citizens of Oberlin, having made good their boast that a slave should never be taken from their town, quietly returned to their homes.

"I, like all the other women of Oberlin, was excited and anxious for news. So when my brother entered our house, as he did from the back way and shortly after dark, I demanded of him to tell me at once what had happened. In response he gave me a look of caution, and that, in those days, was all that was required. When I found that all was safe in the house my brother brought the slave in from the back yard and he was taken to one of the secret rooms. It was not considered safe for him to stay with us, so after being clothed and fed he was taken to the house of President Fairchild and from thence the same night to Black river, now called Lorain, and on to Canada.

"My brother, my husband and myself were the only three persons in Oberlin who knew where the rescued slave had been taken to. It was fortunate that this was so, for both my brother and my husband were arrested for complicity in the rescue, but neither was charged with harboring the rescued slave, which would have been the accusation had the real facts been known. We told no one—absolutely no one, and in none of the newspaper articles or in the histories of the case which have been written has that fact ever been stated.

"The rescue caused a great sensation, but nothing like the sensation that was caused by the indictment by a Special Grand Jury impanelled in Cleveland in the United States Court. Thirty-seven citizens of Oberlin and Wellington were indicted under the Fugitive Slave act for rescuing; all except my husband, who, having been out of town, had not been with the rescuing party, and so was charged with aiding and abetting. The United States Marshal came to Oberlin and called on Prof. Peck of the college, who was among those indicted. The Professor told the Marshal that if he would leave with him a list of the names of the men indicted they would appear in court. This the indicted men did. They went to Cleveland, where several of the most prominent attorneys volunteered for their defense. The prisoners refused to give bail and were liberated on their recognizances until the trials began. Then, as they still declined to give bail, they were imprisoned in the jail in Cleveland. By this time I think there were about sixty-five prisoners in all.

"They included merchants, college professors, professional men, mechanics, laborers, men of every station in life in fact. Most of them were in jail about three months. My husband, who was not found guilty, was in jail three months. My brother, who was found guilty, was there only a few days longer, for the Court counted the time they had been in jail before trial as part of the term of imprisonment to which they were sentenced. They lived as comfortably as they could in prison; those who had means arranged to have good meals served for all from a restaurant, and they were visited by ladies of their families. We arranged it so that some Oberlin ladies should be at the jail nearly every day.

"My husband was Superintendent of the Sunday school in Oberlin, and in the early summer of 1859 the Sunday school children paid a visit to the jail instead of having their usual picnic. Mr. Fitch addressed them from a temporary platform erected in the jail yard; but while the children were permitted to go about the jail, he was not allowed outside the limits."

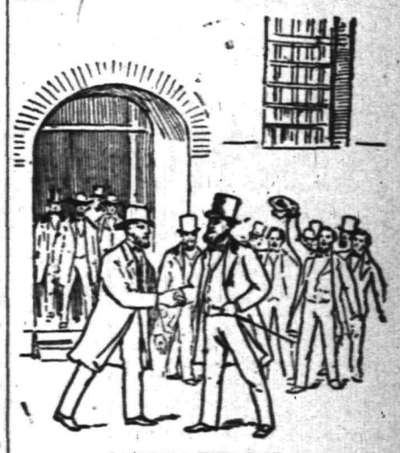
At this point in the story Mrs. Fitch paused, smiled quietly, and then said in an effective manner:

"They were making anti-slavery sentiment very fast just then." Her manner in saying this was nothing less than thrilling. It spoke of the depth and strength of the feeling which actuated those early Abolitionists. Her husband was in jail, to be sure, and, as it happened, guiltless of the particular crime with which he was charged. He had been kept away from his family and his business and his interests for months, confined in a cell, but principle was at stake and "they were making anti-slavery sentiment."

"The men behind the stone w[illegible] Cuyahoga county jail were [illegible] great propaganda work. [illegible] writing to the newspapers, issuing pamphlets, and advising the preachers and ministers of the North who wanted to make sermons on the case, and the fire they started in the Western Reserve extended throughout all the States of the North.

The result was that the Government after having convicted a few of the prisoners, looked about for means of getting all the prisoners off its hands. The men who had arrested the slave, John, had themselves been arrested, on the charge of kidnaping, as the processes by which John had been arrested were illegal or insufficient. The Cleveland Morning Leader of July 7, 1859, tells how the Government got out of the dilemma:

"Considerable excitement was created in this city by the announcement that a proposition had been made by the Kentucky kidnapers to have mutual nolles entered in their own case and the case of the Oberlin rescuers. The consequence was the most intense anxiety among men—Black Republicans and Yellow Democrats—to learn the upshot of the whole matter. The negotiations between Judge Belden and the kidnappers on one side, and the authorities of Lorain (holding the kidnappers) on the other (the Oberlinites refusing to be parties), were consummated yesterday when Marshal Johnson called at the jail and announced to the rescue prisoners that they were free.



LEAVING THE JAIL.

"The news spread rapidly that the Government official caved. Hundreds immediately called on their rescuers to tender their congratulations at this signal triumph of the Higher Lawites. In the afternoon about 5 o'clock a hundred guns were fired, and some several hundred of our citizens gathered at the jail to escort the rescuers to the depot."

Apparently that was only the beginning of the excitement. The rescuers were accompanied to the depot by bands and by a great crowd of men singing "Hail Columbia" and "Yankee Doodle," and at Oberlin the whole community met the rescuers with cheers, prayers and music. There was a public meeting of a religious character, in which, among others, Mr. J. M. Fitch spoke. In concluding his speech he said:

"Never since I became a lover of truth have my hopes risen so high and my confidence in her speedy triumph been so great. Courage and energy are all we want when warring for the Lord. Slavery is a braggart. He is a coward. He foameth and maketh a noise, but he who meets him with the courage of a David and says, 'in the name of the Lord will I destroy you' shall soon see how unequal the conflict when truth and error meet. This glorious company of youths clothed in the panoply of righteousness, strong in the boldness of truth and fired with the zeal of the Lord, could soon send the huge but weak monster—slavery—howling to his native hell."

JAPAN'S SICK AND WOUNDED.

Medical and Surgical Aspect of the Japs' Side of the War.

Great progress has been made in Japan in medicine, and especially in military surgery, in the last few years. The surgeon general has pointed out that the mortality among the wounded in the Satsuma war was 17 per cent., while in the present war it has dropped to 4 per cent. The armies of Japan are accompanied by 1,350 medical attendants, of whom 380 are surgeons. The barrack hospitals in Japan are large, and are equipped with the latest appliances.

The largest of these hospitals is at Hiroshima. The staff consists of 56 surgeons and 501 nurses, in addition to 173 surgeons and nurses from the Red Cross Society, in which many representatives of the Japanese nobility serve. The same society has 138 practitioners and nurses in the field. The remarkable results which have been obtained in the present war in Japanese surgery, medical practice and sanitation are largely due to Dr. Kitasato and other pupils of the great medical schools of Germany.

Dr. Kitasato was one of the most eminent of Dr. Koch's students, and was associated with Dr. Behring in some of the researches which culminated in the discovery of anti-toxine.

Compromise.

Mr. Winterbottom—Emily, the doctor says all we need for these colds of ours is whisky and quinine.

Mrs. Winterbottom—Cyrus, if you think you're going to get any whisky down my throat you are very much mistaken!

Mr. Winterbottom—And I haven't a particle of faith in quinine. So I brought them in separate packages. Here's your quinine.

Too Tough to Chew.

The dinner hour having arrived the cannibals approached the captive.

"Prepare," thundered the chieftain "to die."

The maiden's lips curled.

"Aw, go chase yerself!" she haughtily rejoined.

The savages exchanged startled glances.

"She is certainly tough," they cried, and fled in dismay.—Puck.

THE CHRONICLES OF MARTIN HEWITT

THE CASE OF THE LOST FOREIGNER

By Arthur Morrison.

CHAPTER V.

(Copyright 1895, by the Author.)

We made our way to Lazatti's, and it was over our dinner that Hewitt put me in full possession of the ea lie. facts of this case, which I have set down as impersonal narrative in their proper place at the beginning.

"But," I said, "what of that aimless scribble you spoke of that Gerard made in the police station? Can I see it?"

Hewitt turned to where his coat hung dwell upon the weaker moments of a great man. I will only say this, that when the Emperor needed an agent he was always very ready to do me the honor of recalling the name of Etienne Gerard, though it occasionally escaped him when rewards were to be distributed. Still I was a colonel at 28, and the chief of a brigade at 31, so that I have no reason to be dissatisfied with my career. Had the wars lasted another two or three years I might have grasped my baton, and the man who had his hand upon that was only one stride from the throne. Murat had changed his hussar's cap for a crown, and another light cavalry man might have done as much. However, all those dreams were driven away by Waterloo, and, although I was not able to write my name upon history, it is sufficiently well known by all who served with me in the great wars of the empire.

What I want to tell you to-night is about the very singular affair which first started me upon my rapid upward course, and which had the effect of establishing a secret bond between the Emperor and myself. There is just one little word of warning which I must give you before I begin. When you hear me speak you must always bear in mind that you are listening to one who has seen history from the inside. I am talking about what my ears have heard and my eyes have seen, so you must not try to confute me by quoting the opinions of some student or man of the pen who has written a book of history or memoirs. There is much which is unknown by such people, and much which never will be known by the world. For my own part, I could tell you some very surprising things were it discreet to do so. The facts which I am about to relate to you to-night were kept secret by me during the Emperor's lifetime because I gave him my promise that they should be, but I do not think that there can be any harm now in my telling the remarkable part which I played.

You must know, then, that at the time of the treaty of Tilsit I was a simple lieutenant in the Tenth Hussars, without money or interest. It is true that my appearance and my gallantry were in my favor, and that I had already won a reputation as being one of the best swordsmen in the army, but among the host of brave men who surrounded the Emperor it needed more than this to insure a rapid career. I was confident, however, that my chance would come, though I never dreamed that it would take so remarkable a form.

When the Emperor returned to Paris after the declaration of peace in the year 1807 he spent much of his time with the Empress and the court at Fontainebleau. It was the time when he was at the very pinnacle of his career. He had in three successive campaigns humbled Austria, crushed Prussia, and hurled the Russian armies across the Niemen. The old bulldog over the Channel was still growling, but he could not get very far from his kennel. If we could have made a perpetual peace at that moment France would have taken a higher place than any nation since the days of the Romans. So I have heard the wise folks say, though, for my own part, I had other things to think of. All the girls were glad to see the army back after its long absence, and you may be sure that I had my share of any favors which were going. You may judge how for I was a favorite in those days when I say that even now, in my 60th year—but why should I dwell upon that which is already sufficiently well known.

Our regiment of Hussars was quartered with the Horse Chasseurs of the Guard at Fontainebleau. It is, as you know, but a little place buried in the heart of the forest, and it was wonderful at this time to see it crowded with grand dukes and electors and princes who thronged round Napoleon like puppies round their master, each hoping that some bone might be thrown to him. There was more German than French to be heard in the street, for those who had helped us in the late war had come to beg for a reward, and those who had opposed us had come to try and escape their punishment. And all the time our little man, with his pale face and his cold gray eyes, was riding to the hunt every morning, silent and brooding, all of them following in his train in the hope that some word would escape him. And then when the humor seized him he would throw a 100 square miles to that man, or snip as much off the other, round off one kingdom by a river, or curtail another by a chain of mountains. That was how he used to do business, this little artillery man whom we raised so high with our sabres it as he went along. Many people in perfect health and mental soundness do the same thing if a pen and a piece of paper be near. The man's train of thought led him, in memory, up Tottenham Court road and further, to where some disagreeable recollection upset him. It was my business to trace this train of thought. Do you remember the feat of Dupin in Poe's story, "The Murders in the Rue Morgue"—how he walks by his friend's side in silence for some distance and then suddenly breaks out with a divination of his thoughts, having silently traced them from a fruiterer with a basket, through paving stones, Epicurus, Dr. Nichols, the constellation Orion and a Latin poem by a cobbler lately turned actor? Well, it was some such task as this (but infinitely simpler, as a matter of fact) that was set me. This man begins by drawing the horseshoe clock. Having done with that, and, with the horseshoe still in his mind, he starts to draw a horseshoe simply. It is a failure, and he scribbles it out. His mind at once turns to the Horseshoe Hotel, which he knows from frequently passing it, and its sign of gas jets. He sketches that, making dots for the gas lights. Once started in Tottenham Court road, his mind naturally follows his usual route along it. He remembers the advertising captive balloon half way down, and that goes on his paper. In imagination he crosses the road and keeps on till he comes to the very noticeable Highlander outside the tobacconist's. That is sketched. Thus it is plain that a familiar route with him was from New Oxford street up Tottenham Court road. At the police station I ventured to guess from this that he lived somewhere near Seven Dials—perhaps, before long we shall know if this was right. But to return to the sketches. After the Highlander there is something at first not very distinct. A little examination, however, shows it to be intended for a chimney-pot partly covered with a basket. Now an old basket stuck sideways on a chimney by way of cowl is not an uncommon thing in parts of the country, but it is very unusual in London. Probably, then, it will be in some by-street or alley. Next, and last, there is a horse's head, and it was at this that the man's trouble returned to him! Now, when one goes to a place and finds a horse there, that place is not uncommonly a stable. And as a matter of fact, the basket cowl would be much more likely to be found in use in a range of back stabling than anywhere else. Suppose, then, after taking the direction indicated in the sketches—the direction of Fitzroy Square, in fact—one were to find a range of stabling with a basket cowl visible about it? I know my London pretty well, as you are aware, and I could remember but too likely stable yards in that particular part—the two we looked at, in the second of which you may possibly have noticed just such a basket cowl as I have been speaking of. Well, what we did you know, and that we found confirmation of my conjecture about the loaves you also know. It was the recollection of the horse and cart, and what they were to transport, and what the end of it all had been, that upset Gerard as he drew the horse's head. You will notice that the sketches have not been done in separate rows, left to right; they have simply followed one another all around the paper—which means preoccupation and unconsciousness on the part of the man who made them."

"But," I asked, "supposing those loaves to contain bombs, how were the bombs put there? Baking the bread round them would have been risky, wouldn't it?"

"Certainly. What they did was to cut the loaves, each row down the centre. Then most of the crumb was scooped out, the explosive inserted, and the sides joined up and glued. I thought you had spotted the joints—though they certainly were neat."

"No, I didn't examine closely. Lugi, of course, had been told off for a daily visit to feed the horse, and that is how we caught him.

"One supposes so. They hadn't rearranged their plans as to going on with the outrages after Gerard's defection. By the way, I noticed that he was accustomed to driving when I first saw him. There was an unmistakeable mark on his coat—just at the small of the back that drivers get who lean against a rail in a cart."

The loaves were examined by official experts, and, as everybody now knows, were found to contain, as Hewitt had supposed, large charges of dynamite. What became of some half dozen of the men captured is also well known—their sentences were exemplary.

GIRLS AT THE BAT.

Great Game of Ball Played at Westfield Yesterday.

Westfield was real sporty yesterday, when the local ball team played a game with a nine entitled the "Champion Young Lady Baseball Players of the World." A large number of kranks from Plainfield were present.

Fences and billboards from the depot to the ball park have for several days been covered with pictures of fair ball tossers in short skirts. Mothers, sisters and sweethearts loudly but vainly denounced the posters.

There were about 1,000 spectators inside the grounds when the manager of the girls' club called "Play ball!"

The girls were the first to the bat. They were dressed in short dresses of orange and black, and under these wore black tights.

Lizzie Arlington, the pitcher for the girls, first faced the pitcher. That individual became rattled and was unable to get the ball over the plate, and Lizzie trotted to first base. Rose Mitchell, who covered first base for the girls, stepped to the place, and, as she vainly pushed the air, remarked: "Oh, pshaw! I'll hit it when I'm in the business a few years longer."

She was relieved of a strike out by being presented with a base on balls. Bertha Gordon, the third basewoman, came next, and a base on balls to her filled the bases.

Dorah Wilson, the short stop, next faced the pitcher with the remark that she would kill the ball. Instead she made a two-base hit and everybody cheered. The fielders of the Westfield club ran away from the ball in their surprise and two runs were made. Kittie Reagan, the left fielder, flied out, and Josephine Douglass succeeded in getting her first base, which placed Dorah on third.

Lizzie Sheldon, the centre fielder, was at the plate when Dorah Wilson stole home. The catcher of the Westfield club saw her coming, but dropped the ball, which was thrown to head her off. He fell down and Dorah jumped over his head and touched the plate. The next girl up was retired and then the girls took the field.

When the home team took their places it was found that the girls had no catcher and that they were also short a second baseman. They finally took Daniel King for catcher and Charles Richardson for a baseman and the game proceeded.

It did not take Lizzie long to get down to business, and in a short time she was putting some hot ones over the plate. From that time the men were retired in almost one-two-three order and the girls won hands down.

Now the Westfield team is wondering if it really can play baseball or if it has been dreaming.

A Profitable Festival.

The Whatsoever Circle, King's Daughters, of Trinity Reformed church, feel very grateful for the large attendance and liberal patronage of those present at their festival Thursand Friday evenings. Last evening the attendance was even greater than the preceding evening, and everything on sale was disposed of.

Prof. P. L. Conde and his symphony orchestra were in attendance and pleased all with their musical programme. The orchestra is composed of the following young men: Clarence Mills, Charles Davis, Raymond McGee, Fermin Ferrer, Walter Serrell, Lindley Hillman, Walter Raynolds and William MacKillop.

The net amount realized is something over $100, and the young ladies will use the money during the summer in His name.

—There is no necessity of going to New York. Edward Love keeps a large stock of the best gold and silk embossed wall papers and makes a specialty of fine work.

—William Scribner, Henry Vossler, Clarence Thorn and Percy McVoy went to South Plainfield Thursday night and caught about thirty-five pounds of fish. They are thinking seriously of opening a fish market.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mrs. Thos. Eggers, 139 Florida St., San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result everything else, then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottle at Randolph's drug store. Regular size, 50c and $1.

THE WOMEN CONFIDENT.

Chances For Woman School Suffrage Said to Be Bright.

The committee of ladies, consisting of Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, Mrs. S. Krom, and Mrs. David W. Pond, of Plainfield, Rev. Antoinette Brown Blackwell, of Elizabeth, Dr. Mary D. Hussey, of East Orange, Mrs. Isabella M. Christie and Miss Christie, of Bayonne, Mrs. Sarah Culver, of Ocean Grove, and Miss Philbrook, who has just been admitted to the bar, have spent several days at Trenton this week urging upon the legislature restoration of school suffrage to the women of the state. In every instance the committee was treated with courtesy and consideration, and they believe that the consultations with various committees, notably the judiciary committees of both houses, and with individual members of the legislature, will result in the restoration, at least, of the school suffrage as it has been exercised in the past.

The Judiciary Committee of the Senate—Senators Voorhees, Rogers, and Daly—before whom they urged their claims, had promised to report a bill giving women in the cities of the state the same rights in school matters as their rural sisters. But the conference committee only agreed to recommend that the amendment secure to the latter what they enjoyed by statute before the Supreme Court decided it was unconstitutional.

The women urged that as the women of Massachusetts, Connecticut, Ohio, Iowa, Michigan, and many other states, had made good use of their right to a voice in school affairs, there was no reason why Naw Jersey women should not be trusted in a matter in which they are so closely and deeply concerned.

LIABLE TO BE A ROW.

Westfield Sewer Contractors Won't Employ Resident Italians.

The action of the contractors who are laying the Westfield sewer in refusing to hire any of the resident Italian colony on the work is likely to result in trouble. There are about one hundred able-bodied Italians who live in Westfield, and many of them own real-estate. So far they claim all applications for work made by them have been refused, the reply of the boss being that he did not want any men, while at the same time each train was bringing additions to the force of strange workmen. The local Italian leader says that his friends will wait a reasonable time, and then if they are refused work there will be trouble.

FOURTEEN GIRLS, FOUR BOYS.

Names of the Graduating Class in North Plainfield.

The graduating class in the North Plainfield public school is of more than usual size. It consists of C. Florence Barnes, Sarah M. Douglass, Maud A. French, Edna L. French, Adah Woolston, Mary McLaughlin, Clara Fellows, Florence Duck, Florence Smalley, Stella Swain, Lillian Pope, May S. Linbarger, Hattie Squires, Minnie Gulick, E. Maxwell Honeyman, William C. Buell, Everett J. Peck and Frank McDonald.

The class colors are Nile green and white.

A Talented Divine.

The supply committee of Trinity Reformed Church have been very fortunate in securing such able divines as Rev. J. F. Riggs, D. D., and Rev. J. Preston Searle, D. D., to occupy Rev. Mr. Schenck's pulpit during his illness. Tomorrow Mr. Searle will officiate. Commencing, June 23d, and continuing during July and the first Sunday in August, Rev. James F. Riggs, D. D., of New Brunswick has been secured. Mr. Riggs is a very able preacher, and will no doubt fill Trinity church at each service during his stay in Plainfield. Children's Day services in the Trinity Reformed church tomorrow morning at 10:30. Address by Rev. J. Preston Searle, D. D., who will also preach at the evening service, 7:45.

His Fingers Crushed.

Robert Jackson, of Spooner avenue, while polishing a piece of work at the Pond Machine Tool Works yesterday seriously injured his left hand. The polisher caught and drawing his left hand in, crushed the thumb and first finger severely. He went to Muhlenberg hospital and had it dressed.

—Wm. Smith's house on Grandview avenue has just been very handsomely decorated on the interior by J. Goodwin. The work was finished yesterday.

AMATEUR THESPIANS.

A Dramatic Club for Plainfield Will be Organized.

Invitations have been sent out to many people who have been identified with, or interested in, amateur dramatic entertainments that have been given in Plainfield in the past few years, to attend a meeting at the Hillside Tennis club for the purpose of organizing a dramatic club which will in all probibility control all amateur theatricals in this city for the future.

Much interests has been felt in the proposed scheme and a large attendance is expected at this first meeting, which is to take place on Monday evening, June 10th.

For several years The Daily Press has advocated some snch plan as that which is now being discussed by those interested in the formation of the club. With the undoubted talent possessed by our amateurs and the lively interest society has always taken in their productions, the two essentials for a successful club have been provided and it only remains to be proved that the members will be far too sensible and have the success of the organization too much at heart to allow the usual stumbling blocks which stand in the way of dramatic associations to have any weight whatever.

Under the direction of a well orrganized club society plays, which have always been the most interesting events of the season in Plainfield, should be better managed, better acted and if possible, better patronized than ever before.

LITTLE IMPORTANT BUSINESS.

The Board of Freeholders Transacted County Bridge Affairs.

The Board of Chosen Freeholders did but little important business at their meeting in Elizabeth on Thursday, principally passing on bridge matters.

The committee on Plainfield bridges reported that they met with the representatives of Somerset county, and agreed to recommend the construction of a low iron truss bridge over Green brook, at a cost not to exceed $1,000. The recommendation was adopted.

Freeholder Westcott offered a resolution that the county road committee be authorized to make repairs to the roads in the manner they believe to be for the best interest of the county. The resolution was adopted.

The keepers of Elizabeth draw bridges were also appointed.

RATTLESNAKES IN PLAINFIELD.

Harry Williams Bitten By One of These Reptiles Yesterday.

Harry Williams was bitten yesterday afternoon by a young rattlesnake while at work weeding his garden on the Lessignola estate on East Front street. He came to the city and had the wound cauterized. The reptile was captured and placed in a fruit jar, and is now on exhibition at The Press office. It is a young one, no rattles have yet appeared on its tail, and no evil results are feared from the bite inflicted on Mr. Williams.

The Dog Question Discussed.

After the session of the North Plainfield Council last evening, several of the spectators, including some of the Councilmen, became interested in the dog question. Some held that when a man paid a license on a dog it was his property and could not be taken to a pound, while others held that unless the dog was properly muzzled and had a collar on he could be captured, even if the license had been paid. The question was agitated in a lively manner, and though it was not settled, those who participated are no doubt feeling better for having relieved their minds.

Would Make a Nice Showing.

Manager Mills of the United States Express company is desirous that the company be represented in the Fourth of July parade, and would like very much to secure the use of the United States Express company's handsome wagon that was on exhibition at the World's Fair. As soon as Mr. Mills is assured that the parade will take place, he will write to headquarters asking that the wagon be loaned for that day.

Benner Defeats Smith.

At the Climax Gun club grounds yesterday afternoon a friendly match at live birds was shot between Jack Benner and Charles Smith. Benner was handicapped at four birds, that is Smith was to shoot at twenty-nine birds against Benner twenty-five. The result was a score of twenty-three to twenty in Benner's favor.

CANINE LEGISLATION.

Borough Council Postpone the Watchung Ave. Extension.

AND APPOINT A DOG CATCHER.

Clerk Arnold and Collector Spencer File Reports—J. P. Humble Filed Objections to the Opening of Watchung Avenue—Duer Street Petitions Postponed Until Next Meeting.

All the North Plainfield Councilmen were present at the regular June meeting held last evening. The minutes of the last regular and adjourned meetings were read and approved. Clerk Arnold presented his financial report ending May 3d, 1895, which was as follows:

	Balance.	Deficit.
Borough	$784.20
Fire Department		$289.06
Light Account	479.93
Roads		169.95
Poor		100.00
	$1,264.13	$559.01
	559.01
Total balance	$705.12
Received from license		75.00
Received from Justice Crosley		53.62
Total		$128.62

Tax Collector Spencer presented the following statement of taxes since previous reports, respectively:

For 1885, borough		$10.55
For 1886, borough		10.53
" " roads		15.20	$25.73
" 1887, borough		8.64
" " roads		11.52	$20.16
" 1888, borough		1.53
" " lights		4.42
" " roads		3.06
" " fire department		85	$ 9.86
" 1889, borough		3.60
" " light		10.80
" " roads		9.00
" " fire department		3.15	$26.55
" 1890 borough		5.11
" " lights		16.06
" " roads		16.06
" " fire department		7.30	$44.53
Total			$137.38

Both of the above were received and filed.

Wm. M. Tallman in a communication asked Council to repair Maple avenue. It was referred to the street committee.

In a communication J. P. Humble objected seriously to the opening of Watchung avenue, claiming it would be no benefit and that it would only be used by sporting men, and besides it would levy an unnecessary tax. The letter was received and filed.

The street committee, through Chairman Smith, presented the following report from May 3, 1895, to June 7, 1895, showing the amount of money expended on streets:

Mountain avenue	$280.97
Giraud "	21.87
West End "	48.99
Prospect place	2.00
Rockview avenue	6.00
Myrtle "	19.75
Craig place	9.00
Race street (crosswalks)	5.50
Harmony " "	5.27
Somerset street	127.48
Total	$526.83

The report was received and filed.

The usual budget of monthly bills were presented and after being audited, warrants were ordered drawn for the same.

Mr. Lounsbury stated that the license and marshal committee had arranged to have special marshals on every Saturday night for four hours; also that they had examined the lockup and decided that additional doors were needed. Several of the marshals should be provided with clubs and should have cards with their names on to be distributed among the citizens of the borough.

The appointment of a dog catcher was also deemed necessary. Mr. Lounsbury's report was received and filed. Mr. Smith stated that the work of macadamizing Somerset street would be finished today; also that he had obtained a surveyor to examine the grade in front of the public school with a view to carrying off surplus water when it rained, and that it was found necessary to go to Linden avenue for an outlet. This would remedy the difficulty. He also stated that the last $1,000 appropriation would probably not be touched this year. Mr. Smith offered a resolution, which was carried, that the mayor and clerk negotiate a loan of $1,500 and charge the same to the road account.

Mr. Lounsbury offered a resolution that a sum not exceeding $30 be expended to purchase clubs for the marshals, and also one that the same amount be used in placing iron doors in the lockup. Both were adopted.

Mr. Smith offered a resolution that the action of the mayor and council in drawing $197, $81.42, $96.37 in favor of pay roll, be ratified. It was adopted.

Mr. Schutt offered a resolution in which he claimed that Wilson, who was furnishing the borough with crushed stone, had violated his contract because he had not furnished what the contract called for. He recommended that a committee of three be appointed to investigate, and if the charges were sustained, that the contract be declared void.

After considerable discussion by all the members, the motion to adopt the resolution was lost. The street committee will attend to the matter, and see that the borough gets the size of stone needed on the streets.

Mayor Hegeman appointed Benjamin Vandervoort dog catcher, and Mr. Lounsbury offered a resolution that the appointment be confirmed, which was adopted.

Mr. Lounsbury also offered a resolution that the license and marshal committee secure a suitable place for a dog-pound, and that the dog ordinance be advertised in the Plainfield papers.

Mr. Smith unintentionally played a joke on Mr. Howell that was much enjoyed by the Councilmen. He handed him a petition from residents of Harrison street, who asked to have to have the street macadamized. The petition was presented at the May meeting, and was referred to the street committee for correction. Mr. Smith wanted Mr. Howell to offer the resolution, and instead Mr. Howell started to read the petition, when Mayor Hegeman corrected him.

Mr Lounsbury offered a resolution that Council advertise for bids to macadamize Harrison street. It was adopted.

It was thought that the Watchung avenue extension matter would come up, but was deferred for one week on a motion, and a large number of citizens went away disappointed as no opportunity was given to voice their opinions on the question of extension.

The papers necessary to present to the Council for the extension of Duer street were not presented, it being thought best to get more signatures of property owners directly interested. It will be presented at the next meeting of Council, however, and undoubtedly the street will be opened this summer.

The Council then adjourned to Friday evening, June 15th.

Miantonomoh Tribe Are Pushing the Fourth of July Celebration.

Matters concerning the proposed Fourth of July celebration was the principal business discussed at the meeting of Miantonomoh tribe of Red Men

The original committee of three, who started the ball a rolling, were continued, and the following committee of ten appointed to make the necessary arrangements for the tribe: William Newcorn, William Westphal, A. J. Stiglitz, John Hewitt, Charles Holstein, Wilbur Sherwood, George S. McGinnis, Joseph Newman, J. A. Karet and W. C. McGue. Chief of Records Newcorn was authorized to apply for a special dispensation from the great council to wear the lodge regalia in the parade. The sum of $100 was voted to defray expenses. It was decided to invite the following tribes to be present as their guests on that day: Pamparo, Bayonne; Omenee, Opeechee and Leola, Elizabeth; Rahwack, Rahway; Po Ambo, Perth Amboy; Naratcong, Somerville; Raritan, Raritan. Iona council was also invited to assist in entertaining the visiting tribes.

WITTY SAYINGS.

Unique Entertainment at the First Presbyterian Church.

Witty sayings are usually enjoyed when read, but to have them acted out is a new departure in the line of entertaining, but such was the programme at the Christian Endeavor sociable held in the First Presbyterian church last evening. After allowing their audience time to get settled, the folding doors into one of the classrooms were opened, and the first of the scenes shown. Their titles were as follows:

They were religious; Very, very funny; The day after Christmas; Why she named her Japan; A modern tongue; Frank, but not flattering; A complex question; A difficult lesson; Seeking information; A difficult combination; Snapped up; Fake Prodigy; Wild enough for anything.

A piano duet by Misses Flora Petrie and Olive Newell was thoroughly enjoyed during one of the intermissions.

After the entertainment had closed, the committee passed iee-cream and cake, while all tried to become better acquainted with each other. The enterprising social committee consisted of Mrs. Remson, Misses Mary Luckey, Edith Pruden, Margaret Cave, Helen Boice, Pansy Herring, Emma Havens, Margaret Vermeule, Evelin Searing, Mrs. Fraley, Miss Abbott, Guernsey Nevins and Frank Flannery, and all deserve great credit for the novel and most pleasing entertainment they provided, and the excellent manner in which the evening passed off.

SAVED FROM BECOMING JAIL BIRDS.

Lawyer DeMeza Secures the Release of Three Boys.

Lawyer George DeMeza won quite a victory in county court this morning, when he succeeded in persuading Judge McCormick to suspend sentence in the cases of Charles Killorn and William Connett, who were convicted of stealing a quantity of oats from a car owned by French Brothers some weeks ago in this city.

In the case of Willie Drake, who was convicted of the same offense, and last Saturday sentenced to the Reform School, the Judge reopened the case, and after hearing what Mr. DeMeza had to say concerning the case, also suspended sentence on him.

Perseverance Is Active.

At the meeting of Perseverance lodge, No. 74, K. of P., held last evening, it was decided to meet every Friday this month, and the nomination of officers was put off till Friday, June 21. Two candidates received the first rank last evening. The committee on Fourth of July celebration were given full power to act and they will arrange to have a float for the parade, and will invite Unity and Goodwill lodges and Crescent division to join with them.

To Show Off the Finny Tribe.

Rogers, the sea food dealer, is arranging for an attractive exhibition of fish. A large tank is being placed in a front window in the centre of which will be a fountain about eighteen inches high. He will secure a collection of gold and silver fish and as many different varieties as possible. It will probably be ready by Wednesday of next week.

May Leave a Scar.

Miss Albert, of East Fourth street, has been confined to her home by illness for the past few days. Yesterday she came down stairs and walked to the kithen, when she experienced a dizzy feeling. Before she could be caught she fell in a faint, striking her face on the stove. Her nose was burned badly and it may leave a scar for life.

A Strange Passenger.

A North Plainfield woman was the recipient of considerable notice yesterday afternoon as she rode a bicycle through the streets, to the front of which she had securely fastened a live turtle, which she was taking home from market.

Mr. Thorn May Move.

Edward P. Thorn, of this city, is considering an offer to take charge of the cafe at the Grand Opera House, Eighth avenue and Twenty-third street, New York city.

Died in Its Mother's Arms.

A young child of Mr. and Mrs Johnson, who reside on the corner of Grove street and Green brook road, died in the arms of its mother this morning while being taken to the doctor.

—A horse was taken from the Metropolitan stables to Frank Hand's blacksmith shop yesterday to be shod. Though the animal was unusually balky Mr. Hand succeeded in doing the work. He was assisted by four men.

BUSINESS IS IMPROVING

The Gain Continues with Surprising Rapidity.

Demand for Consumption Steadily Improves as Employment and Wages Increase—Demand for Money Expanded—Worst Reports Better Than Recent Estimates.

New York, June 8.—Dun's resume of the condition of business for the week just closing will say: The tide of business is rising, even as it was falling just two years ago, with surprising rapidity. The gain has gone so far and so fast in some branches that the more conservative fear it may not be maintained. But the period of dullness which comes in each market after an unusual rise brings as yet nothing like a corresponding decline. Industries gain much, halt or fall back a little, and then gain once more. The demand for consumption steadily increases as the employment and wages of the people increase. Demand for money expands, one bank reporting 29 per cent larger discounts for the country, and another 23 per cent more commercial loans than a year ago, and all but two report some gain. One serious question remains, whether the crops will be full enough to sustain a large business. But the worst reports to-day are better by far than the estimates recently current.

Estimates of Wheat Crop.

Wheat rose two cents, fell back two with realizing, and has again risen three with a western estimate of a crop eighty million bushels smaller than last year. It is pertinent to remember that official, and most unofficial reports, down to a late period last fall, put the yield about eighty million bushels lower than it is now known to have been. Western receipts were 264,000 more than last year, and for five weeks have been 7,671,031 bushels, against 6,991,650 last year, while Atlantic exports, flour included, 670,000 bushels smaller for the week, have been in five weeks 7,738,728 bushels, against 11,945,478 last year. There is neither holding back by farmers, nor anxious haste in purchasing by foreigners, to support belief in scarcity.

Boom in Cotton and Woolens.

Cotton mills are doing well, with very satisfactory orders already for prominent lines, and the market is strong with occasional further advances. In knit goods there is also some improvement, and higher prices for yarn, though prices have been cut in some kinds of hosiery. The effort to end the Olneyville strike was not wholly successful, and in a few other woolen mills strikes have occurred, but the demand for goods looks better, and a fair start has been made in re-orders for fall goods. Business in blankets is the largest since 1892, and the outlook in medium and fine worsteds and in cassimeres is thought favorable. Sales of wool continue larger than in any previous year, and for the five weeks have been 27,713,250 pounds against 26,800,150 in 1892, but demands of western holders are chasing much larger purchases of foreign wool.

Iron and Steel.

Iron pushes upward like the great buildings into which so much of it goes and the advance in finished products has become general. Of structural steel 12,600 tons were turned out in May by the Homestead works, breaking the record, and prices rise to 1.3 cents for beams, and 1.3 for angles. The Eastern bar association has raised the price of refined iron to 1.1 cent, and the Amalgamated association demands of Pittsburg and western markets a change of wages with 1.1 cents as the basis. Coke producers are said to have substantially agreed upon sales by an agency and allotment of output, and an advance in price to $1.50 or higher. This and purchases of 50,000 tons by the largest producer of pig iron have raised Bessemer to $12 at Pittsburg, and southern pig has again been advanced 25 cents, making 75 in all. Chicago works are in full operations, though the demand from agricultural implement makers lags because the coming harvest is in doubt.

M'LAUGHLIN CONVICTED.

The New York Police Inspector Guilty of Extortion.

New York, June 8.—Inspector of Police McLaughlin was convicted this morning of extortion. The jury was out only an hour and twenty minutes, and when the foreman announced the verdict McLaughlin collapsed and reeled backward when he heard the news. The district attorney made a vigorous attack on McLaughlin when addressing the jury and the judge's charge was, on the whole, against him. After the usual motion for new trial, etc., McLaughlin was taken to the Toombs and locked up. He will be sentenced a week from next Mondy, if the motion for new trial and arrest of judgment is denied.

Illinois Will Participate.

Springfield, Ill., June 8.—The bill appropriating $15,000 to enable the state of Illinois to participate in the Atlanta exposition has passed the house by a vote of 79 ayes against 18 nays. The bill was introduced in the senate by a republican. It now goes to the governor.

League Games Yesterday.

At New York—New York, 9; Louisville, 3. Brooklyn—Brooklyn, 10; Cincinnati, 9. Boston—Boston, 3; Pittsburg, 1. Philadelphia—St. Louis, 9; Philadelphia, 5. Baltimore—Chicago, 10; Baltimore, 8. Washington—Cleveland, 8; Washington, 5.

Zimmerman Puts Up the Cash.

Asbury Park, N. J., June 8.—Champion Arthur A. Zimmerman has deposited in the First National bank, of Asbury Park, $5,000 as evidence that his recent challege to race John S. Johnson for a stake of $10,000 was made in good faith.

Twelve People Drowned.

London, June 8.—The Daily News today publishes a dispatch from Riga saying that a sailing craft capsized in Stint lake. There were sixteen persons aboard of her only four of whom were saved.

Cyclone in South Dakota.

Summit, S. D., June 3.—A cyclone passed six miles west of here Thursday night doing much damage to houses and barns, but no loss of life has been reported.

CHAIRMAN HARRITY'S LETTER.

Believes That a Convention Would Be Harmful to Business Interests.

Philadelphia, June 8.—National chairman William F. Harrity has written the following open letter in answer to queries put to him regarding the possibility of a democratic national convention in the near future to take action on the subject of free silver:

No Necessity for a Convention.

"I do not expect or intend to call a meeting of the democratic national committee until next winter, when it will meet for the purpose of fixing the time and place for holding the democratic national convention of 1896 unless I shall be requested to do so by the requisite number of members of the democratic national committee. I do not believe there is any necessity for a convention at this time; on the contrary, I am of the opinion that to call one now would be harmful to the business interests of the country and prejudicial to the welfare of the democratic party.

"WILLIAM F. HARRITY."

No Views To Express.

When called upon Mr. Harrity said that he had no views to express at this time on the money question, and had nothing whatever to say further than is contained in the above letter.

PARDONED AT ONCE.

Gov. Morton Acts on the Case of Shannon and Henry.

Albany, June 8.—In accordance with the request of District Attorney Fellows, Gov. Morton yesterday pardoned Patrick Shannon and John Henry, who were sentenced in August, 1894, to imprisonment for one year in the penitentiary for the alleged crime of entering a building with intent to steal.

Victim of a Fearful Mistake.

The pardons were granted immediately on the receipt of a letter from District Attorney Fellows, in which he says: "Facts recently brought to light make the absolute innocence of these two men apparent. The real culprits have been arrested and one has pleaded guilty. The other is now on trial. The complainant against Shannon and Henry is now satisfied of his error in identifying them, and appears as complainant against the men last arrested. On all the facts of the case there is not a shadow of doubt that these two men were the victims of a fearful mistake, and I earnestly beg your excellency to correct it as far as possible by granting them a pardon."

"A JUDICIAL MURDER."

Clavijo's Execution So Denounced in the Chamber of Deputies.

Madrid, June 8.—In the chamber of deputies last night Senor Ortega, a republican member, censured the government for permitting the execution of Major Clavijo, who was shot for attempting to assassinate General Primo Rivera, captain general of Madrid. Senor Ortega characterized the execution as a judicial murder. He demanded proof of the legality of the execution, and said he considered that the officials had driven Major Clavijo to desperation by exhausting his patience. General Azcarraga, minister of war, declared that all the formalities of law had been duly observed in the proceedings against Major Clavijo. He protested against the language used by Senor Ortego.

RELAY BICYCLE RACE.

The Red Rider Finishes at 2 O'clock This Morning; Blue at 2.49.

New York, June 8.—L. D. Munger, the red courier in the Chicago-New York relay race, rode into the bicycle academy at Sixtieth street and the Boulevard at exactly 2 o'clock this morning with the red package addressed to General Miles. General Miles warmly greeted Munger, and expressed himself as highly delighted with the result of the experiment. When the red rider arrived at the terminus the blue light was not in sight. Billy Murphy, carrying the blue package for Postmaster Dayton arrived at the terminus at 2.49 a. m.

INSULTED PAULINE HALL.

Duncan B. Harrison Then Struck the Offending Britisher.

London, June 8.—The passengers of the Paris who arrived here from Southampton are talking of a row which took place between Duncan B. Harrison and a big Britisher named Woodward, on the fifth night out from New York. Woodward insulted Pauline Hall, and when Harrison remonstrated Woodward abused him and Americans generally. Harrison thereupon struck Woodward in the face and the latter appealed to Capt. Watkins to have the actor put in irons. The captain however declined.

AGROUND ON A REEF.

Passengers of the Steamer Davaur Landed by the Irish Coast Guard.

Queenstown, June 8.—The British steamer Davaur is ashore on Brigg's reef, near Bangor, County Down. Four hundred of her passengers have been landed by boats of the coast guard. The steamer lies in an easy position. Assistance has been sent to her. She will probably be floated at the next high tide.

Bellefonte's Centennial.

Bellefonte, Pa., June 8.—The general centennial day of the Bellefonte celebration was a decided success and the ceremonies were witnessed by 15,000 people. The parade was a monster one, embracing most all the civil and military organizations in the county.

Another Trolley Victim.

Brooklyn, N. Y., June 8.—Henry Boyson, 35 years old, was run over by a trolley car of the Brooklyn Heights railroad company at Alabama avenue, yesterday afternoon, and died two hours later from his injuries. Boyson was a switchman in the employ of the road.

To Inspect Gun Carriages.

Washington, June 8.—Captain William Crozier, ordnance department, has been ordered to visit the Bethlehem Iron works and Cramp & Sons' ship yards on duty pertaining to the inspection of gun carriages.

Inspected the Defender.

Newport, R. I., June 8.—Commodores Sampson and Wallace and several other naval officers visited Bristol yesterday by invitation of the Herreschoffs to inspect the Defender. They went on torpedo boat Stiletto.

An Old Rumor Revived.

London, June 8.—The Post to-day will publish a dispatch from Rome saying that it is semi-officially announced that Mgr. Satolli, will be made cardinal at the next papal consistory.

TO AID THE PATRIOTS

A Big Expedition Gets Away From Florida.

Unusual Activity and Suspicious Movements Among the Rebel Sympathizers—Customs Officials on the Alert—Two or Three Hundred Armed Men Sail Away.

Jacksonville, Fla., June 8.—A cablegram from Key West, Fla., says: Unusual excitement has been noticed among the Cuban population for the past day or two, and it is now positively known that an expedition of two or three hundred well equipped men, Cubans and Americans, has left this city since Wednesday, commanded by Serafin Sanchez. It is reported that a large schooner painted black, supposed to be the Nassau schooner Mary Jane, was seen hovering near the east end of the island late Wednesday afternoon. Shortly after she was sighted several bands of men were seen going in the same direction, each armed with a brace of pistols, Winchester rifles and packs on their shoulders. It is rumored that the expedition will sail from one of the Bahama islands.

Customs Officials on the Alert.

General Roloff and Rodrigues with 50 or 60 men left on Wednesday night on the steamship Mascotte. Many familiar faces are missed from the streets to-day. It is said that another band will attempt to leave the city during the night. The customs officials are exerting every effort to prevent infractions of the neutrality laws. A prominent shoe dealer of this city states that he ordered 200 pairs of heavy cavalry boots for Roloff which were delivered last week. Several tailors have been working day and night, the past three or four weeks, making clothing for the expedition.

Well-Equipped Expedition.

A prominent Cuban says this expedition is the best equipped of any that has left the states and if successful in landing will put a different face on the Cuban matters. The revenue cutter Morrell left the harbor last night under orders from the collector of customs who is exerting every effort to prevent expeditions leaving this district. The Morrell will patrol the gulf and search every vessel that has a suspicious look. Every available man on the customs force has been called into service and all are doing patrol duty.

WILL CLAIM THE SEAT.

Dupont Denies That He Has Given Up the Fight in Delaware.

Wilmington, Del., June 8.—In response to a question by a reporter, Col. Henry A. Dupont, who received fifteen votes for United States senator at the final session of the Delaware general assembly, said "I was surprised to hear yesterday that a report was current in the lower part of the state that I did not intend to claim a seat in the United States senate. This report is without foundation. I absolutely approve of the protest made in the joint convention of the general assembly against the participation of Governor Watson in the proceedings of that body, and propose at the proper time and in the proper place to have an adjudication made not only of my claim, but of the right of the people of this state to be fully represented in the senate of the United States."

SOCIETY ARMY POTOMAC.

Arrangements for the Meeting at New London Progressing Rapidly.

New London, Conn., June 8.—Arrangements for the meeting of the Society of the Army of the Potomac here June 18 and 19, are progressing rapidly toward completion. Acting Secretary of the Navy Ramsay has notified Mayor Johnston that the United States ships Atlanta and Raleigh have been ordered to proceed to New London by the 18th inst. to be present during the visit of the society. Brigadier General Haven, of the Connecticut national guard, has been appointed marshal of the parade, which will include the Army of the Potomac, militia, blue jackets, Grand Army posts, etc.

EUROPEANS IN DANGER.

An Open Revolt of the Bedouins at Jiddah Expected.

Jiddah, Arabia, June 8.—The situation here is still considered very grave for the Europeans who have not been able to take refuge on board the foreign vessels in the harbor. There are very few Turkish troops in garrison here, and the towns people generally are pleased at the Bedouin attack on the foreign consuls and the wrecking of the cholera hospital. This being pilgrimage time, religious feeling among the masses runs very high, and unless something is immediately done by some one of the powers to enforce respect for Europeans the lives of the latter will not be safe. An open revolt of the Bedouins is very probable.

Big Blaze at Middleton.

Hartford, Conn., June 8.—The central business section of Middletown narrowly escaped destruction by fire last night. Fire started about 9 o'clock in Smith and Harris's livery stable on Court street and the block between Court and Center streets was gutted.

Efforts To Disbar a Buffalo Lawyer.

Buffalo, June 8.—In the general term of the supreme court an order has been granted compelling attorney John A. Dorthy, of Rochester, to show cause why he should not be debarred from practice. He is charged with non-professional conduct.

Caving in of a Mine.

Bismarck, Mo., June 8.—The top of the Doe Run lead mine, at Flat river, caved in yesterday afternoon killing three men and badly injuring a fourth. The dead are Robert Penborty, Robert Labuyure, John Decrous.

Peary Relief Expedition.

Chicago, June 8.—When the Peary relief expedition leaves St. Johns, N. B., for the Arctic circle it will be accompanied by Prof. Rollin D. Salisbury of the Chicago university. The party will be under the direction of Mrs. Peary.

Another Wage Advance.

Bethlehem, Pa., June 8.—Three hundred employes of the zinc works here have been notified of a general increase in wages of 10 per cent.

OUR BOYS COMMENDED

Cornell Crew's Snap Appreciated by the Britons.

They Realize That the Best of the English Crews Must Look to Their Laurels — The American Paper Shells Examined With Much Curiosity—The Men in Good Form.

Henley, Eng., June 8.—The members of the Cornell crew are not yet all settled at the quarters at Underwood, but everything will be completed for the reception of all hands by to-day. An arrangement has been made for the crew to buy all necessary provisions for themselves, and they will be prepared for the table as desired. The accommodations are excellent, and the crew are well satisfied with what Mr. Hastings has done for them in the limited time at his disposal.

Their First Row Over the Course.

When the crew went out for its first row over the course the wind was a diagonal one and quite fresh, so that they kept well in under the shelter of the Berkshire bank, which is about six feet above the water level. The trial was very satisfactory, notwithstanding it was the first time the crew had been afloat for ten days. Courtney was well pleased, and afterward said that he considered the eight had done remarkably well.

Their Dash Commended.

The style of the crew gave rise to a good deal of criticism on the part of those who had gathered along the bank. The snap and dash drew forth many expressions of commendation, and there was an evident feeling that the best of the English crews would have to look to their laurels, and that they had their work cut out to beat the visitors.

Paper Shells New to Them.

There was a great deal of curiosity to examine the paper shells, for they row entirely in cedar boats here. The excellence of the model and the smoothness of finish excited as much comment as their stiffness.

To Be Tendered a Reception.

The crew is to be tendered a reception this evening by the local dignitaries at which the society of the neighborhood will be present. The men are all in the best of health and spirits, and ready to respond to every call Courtney will make on them.

INTERNATIONAL ATHLETICS.

Comments on the Oxford-Cambridge Challenge to Yale and Harvard.

London, June 8.—Great interest is taken here in the prospects of an international athletic contest between the universities of Oxford and Cambridge and teams from American universities. The St. James' Gazette says: "It will do good to the universities of both countries and help to produce a friendlier feeling on both sides of the Atlantic." The Pall Mall Gazette, in the course of a column editorial on the subject, remarks: "There will be additional interest in the meeting in view of the London Athletic club fixture, and we shall thus have international contests which should enable the athletes of both countries to take thorough stock of each other's capacities.' After alluding to the benefit of such contests, that paper continues: "Ever spectator of the contests between Oxford and Yale was struck by the manly spirit in which Americans bore the barest of bare defeats. We are not ashamed to say that this association of youth with youth may help to shape the relationships of the two peoples."

CONVEYED ON YELLOW SILK.

China's Thanks for Our Friendly Offices Delivered.

Washington, June 8.—Yang Yu, the Chinese minister, accompanied by two members of his suite, was received by the president at the White house yesterday afternoon in order to present an official communication from the Chinese government formally thanking the president and government of the United States for their friendly offices in behalf of securing peace between China and Japan. The minister was escorted by Mr. Uhl, the acting secretary of state, and the interesting ceremony took place in the blue room, the official audience chamber of the White house. The document containing China's expressions of gratitude was of yellow silk and ornamented by ribbons of the same color. It was about two feet wide and several feet in length. The ceremony was very brief, and at its conclusion the minister and the members of his suite withdrew.

Consul Lott's Funeral.

Managua, Nicaragua, June 8, (via Galveston).—Hiram Lott, the United States consul here, who died here Thursday afternoon after a short illness, was buried yesterday. The body was escorted to the cemetery by all the Nicaraguan ministers, hundreds of prominent citizens and a detachment of 200 soldiers, headed by the band of the national guard. A military salute was fired over the grave.

"Puller-in" Barnett Goes Free.

New York, June 8.—Judge Fitzgerald, of the court of general sessions, has dismissed the indictments for murder in the second degree against Abraham Barnett, the Baxter street puller-in, who knocked down Thomas C. Cowes, a printer, the latter dying from the effects of the fall. Barnett was twice tried and the jury disagreed in both instances.

Strike at North Billerica.

Lowell, Mass., June 8.—All the help struck work last night in Talbot's mills, North Billerica, with the exception of the wool sorters. Dissatisfaction with regard to the wages is the cause. This is the first trouble the firm has ever had with its employes.

Mr. Gompers Much Better.

Little Rock, Ark., June 8.—Samuel Gompers, ex-president of the American federation of labor, who has been lying seriously ill at the Little Rock infirmary for several days, is reported to be much improved to-day. He is suffering from gastritis.

Boehmann Convicted of Murder.

Brooklyn, N. Y., June 8.—The jury in the case of John Boehmann, on trial for the murder of John Seims, returned a verdict early this morning of murder in the second degree.

MORE SAILORS NEEDED.

A Problem Confronting the Navy Department.

Washington, June 8.—It is becoming each day a more serious problem for the navy department how to man our new ships with the small number of sailors allowed by law. Last year Secretary Herbert appealed to congress to authorize the enlargement of the number of enlisted men by 2,000. The appropriation committees, however, cut this number down to 1,000. The battleships Maine, at the New York navy yard, and the Texas, at the Norfork yard, will be ready to go into commission this summer. To man these ships about 700 men will be required, and as the Lancaster is also to go into service as a practice ship, 300 men must be assigned to her. Thus the entire additional thousand men allowed by congress will be absorbed. Meanwhile the big battleships Indiana, Oregon, Iowa, and Massachusetts are rapidly approaching completion, and there will be no sailors to place on them unless the department shall put some other ships out of commission, and transfer their crews to the new vessels.

HARD FIGHTING IN AFRICA.

Rebellious Tribesmen Punished by German Colonial Troops.

Berlin, June 8.—An official dispatch received here from Herr von Puttkamer, the governor of the Cameroon district of German West Africa, announces that there has been severe fighting with the rebellious Bokoko tribes. Four of the strongholds of the rebels have been stormed by the German colonial troops. Two hundred tribesmen were killed and many others were captured. On the side of the Germans twelve colonial soldiers were killed and forty-seven were wounded. In the list of casualties there are no Germans. The Reich anzeiger, referring to the victory of the German troops, says: "The foregoing will insure peace in the Bakoko country, which territory has hitherto been a continual menace to the Cameroons."

BLACK FOREST CLOUDBURST.

Fifty Lives Officially Reported To Have Been Lost.

Stuttgart, June 8.—It is officially announced that as a result of the cloudburst on Wednesday evening over the Wurtemberg portion of the Black forest fifty lives were lost at Balingen. In that district thirty houses were demolished by the rise of the waters of the River Eyach, and many buildings were damaged. There was another cloudburst Thursday evening over the same district, and the Eyach valley was again flooded. The damage done on this occasion is not known. The Rems valley was also visited by a waterspout and there have been heavy thunderstorms throughout the southern part of Wurtemberg. The Danube and the Neckar are greatly swollen.

DIED FROM SHOCK.

Startling Death of Miss Protheroe While Undergoing an Operation.

Reading, Pa., June 8.—A rather startling death occurred at the reading dispensary yesterday afternoon. Bertha Protheroe, a beautiful girl aged 15, suffering from a small abscess in the corner of her right eye, applied for treatment. The operation was only an ordinary one and the doctors did not think it necessary to use chloroform. Miss Protheroe, however, insisted and a very small quantity was dropped in a cloth which was placed over her face. Almost instantly the young girl threw up her hands, and in a few moments she was a corpse. The attending physician attributes her death to shock.

MANY BEQUESTS TO CHARITY.

Will of the Late David Cady Filed for Probate at Amsterdam.

Amsterdam, N. Y., June 8.—The will of David Cady, the philanthropist, has been filed for probate. By the will the Amsterdam city library receives a brick block as quarters for a free library; the Children's home, $1,000; the Y. M. C. A., of Amsterdam, $1,000, and the Amsterdam city hospital, $1,000. There are many other smaller bequests. The American Bible Society, the Board of Home missions of the Presbyterian church, the Board of Foreign missions of the Presbyterian church, the American Tract society and the Home Mission association each receive $500.

NO GREAT GOLD WITHDRAWALS

The Belmont-Morgan Syndicate Is Trying To Protect the Reserve.

New York, June 8.—At the sub-treasury it was said this morning that so far as this city is concerned there have not recently been any great withdrawals of gold except for ordinary business. Advices from Washington this morning stated that the Belmont-Morgan syndicate is using all legitimate efforts to protect the gold reserve.

Steamer Wrecked.

Winnipeg, Man., June 8.—The steamer Monarch, bound from Rat Portage to Port Frances, Rainy lake, loaded with passengers and freight, was wrecked Thursday evening at Long Salt rapid. The passengers were rescued after some difficulty but the freight was lost and vessel wrecked.

Consul General Straus Sails.

New York, June 8.—Among the passengers of the steamer Augusta Victoria, sailing to-day, will be General A. D. Straus, consul general of Nicaragua for the United States, who is supposed to be going to Europe on a diplomatic mission for the Nicaraguan government.

THE CABINET CHANGES

Harmon's Appointment a Genuine Surprise.

Olney's Promotion to the Portfolio of Secretary of State, However, Was Expected—The New Attorney General Is One of the Legal Lights of Ohio and Is Very Popular.

Washington, June 8.—The appointment last evening of attorney general Richard Olney to the portfolio of secretary of state of the United States, was no surprise, as it had been generally understood for the past few days that Mr. Olney was to be promoted, but the appointment of Judge Judson Harmon of Cincinnati to the position of attorney general was a general surprise, as Judge Harmon's name had never been mentioned in connection with the office.

JUDGE JUDSON HARMON.

Career of the Man Just Appointed Attorney General.

Washington, June 8.—Judge Judson Harmon is the senior member of the firm of Harmon, Colston, Goldsmith & Hoadley, who probably have the most lucrative law practice in Cincinnati. He is one of the "young men" of that city, though 49 years of age. He is about 6 feet 2 inches in height, athletic in appearance and well preserved, though his hair is slightly tinged with gray. In any assembly he would attract attention.

An Able Man.

He is regarded by bench and bar of Hamilton county as an able, broad and and learned man, whose appointment is taken by all as a compliment to the state and bar, as well as being a fit recognition of the worth of one of the soundest lawyers in the state. Personally, Judge Harmon is democratic to the core and has never had the slightest patience with anything or anybody in the smallest degree tainted with "foppery."

Comes of Old New York Stock.

Judge Harmon comes of old New York stock and members of his branch are still living in and around Jefferson county, in that state. Others more remote live at Suffield, Conn. The father of the new attorney general, the Rev. B. F. Harmon, moved to Ohio in the early '40s. Judson was born in Hamilton county in 1846. He attended the schools of that county, then went to Dennison university, a Baptist school at Granville, O. In 1866 he was graduated from there, and three years later he was graduated from the Cincinnati law school.

Service on the Bench.

He then formed a partnership with R. T. Durrell and practiced law till 1876, when he was elected judge of the common pleas court. He served on the bench for four months, when he was unseated in favor of Judge Cox by the Ohio senate, before which a contest was made. He returned to his practice, forming a partnership with judge S. N. Maxwell.

Judge of Superior Court.

In 1878 he was elected a judge of the superior court of Cincinnati, and in 1883 was re-elected. In March, 1887, he resigned. When ex-Governor Hoadley and judge Edgar M. Johnson went to New York and formed the firm of Harmon, Colston, Goldsmith & Hoadley, as successors to Hoadley, Johnson & Colston. In June, 1870, he was married to Miss Olive Scobey, daughter of Dr. W. H. Scobey of Hamilton county. He has two children.

JUDGE HARMON AT HOME.

Rated as Among the Broadest and Brainiest of Practitioners.

Cincinnati, June 8.—The news that Judge Judson Harmon had been appointed attorney general by President Cleveland did not become known on the streets till after dark last night, but it spread so rapidly that before 8 o'clock his office in the St. Paul building was besieged with callers. A more popular man does not live in Ohio. He is known by all classes and, though his life has been full of successes in personal, political and professional ways, he has never been too busy or too elated to forget the old friends whose friendship was all they could bestow. At the bar he ranks preeminent as one of the broadest and brainiest of practitioners. He has been fearless yet considerate in the practice of his profession. Trickery has never been one of his methods and while on the bench he frowned upon the slightest attempt by lawyers to practice such methods before him.

Came as a Surprise.

As a result of such a life his last success made his friends jubilant, and as he had to leave the city for Columbus last night, Mrs. Harmon is receiving many congratulatory calls and messages at their home in east Walnut Hills. When seen at his office before leaving by a United Press reporter, Judge Harmon was engaged upon a letter to the president. A few hours previously he had accepted the offer by wire. He was naturally feeling good and his appearance indicated it. He stated that until yesterday morning he had not the remotest idea that he was being considered for the place. The first intimation he had was a message from the president received about 10 o'clock asking if he would accept the position.

Order of Solon.

Harrisburg, Pa., June 8.—The receiver of the order of Solon, William H. Gaskell, has filed his account for the year ending May 25, 1895, and it will be confirmed July 9. The account shows a balance of $46,104.21 for distribution among upwards of 6,000 members in western Pennsylvania and Ohio. The receiver asks for the appointment of an auditor.

Washington Invalids.

Washington, June 8.—Miss Abigail Dodge was about the same this morning, she having passed a rather quite night. Her physician is as yet unable to give any encouragement for her recovery. Representative Hitt continues slowly to improve, and was in fairly good spirits this morning.

Mrs. Cleveland Calls on Jefferson.

Buzzards Bay, Mass., June 8.—Mrs. Cleveland took her first carriage drive over to the village last evening and called on Joe Jefferson and family at Crow's Nest.

WEATHER INDICATIONS.

The Weather Indications for Tomorrow are Fair and Warmer.

At 2 o'Clock Leggett's Thermometer Registered 86 Degrees.

Reform Legislatures often times need reforming themselves.

The annual summer book of the Jersey Central railroad has been issued. Plainfield comes in for a nice notice.

The socalled better element of every party seems to be that portion who are, figuratively speaking, the underdogs in the control of party organization.

Union county has already furnished one candidate for Governor, who is Joseph B. Keim, of Rahway, nominated by the Socialists. But then he really don't count.

The abolition by the Legislature of the publishing of State laws in newspapers will have a tendency to make better newspapers, and this, at least, is something to be thankful for.

Rahway is talking about celebrating the glorious Fourth. Rahway patriotism should be corked up and sent over to Plainfield, where it can perform the function of being an echo to the thunderous siz bangs of Plainfield's fire crackers.

Plainfield is to have a grand Fourth of July celebration which will not only bear testimony to the patriotism of its citizens but will also keep them at home and attract crowds of outsiders. New Brunswick people, having no attractions to keep them at home, will go elsewhere to spend the day and their money likewise, and the city will be just that much the poorer.—New Brunswick Fredonian.

A newspaper report from Elizabeth says:

Errors have been discovered in taking the census of this city by the Board of Assessors, and in one ward alone, the Ninth, a mistake of 200 was made against the city. The Board of Assessors will meet next Monday at eleven a. m. to foot up the totals, and it is certain that the population of Elizabeth instead of being 43,900 as at first estimated, will be between 44,000 and 45,000.

Elizabeth is evidently bound to make as good a showing, numerically, as the law allows. The Press does not want to be too bold in speaking of what the census, when finished, will show for Plainfield along this line of growth, because estimates, inspired by zealousness and pride for one's home, often prove erroneous, but the opinion can be ventured with safety that this city will make as good a showing as any other place in New Jersey. In fact, there is no question but what Plainfield has increased more in the last five years in property values than any other place in the State. And this is the real factor that counts in making a town what it is.

CYCLING COMMENT.

The Y. M. C. A. bicycle club of Summit have arranged for a run to this city June 29th.

Alfred and George Jackson, of West Fourth street, will ride their wheels to Fort Hamilton tomorrow.

Druggist Edward Richards, of Liberty street, is now trying to master a bicycle with excellent results.

—A man from Elizabeth was in North Plaznfield this morning looking for a place to locate a merry-go-round.

—The Bible class conducted by W. D. Murray will meet on Tuesday, at eight o'clock p. m., at the Y. M. C. A. building.

—U. B. Crane, of 120 West Front street, received ten cases of men's fine straw hats this week, and is offering some special bargains in fine goods.

—A horse belonging to W. A. Lord, of Netherwood, stumbled and fell under the railroad bridge on Park avenue this morning, badly cutting its knees.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destored forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflammed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh, that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A WOODEN WEDDING.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith Celebrate Their Fifth Wedding Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Smith, of 407 East Second street, celebrated their wooden wedding anniversary last evening, in a most novel and interesting way.

Those present assumed certain characters of prominent men and women, and then then each guessed the character represented. Refreshments were served during an intermission, after which a "Library table" was enjoyed. Titles of prominent books were represented in detail, and the friends were asked to guess the names. Two prizes were offered. Miss Alice Phipps secured first, a silver atomizer, and J. Henry Smith, second, a silver hat brush. The presents received by Mr. and Mrs. Smith were chiefly wooden and very handsome.

The guests included Mr. and Mrs. H. Belton, Henry Belton, J. Henry Smith, Dr. E. W. Howells, of New York; Miss Smith, David Dibbell, Edward Hebbard, Mr. and Mrs. Bertram Smith, Mrs. Catharine Phipps, the Misses Phipps, Miss Mary Way, of Brooklyn, Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Allen, of Yonkers; Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Taylor, of Roseville; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Fisher, of Hackensack.

The invitations sent out were all written on tree bark by Mr. Smith, and the responses were almost all the same, and were exceedingly novel.

Fitzgerald-Watson Nuptials.

The marriage of Miss Elizabeth Fitzgeral to John Watson, will take place at St. Mary's R. C. church, Wednesday, June 19th, at five o'clock p. m. A reception will follow at their home, 991 Arlington avenue.

Won't Turn Out.

Columbia lodge, No. 58, A. O. U. W., last evening voted not to turn out at the Fourth of July celebration.

EVILS OF THE CORSET.

Injures the Muscles and Robs the System of Air.

The evils of the corset are strongly painted by a writer on "Hygienic Dress." She calls the corset an "immense bandage of splints." "Suppose," she says, "you splint your arm for six or eight weeks; what would become of its muscles? A heavily boned corset would do very well to wrap around a broken arm or leg until it heals, but it is a crime to wear it over the soft abdominal walls which encase the most wonderful system of organs, which only in their full development can give us a worthy race. Even with the splints pulled out this garment would be hot and debilitating, and, tightly worn, it interferes with the secretions and excretions of the skin. If bones must be in the waist they should not run the wrong way of the body, but in conformity with nature's lines.

"Out of the harmonious lines with the ribs, they throw a great many muscles out of use, interfering with the natural breathing, the powerful intercostal muscles beneath the corset become shriveled and partially paralyzed: it becomes impossible to properly distend the diaphragm, and, therefore, the proper amount of life giving oxygen is not inhaled.

"The corset wearer makes her own record in the misshape of her body, in her inability to breathe correctly and in defrauding the system of oxygen. It is needless to say that the blood becomes impure, and that functional action of important organs is interfered with. Digestion and circulation are ruined, and the complexion declares the folly and the sin as plainly as Cain bore the mark of murder on his forehead.

"What is true as to tight dressing of the feet and waist is as absolute truth for the neck and the whole body. Everything should be so loosely worn that a perfect circulation of air, feeding the system on its surface, could go on at all times between the body and the clothing."

NOT A TYPICAL STUDENT.

W. S. Hobart Owns Trotters and Runners of Choice Breeding.

Walter Scott Hobart, the young millionaire, who has attracted such wide attention by his purchases of speedy horses, happens to be a sophomore at Harvard. In the lingo of the university, he has a snap course. Mr. Hobart is a good looking young man, on the sunny side of twenty-five. He dresses elegantly and in excellent taste, is a prime favorite at the Country Club, and promises to develop into one of the best polo players in the East. He is a son of the late W. S. Hobart, of California, who owned the famous trotting stallion Stamboul, 2:07 1-2, afterward sold at auction in New York to E. H. Merriman for $41,000. The late Mr. Hobart also had in his collection Alma Mater, the dam of Alcantara and Alcyone, for whom he paid $15,000, and Nancy Lee, the dam of Nancy Hanks, 2:04. From this trifle of horse history it will be seen that young Hobart inherits his taste for horses.

About a year ago he began to collect a string of rare ones for himself, being careful during his first year in college not to attract too much attention by his purchases. Keeping one or two horses at Cambridge, he amused himself by driving about the country, occasionally visiting Mystic, where he became acquainted with Jim Galvin, the noted handler, who is looking after the interests of some of his fleetest ones this year.

Karl's Clover Root, the great blood purifier, gives freshness and clearness to the complexion and cures constipation; 25c, 50c, $1. Sold by all druggists.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

CHARITIES AID.

The Good People of Plainfield Appealed to.

The following communication from the Citizens Organized Aid Association explains itself:

It may be assumed that Plainfield people know something of the ceaseless labors of this, their oldest charitable association; something, too, of the extraordinary demand during the last two years for practically helpful charity.

Now, although local conditions are improving, and the rigors of winter have passed; although our work has been cut down to a minimum; yet the association has now upon its hands several families or individuals for whom self support is impossible because of sickness or old age, or because of the presence of young children needing constant care. Without charitable help these must suffer, and such help it is ours to supply. Yet the work of the winter has absolutely exhausted our treasury and, without the aid of the friends of the association, our operations must quickly cease.

With regard to the late public entertainment, The Russian Honeymoon, which was fully expected to replinish our treasury. It should be explained that the very kind offer of C. P. Ralli to present the play for the benefit of the association was accepted by the managers with the understanding that they would assume no responsibility whatever. Assuredly the entertainment was in itself a great success. Mr. Ralli and those who assisted him in its production have placed the public, and ourselves as well, under real obligations by their zealous and generous labors. But, because of the heavy, unexpected expenses, the financial result was most unfortunate. So far from turning over to us a profit, Mr. Ralli has had to face a deficit, and our treasury remains empty.

There remains to us, therefore, the one resource which has never yet wholly failed: To appeal to the people of Plainfield, who, surely, from their abundance, will not allow God's poor to suffer; and who, through many years, have relied upon this association to administer some portion of their many benefactions.

Money or checks may be handed or mailed to any of the managers named below, or to the treasurer, MRS. H. P. REYNOLDS, 71 Washington avenue, North Plainfield.

Contributions may be handed to members of the executive committee (named below); to any officer or members of the association; or checks may be sent to the treasurer, MRS. H. P. REYNOLDS, 71 Washington avenue, North Plainfield.

By the executive committee,
Mrs. L. V. Randolph, president,
Mrs. J. R. Myers, vice-president,
Mrs. C. E. Brooks, secretary,
Mrs. Emil Woltman,
Miss Mary E. Tweedy.

REASON ON THIS.

You would call a man a fool to try to run an engine with a crooked piston-rod. Yet you are attempting that when you live with your system in a disordered condition. Whatever you may be mentally, you are physically a machine. Nothing interests you more than keeping it in order. If your digestion is out of condition, or your kidneys are disordered, use Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, a medicine prepared by a famous physician, and tested for years by thousands of persons, who all endorse it.

—In Reynolds's new ad today some suggestions about the scalp are given.

Captain Sweeney, U. S. A., San Diego, Cal., says: "Shiloh's Catarrh Remedy is the first medicine I have ever found that would do me any good." Price 50c. Sold by all druggists.

Karl's Clover Root will purify your blood, clear your complexion, regulate your bowels and make your head clear as a bell; 25c, 50c and $1. Sold by all druggists.

Shiloh's Cure, the great cough and croup cough, is in great demand. Pocket size contains 25 doses, only 25c. Children love it. Sold by all druggists.

DUNELLEN DOTS.

Election of the Lawn Tennis Club—Personals.

Miss Reidy is one of the contestants for a gold watch in aid of St. John's church, but has given her book to the pastor and withdrawn from the contest.

John W. Moynihan left last night for St. Louis, Mo., to visit relatives. He will take an extended trip through the west before returning.

Miss Sallie Lake, of Somerville, is spending the day with Mrs. A. N. Randolph.

Miss Anna Abbott spent yesterday in Somerville.

Mrs. Pittinger has returned to her home in Buttsville, after a pleasant stay with Mrs. Adam Dealaman.

Mrs. Walter Apgar returned last night from Junction, where she has been visiting relatives.

At the last meeting of the Dunellen Lawn Tennis club, Hazelwood Craig was elected president, and Charles Boice, Jr., secretary and treasurer.

CHURCH CHIMES.

The quarterly meeting of the Woman's Home Missionary Society was held yesterday afternoon in the Crescent Avenue church. A number of reports were read.

A reception will be given to Rev. G. Kennedy and Mrs. Newell by the congregation in Hope chapel, on Friday evening, June 14th, at eight o'clock. D. McInnes is the chairman of the reception committee.

Rev. J. W. Richardson addressed the Congregational church at Bound Brook last evening on the subject of "The Christian Endeavorer the Citizen and Soldier of Another Country." It was the annual convention of the society and the attendance was very large.

The Sunday-school of the First Baptist church will meet tomorrow morning in the school room at 9:30 a. m. and devote an hour to exercises appropriate to Children's day, in which the primary department will have a prominent part. At 10:30 the school will pass to the galleries of the church and Dr. Yerkes will preach a sermon in line with the occasion, which will be interesting to both young and old. The public are cordially invited to all of the services.

Slow to Tumble.

She had now become desperate.

"Your family has a grand name," he observed.

"I would prefer almost any other," she rejoined with a promptness sufficient to suggest that she had given the subject thought.

After a time she sat as one in a trance, and wondered what would be the chances of his tumbling if a wheat elevator were to precipitate itself upon him.—Detroit Tribune.

"I'm going to ask papa to get her a football, and then I'll show her how to play."—Ottawa (Canada) Free Press.

A Doubtful Compliment.

Lady (to Pat, who has just tendered his seat)—You have my sincere thanks.

Pat—Not at all, mum; not at alk It's a dooty we owe to the sect. Some folks only does it when a lady be pretty; but I says, says I, "The sect, Pat, not the individool."—Ottawa (Ont.) Free Press.

While at Peekskill, N. Y., Mr. J. A. Scriven, a prominent manufacturer of New York City, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Such good results were obtained from its use that he sent back to the druggist from whom he had obtained it for two more bottles of the same remedy. When you have a cough or cold give this preparation a trial and like Mr. Scriven you will want it when again in need of such a medicine. It is a remedy of great worth and merit. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

Sometime ago I was troubled with an attack of rheumatism. I used Chamberlain's Pain Balm and was completely cured. I have since advised many of my friends and customers to try the remedy and all speak highly of it. Simon Goldbaum, San Luis Rey, Cal. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

YOUR SCALP! During the heats of summer does it become irritated and invite an occasional friendly scratch? To wash it is well, but not too often, lest your hair become "brash" and stiff. But treat it twice or thrice a week with our Petroleum Hair Tonic—a little rubbed in with your finger ends, and you will find the feeling of comfort and coolness truly delightful. Positively nothing equals it as a balm for the woes of your scalp. Sprinkler bottles 50c. Only at

REYNOLDS'S PHARMACY, PARK AND NORTH AVENUES.

Old People.

Old people who require medicine to regulate the bowels and kidneys will find the true remedy in Electric Bitters. This medicine does not stimulate and contains no whiskey nor other intoxicant, but acts as a tonic and alterative. It acts mildly on the stomach and bowels, adding strength and giving tone to the organs, thereby aiding nature in the performance of the functions. Electric Bitters is an excellent appetizer and aids digestion. Old people find it just exactly what they need. Price 50c a bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

While in Topeka last March, E. T. Barber, a prominent newspaper man of La Cygne, Kansas, was taken with cholera morbus very severely. The night clerk at the hotel where he was stopping happened to have a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and gave him three doses which relieved him and he thinks saved his life. Every family should keep this remedy in their home at all times. No one can tell how soon it may be needed. It costs but a trifle and may be the means of saving much suffering and perhaps the life of some member of the family. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

I have two little grandchildren who are teething this hot summer weather and are troubled with bowel complaint. I give them Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and it acts like a charm. I earnestly recommend it for children with bowel troubles. I was myself taken with a severe attack of bloody flux, with cramps and pains in my stomach, one-third of a bottle of this remedy cured me. Within twenty-four hours I was out of bed and doing my housework. Mrs. W. L. Dunagan, Bonaqua, Hickman Co., Tenn.

THE OPENING OF CONEY ISLAND.

The Same Old Songs Prevail Now that It Is a Part of Brooklyn.

Yesterday was the time for the annual opening of the Coney Island season, and therefore it opened. If it hadn't been for the cold weather, according to one of the local sages, there would have been 50,000 visitors there, but as the weather was extremely cold and in the early part of the day threatened rain, the greater part of the expected crowd stayed away, and the "grand sacred concerts" in the concert halls were not patronized very liberally. Oceans of "weiss" beer remained unsold.

There was one concert hall, however, which seemed to be prospering greatly, considering the chilly atmosphere. A young woman in street clothes, for fancy costumes are not allowed in Coney Island on Sundays now, and with a paper-and-comb voice, was singing some last summer's song, accompanied by a fiddle and a piano that hadn't been tuned since the songs were laid by. An inebriated visitor, who made the mistake of leaving his overcoat at home, happened along just as the young woman sang:

There's only one girl
In all the world for me.

This induced the visitor to go in and take a seat. After paying for a glass of "weiss beer," he turned his attention to the stage, just as the paper-and-comb voice began:

You can't lose me, Charley,
You tried in every manner
For to shake your little Hanna,
But you couldn't lose me, Charley.

The visitor complained to the barker who happened to be bossing the place that it was last year's song and he suspected it was last year's girl. The barker threatened to put him out. He left in disgust, and on his way up the Bowery he was followed by a policeman, who seemed anxious to break the long spell of inactivity. Fortunately he attempted to smash a "Grand Sacred Concert" sign and he was arrested and locked up.

There was a merry-go-round in working order yesterday. It was patronized pretty liberally, but each timorous individual seemed satisfied with one trip. The blasts from the ocean, coming at the rate of about thirty miles an hour, rendered it no easy job for the riders to keep their hats on.

Police Captain Clayton sat in his office all day ready to do his duty by the public in keeping the peace, but his active intervention was not required. The arrest above recorded was the only one of the day.

—James J. Coriell and William Francisco have a number of horses at Hipp's Manhattan hotel stables for sale.

Use it in Time.

Catarrh starts in the nasal passages, affecting eyes, ears and throat, and is in fact, the great enemy of the mucous membrane. Neglected colds in the head almost invariably precede catarrh, causing an excessive flow of of mucous, and if the mucous discharge becomes interrupted the disagreeable results of catarra will follow, such as bad breath, severe pain across forehead and about the eyes, a roaring and buzzing sound in the ears and oftentimes a very offensive discharge. Ely's Cream Balm is the acknowledged cure for these troubles.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

CONFEDERATION OF THE RHINE.

Louis and Jerome Bonaparte Made Kings. Prussians Overwhelmed at Auerstadt and Jena—Allied Armies Destroyed at Friedland—Treaty of Tilsit.

[Copyright, 1895, by John Clark Ridpath.]

XVII.—MAPMAKER AND KING OF KINGS.

After Austerlitz, Napoleon conceded to the Czar of Russia the privilege of retiring! Only a month before, Alexander had been in Berlin. Out at Potsdam, on the 3rd of November, he and Frederick William had sworn a secret mighty oath over the tomb of Frederick the Great. This conjuration with the Czar did not now seem to have been an expedient thing! Frederick, supposing that Napoleon was not informed of his perfidy, sent to the victor at Austerlitz a message of hollow congratulation. The Emperor, on receiving it, said that Frederick William had written the letter, intending it for the Czar, but that fortune had changed the address to himself!

The treaty of Presburg was another peace that did not pacify. Europe was prostrate before Napoleon as far as the Vistula; but England covered all sea coasts from the Adriatic to the Baltic, and the whole Slavic race lay darkly banked on the horizon of the Northeast. The Emperor began at once, with incredible audacity, to make a new political map for the European Powers, and to support it with his under-kings and princes, vassals of France. Influenced by the recent Russo-Austrian coalition, Italy, under the leadership of Ferdinand, king of the Two Sicilies, had hopefully sympathized with the allies. Instigated by his wife, Caroline Maria, sister of Marie Antoinette, the Neapolitan king had admitted into his dominions a division of the Russian army. The cause of offense was sufficient; Napoleon, in January of 1806, sent a corps, under his brother Joseph, to occupy Italy. On the 15th of February, having entered Naples, Joseph was proclaimed king, and the Bourbon monarchy was abolished.

Notwithstanding the intended treachery of Frederick William, the Emperor kept faith with him, and deliverd Hanover to Prussia. The King was reluctant to accept the gift; for Hanover was England's, and he would fain be at one with England. The principalities along the right bank of the Rhine, even from Italy to Holland, were erected into the Confederation of the Rhine. Fourteen princes of Germany voluntarily detached themselves from their Teutonic affiliations, and carried over a population of about sixteen millions to the French protectorate. Napoleon would thus construct a Germanic wall between Eastern Europe and France, protecting the latter against the further incursion of the Austro-Slavic races.

The next step was to convert Holland into a sub-kingdom of France. On the 5th of June, 1806, Louis Bonaparte, to whom, four years previously, Hortense Beauharnais had been married, was proclaimed king of Holland. Out of Hesse-Cassel, Brunswick and parts of Saxony and Prussia, the kingdom of Westphalia was formed, and assigned to Jerome Bonaparte as king. To him—after Tilsit—was given in marriage the princess Catharine of Wurtemburg. In the countries between the Rhine and Poland, extending southward into Italy and northward to the Baltic, a great number of dukedoms and principalities were created and conferred on the marshals of the Empire. Murat, husband of Caroline Bonaparte, was made grand duke of Berg and Cleves. Lannes became duke of Montebello. Junot was presently nominated duke of Abrantes. Bernadotte received the title of prince of Pontecorvo. Ney got his hard-earned dukedom of Elchingen. Berthier was made duke of Neuchatel and Valangin. Soult became duke of Dalmatia. Massena took his honor as prince of Essling. Davout, after a little delay, was made duke of Auerstadt. Bacciocchi, husband of Elise Bonaparte, was created prince of Lucca and Piombino. Eugene Beauharnais was given in marriage Augusta Amelia, daughter of the king of Bavaria, and the title of prince of Venice. The process of king-making and prince-making was limited, not so much by the possibilities of territory as by the number of the Imperial retinue.

Prussia now became a scene of stormy agitation. The humiliated House of Hohenzollern looked in this direction and in that. The younger element of the people and the philosophical patriots cried out against the domination of France. Meanwhile, a strange and far-reaching contingency appeared among the personal forces in Europe. Charles James Fox, successor of Pitt, became Minister of Foreign Affairs, under the premiership of Grenville. Fox would fain have peace. He was not devoid of remote sympathies with France and with Napoleon himself. Courtesies began between him and the Emperor.

In the early summer of 1806, the historical conditions favored a general peace. Both Fox and Napoleon sought it. The Czar would have been willing. Emperor Francis could not interfere. But the establishment of peace involved the restoration of Hanover to England. Talleyrand hinted to the British ministry that this might be done; but Frederick had received Hanover as the price of his late neutrality. To be stripped of it after the fact was to leave him two things—shame and weakness. Nevertheless, affairs went forward favorably; and if If were a thing known to history all might have been well.

Suddenly, however, on the 13th of September, 1806, Fox died; and by the incoming of Lauderdale, the whole complexion was changed. Toryism again ran rampant. The Anglo-Russo-Prussian intrigue was renewed. Frederick William sent a peremptory challenge to Napoleon to betake himself out of Germany. The Emperor had in truth agreed to withdraw his forces; but the Czar had also agreed to relinquish certain vantage ground on the Dalmatian frontier—and had not done it. Therefore, Napoleon's army corps would remain in Germany. Frederick William suddenly declared war; and Napoleon, in a month after the death of Fox and the sudden revulsion in diplomacy, concentrated in Saxe-Weimar an army of nearly a hundred thousand men.

The Prussians, sixty thousand strong, under Prince Hohenlohe, occupied the city of Jena, on the Saale. There, on the 14th of October, they were attacked and utterly routed by the French, leaving behind twelve thousand in killed and wounded, and about fifteen thousand prisoners. On the same day, at Auerstadt, fourteen miles from Weimar, a corps of the Grand Army, thirty-five thousand strong, under Marshal Davout, fell upon a division of fifty thousand Prussians, commanded by the Duke of Brunswick and Frederick William in person, and won a signal victory. Brunswick was mortally wounded, and about ten thousand of his soldiers were put hors du combat.

Prussia was utterly overwhelmed by the disaster. Her fortresses were surrendered without resistance, and Napoleon, in less than a fortnight, occupied Berlin. On the 21st of November, he issued from that city his celebrated Berlin decree, declaring the British Islands in a state of blockade, and interdicting all correspondence and trade with England! The property of British subjects, under a wide schedule of liabilities, was declared contraband of war.

Meanwhile, the aid promised to Prussia by the Czar had been too slow for the lightning that struck at Jena. The oncoming Russians reached the Vistula, but were forced back by the victorious French, who took possession of Warsaw. There the Emperor established his winter-quarters, and remained for nearly three months, engaged in the formulation of new plans of conquest and new schemes for the pacification of Europe. Here it was, in his interval of repose, that he won the beautiful princess Madame Walewska. Hoping to secure the independence of her country, she laid her Polish charms on the altar, and followed the fortunes of her Imperial but unfulfilling lover, not to Elba only, but to Longwood and despair. After fifteen years of hopeless devotion, she reentered the world to be known as the Countess d'Ornano.

After Jena, Prussia, though crushed, remained belligerent. Her shattered forces drew off to the borders, and were joined by the Russians in East Prussia. The campaign of 1807 opened here. On the 8th of February, the French army, about 70,000 strong, advanced against the allies, commanded by Benningsen and Lestocq. At the town of Eylau, about twenty miles from Konigsberg, a great but indecisive battle was fought, in which each army suffered a loss of nearly 18,000 men. The Russians and Prussians fell back about four miles to Friedland, and both armies were reinforced, the French to about 80,000, and the allies to approximately the same number.

The shock of Eylau, the inclemency of the season, and the political complications that thickened in every horizon held back military movements until the beginning of summer. On the 14th of June was fought the great battle of Friedland; and the allied army was virtually destroyed. The loss of the Russians and Prussians was more than 25,000 men; that of the French, fewer than 8,000. Napoleon commanded in person, and his triumph was prodigious. Though common fame would have Austerlitz to be the most glorious of his battles, critical opinion concedes the palm to Friedland. The martial splendor of that day has been caught in our own times by the heroic brush of Meissonier, and delivered, in the most splendid painting in America, to the immortality of art. The traveler, walking alone in the Metropolitan Museum of New York, near the twilight hour, finds himself unexpectedly in the presence of the scene. There, on a slight elevation, in the wheatfield of June, sitting on his white horse, with his hat lifted, in silent salutation, surrounded by the princes and marshals of his Empire, sits the sardonic somnambulist, while before him to the left the cuirassiers of the Guard, on their tremendous horses at full gallop, bearing down through the broken wheat, with buglers in the van and sabers flashing high, and bearded mouths wide open with yellings that resound through the world till now, plunge wildly, irresistibly, onward against the unseen enemy, reckless alike of life and death, but choosing rather death, if only the marble face but smile!

After Friedland, Tilsit. There, in the middle of the Memel, on the 25th of June, 1807, Napoleon and the Czar met on the famous raft. The beaten Alexander had come to admire his victorious antagonist. Why should the faces of his fifty thousand dead prevent him from falling in love with the destroyer? The Emperors readily agreed to be at peace. On the 7th of July a treaty was concluded between France and Russia, and two days afterwards a similar compact between France and Prussia. Frederick William had sought refuge after the battle in the little town of Memel, which was now about all he might call his own!

Now was created the grand duchy of Warsaw, composed of Prussian territory. Over this new state was set Napoleon's friend Frederick Augustus, king of the Saxons. Another part of Prussia was given to the Czar. Dantzic was declared independent. The province west of the Elbe was ceded to France. All the Bonapartes were confirmed in their kingdoms, and the Confederation of the Rhine was recognized. The ports of Prussia were shut to English commerce. Frederick William's army was placed at a maximum of 42,000 men. To these provisions was added a large indemnity to France from Prussia. The map which the Corsican had etched with his sword-point on the broken landscape of Europe was confirmed by the agreement of all the Powers—save England.

For four years the sting of Tilsit was in the vitals of England. So powerful was the Napoleonic, influence that Denmark leaned Franceward; and the Czar smiled. It was suspected by the Grenville ministry that the Danes would close their ports to British trade. Under this suspicion, Admiral Cathcart was sent with his fleet into the Baltic, demanding that the navy of Denmark should be surrendered in pledge to Great Britain! To this monstrous proposition the Crown Prince bravely answered no. Cathcart then proceeded against Copenhagen, and in the first week of September bombarded the city. Three hundred and fifty buildings, including the University, were destroyed, and six times as many houses rendered untenable. About 2,000 people were killed in the horror, the like of which had not been witnessed in modern times. Great Britain was at peace with Denmark!

A RICH MAN'S PERIL.

A STORY OF THE FINANCIAL STORM OF 1893.

This Millionaire Turned Sharp Corners Like Many of His Poorer Brethren. He Lost His Grit, too, and Would Have Succumbed but For a Friend.

As the season of stress and storm which began in '93 is passing away the financiers who were in peril at that time are beginning to exchange confidences, and these anecdotes show how great the peril was, and how often it happened that great business and financial houses stood on the verge of a precipice leaning over, and were only saved by mutual forbearance, kindness and the stretching of business customs to meet the unusual emergency.

I heard of one of these anecdotes a day or two ago. Right in the midst of the panic of '93, a financier and a great power in the world of trade, whose name is known all over this country and Europe, went to a friend and said: "I am so near ruin as this, that while I have millions in securities, I have scarcely a thousand dollars in cash, and must have $25,000 to-day, or I am done for."

He had thrown himself languidly into a chair, as though almost ready to give up the battle. He knew well enough what the announcement of his failure meant for the commercial world. It probably would have pulled down a score or more of important institutions, and very likely would have precipitated general disaster. He had been everywhere with securities in his pocket valued at hundreds of thousands of dollars, pronounced good then, but he was told in every place, "Your securities are good, but we cannot lend money now." His position was like that of the castaway upon the ocean with "water, water everywhere, nor any drop to drink." His securities at their normal value were probably worth as much as $10,000,000, perhaps more, but it was impossible for him to borrow $10 upon them.

The friend to whom he went knew as well as he what his failure involved; knew that he was worth at least ten millions in securities, although he could not command the $25,000 which stood between him and the protesting of his paper.

The friend said, "Well, I'll try to help you. What collateral have you got?" He took from his pocket securities which before the panic would have commanded easily $50,000, and said: "I can offer these."

"They are good," said the friend, "nothing better. Let me see what I can do."

He went out to a financial institution of which he had long been a customer, and he said to the officers: "I want to borrow $25,000 on this collateral, which is worth $50,000. I will guarantee the paper, provided I have recourse to the collateral in case it is not paid."

"But," said the bank officers, "we can't lend that. The collateral is good enough; but we can't even lend on Government bonds. Nobody is lending; everybody is trying to borrow."

"Well," said the friend, "then I will submit a proposition to you. If you will lend the money on this collateral it will earn 6 per cent. for you. If you will not lend it, then I will draw my own check upon this concern for $25,000, and I will keep the collateral myself. Now, it is for you to say whether for the $25,000 that you've got to part with you will take security and 6 per cent. interest or whether you will pay it out and get nothing for it, as you must do if I check it out."

Of course the officers, confronted with such an alternative, could only decide to loan the money, and it was the biggest loan that was made that day or perhaps for several days before or afterward—at least, the biggest new loan.

The friend went back to the capitalist and said: "The $25,000 is at your command."

When the capitalist heard this he became a new man. All the energy characteristic of him returned. Said he: "This will carry me over the dead center, for I am satisfied that before any of my other obligations mature it will be possible to borrow money on such securities as I possess," and that proved to be the case.

The capitalist is now one of the conspicuous influences inducing a return of prosperity. He is estimated to be worth not far from twenty millions, and he can borrow upon his securities millions of money with perfect ease. He does not like to think of the day in '93 when $25,000 stood between him and ruin.—Philadelphia Press.

MEN'S OUTFITTER.

THE EXPLOITS OF BRIGADIER GERARD.

How the Brigadier Slew the Brothers of Ajaccio.

BY A. CONAN DOYLE.

(Copyright, 1895.)

HOW THE BRIGADIER SLEW THE BROTHERS OF AJACCIO.

When I told you some little time ago how it was that I won the special medal for valor, I finished, as you will doubtless remember, by repeating the saying of the Emperor that I had the stoutest heart in all his armies. In making that remark, Napoleon was showing the insight for which he was so famous. He disfigured his sentence however, by adding something about the thickness of my head. We will pass that over. It is ungenerous to dwell upon the weaker moments of a great man. I will only say this, that when the Emperor needed an agent he was always very ready to do me the honor of recalling the name of Etienne Gerard, though it occasionally escaped him when rewards were to be distributed. Still I was a colonel at 28, and the chief of a brigade at 31, so that I have no reason to be dissatisfied with my career. Had the wars lasted another two or three years I might have grasped my baton, and the man who had his hand upon that was only one stride from the throne. Murat had changed his hussar's cap for a crown, and another light cavalry man might have done as much. However, all those dreams were driven away by Waterloo, and, although I was not able to write my name upon history, it is sufficiently well known by all who served with me in the great wars of the empire.

What I want to tell you to-night is about the very singular affair which first started me upon my rapid upward course, and which had the effect of establishing a secret bond between the Emperor and myself. There is just one little word of warning which I must give you before I begin. When you hear me speak you must always bear in mind that you are listening to one who has seen history from the inside. I am talking about what my ears have heard and my eyes have seen, so you must not try to confute me by quoting the opinions of some student or man of the pen who has written a book of history or memoirs. There is much which is unknown by such people, and much which never will be known by the world. For my own part, I could tell you some very surprising things were it discreet to do so. The facts which I am about to relate to you to-night were kept secret by me during the Emperor's lifetime because I gave him my promise that they should be, but I do not think that there can be any harm now in my telling the remarkable part which I played.

You must know, then, that at the time of the treaty of Tilsit I was a simple lieutenant in the Tenth Hussars, without money or interest. It is true that my appearance and my gallantry were in my favor, and that I had already won a reputation as being one of the best swordsmen in the army, but among the host of brave men who surrounded the Emperor it needed more than this to insure a rapid career. I was confident, however, that my chance would come, though I never dreamed that it would take so remarkable a form.

When the Emperor returned to Paris after the declaration of peace in the year 1807 he spent much of his time with the Empress and the court at Fontainebleau. It was the time when he was at the very pinnacle of his career. He had in three successive campaigns humbled Austria, crushed Prussia, and hurled the Russian armies across the Niemen. The old bulldog over the Channel was still growling, but he could not get very far from his kennel. If we could have made a perpetual peace at that moment France would have taken a higher place than any nation since the days of the Romans. So I have heard the wise folks say, though, for my own part, I had other things to think of. All the girls were glad to see the army back after its long absence, and you may be sure that I had my share of any favors which were going. You may judge how far I was a favorite in those days when I say that even now, in my 60th year—but why should I dwell upon that which is already sufficiently well known.

Our regiment of Hussars was quartered with the Horse Chasseurs of the Guard at Fontainebleau. It is, as you know, but a little place buried in the heart of the forest, and it was wonderful at this time to see it crowded with grand dukes and electors and princes who thronged round Napoleon like puppies round their master, each hoping that some bone might be thrown to him. There was more German than French to be heard in the street, for those who had helped us in the late war had come to beg for a reward, and those who had opposed us had come to try and escape their punishment. And all the time our little man, with his pale face and his cold gray eyes, was riding to the hunt every morning, silent and brooding, all of them following in his train in the hope that some word would escape him. And then when the humor seized him he would throw a 100 square miles to that man, or snip as much off the other, round off one kingdom by a river, or curtail another by a chain of mountains. That was how he used to do business, this little artilleryman whom we had raised so high with our sabres and our bayonets. He was very civil to us always, for he knew where his power came from. We knew, also, and showed it by the way in which we carried ourselves. We were agreed, you understand, that he was the finest leader in the world, but we did not forget that he had the finest men to lead.

IT MADE ME SMILE AS I WROTE IT.

Well, one day I was seated in my quarters playing cards with young Regnier of the Horse Chasseurs, when the door opened and in walked Lasalle, who was our colonel. You know what a fine, swaggering fellow he was, and the sky-blue uniform of the Tenth suited him to a marvel. My faith, we youngsters were so taken by him that we all swore and diced and drank and played the devil, whether we liked it or no, just that we might resemble our colonel! We forgot that it was not because he drank or gambled that the Emperor was going to make him the head of the light cavalry, but because he had the surest eye for the nature of a position or for the strength of a column, and the best judgment as to when infantry could be broken, or whether guns were exposed, of any man in the army. We were too young to understand all that, however, so we waxed our mustaches and clinked our spurs and let the ferrules of our scabbards wear out by trailing them along the pavement in the hope that we should all become Lasalles. When he came clanking into my quarters, both Regnier and I sprang to our feet.

"My boy," said he, clapping me on the shoulder, "the Emperor wants to see you at 4 o'clock."

The room whirled round me at the words, and I had to lean my hands upon the edge of the card table.

"What!" cried I. "The Emperor!"

"Precisely," said he, smiling at my astonishment.

"But the Emperor does not know of my existence, Colonel," I repeated. "Why should he send for me?"

"Well, that's just what puzzles me," cried Lasalle, twirling his mustache. "If he wanted the help of a brave man, why should he descend to one of my lieutenants, when he might have found all that he needed at the head of the regiment. However," he added, clapping me upon the shoulder again in his hearty fashion, "every man has his chance. I have had mine, otherwise I should not be colonel of the Tenth. I must not grudge you yours. Forward, my boy, and may it be the first step toward changing your busby for a cocked hat."

It was but 2 o'clock, so he left me, promising to come back and to accompany me to the palace. My faith, what a time I passed, and how many conjectures did I make as to what it was which the Emperor could want of me! I paced up and down my little room, in a fever of anticipation. Sometimes I thought that perhaps he had heard of the guns which we had taken at Austerlitz, but then there were so many who had taken guns at Austerlitz, and two years had passed since the battle. Or it might be that he wished to reward me for my affair with the aide-de-camp of the Russian Emperor. But then, again, a cold fit would seize me, and I would fancy that he had sent for me to reprimand me. There were a few duels which he might have taken ill part, and there were one or two little jokes in Paris since the peace. But no! I considered the words of Lasalle. "If he had need of a brave man," said Lasalle. It was obvious that my colonel had some idea of what was in the wind. If he had not known that it was to my advantage he would not have been so cruel as to congratulate me. My heart glowed with joy as this conviction grew upon me, and I sat down to write to my mother and to tell her that the Emperor was waiting at that very moment to have my opinion upon a matter of importance. It made me smile as I wrote it to think that wonderful as it appeared to me, it would probably only confirm my mother in her opinion of the Emperor's good sense.

At half past three I heard a sabre come clanking against every step of my wooden stair. It was Lasalle, and with him was a little gentleman very neatly dressed in black, with dapper ruffles and cuffs. We did not know many civilians, save of the army, but my word, this was one whom we could not afford to ignore! I had only to glance at those twinkling eyes, the comical upturned nose, and the straight precise mouth to know that I was in the presence of the one man in France whom even the Emperor had to consider.

MRS. M. S. SCHOONMAKER.

A New York Woman Who Suffered for Four Years With Nervous Debility--Paine's Celery Compound Made Her Well.

"For four years I was a sufferer from nervous debility. During that time I took a great many remedies without getting any help until I tried Paine's celery compound. I took six bottles of that remedy and was cured. I cheerfully recommend Paine's celery compound."

So writes Mrs. M. S. Schoonmaker of 80½ Jane street New York City.

Too many women needlessly suffer from nervous troubles, not only in the cities, but everywhere.

Their whole world too frequently lies inside the four walls of their homes.

Think of the many persons, men as well as women, who spend most of their lives barricaded within the narrow confines of their dwellings. Summer finds them pale and tired out. Their store of nervous vitality has been slowly brought down by vitiated air and sedentary life. Their whole system needs a thorough replenishing. The nerves want nourishment, the tissues are not half supplied with material for the repair of their parts, and the great vital organs must have richer blood to make them sound and active, and to keep them so. The nerves and brain need nourishment.

The power of refreshing and reviving every part of the languid body is what makes Paine's celery compound the marvelous strengthener and invigorator of this century. It is this same capacity to recruit the worn-out nervous system, to rejuvenate the blood that has enabled this remarkable remedy to help so many debilitated persons and to restore them again to firm health.

Rheumatism, neuralgia, pain in the region of the heart, debility and nervous weakness, showing itself in any of its myriad forms, are dispelled by Paine's celery compound. It feeds enervated tissues all over the body. It gives fresh vigor to the entire nervous tract, the brain, the large nerve centers in the spinal cord and the nerves themselves to their minutest ramifications.

It restores jaded nervous energy. It sends new blood coursing through the veins. It makes people well!

MAKING DIAMONDS.

Prof. Clarke Says They Will Soon Be Manufactured for the Market.

Prof. Clarke prophesies that diamonds of marketable size will soon be manufactured. M. Moissan has manufactured diamonds by melting wrought iron together with carbon and permitting the mixture to cool very slowly. Under these conditions the carbon became crystallized. Simultaneously Mr. Kroutschoff, of St. Petersburg, got diamond crystals by a similar process, employing silver instead of iron.

These artificial diamonds are scarcely big enough to be seen by the naked eye, but they represent the solution of the problem of crystallizing carbon.

Dealing with the way diamonds are formed by nature, Prof. Clarke gave the opinion that eruptive matter from deep in the earth bursts out through an upper layer of shale, the latter being rich in carbon. Slow cooling follows, and the carbon is crystallized as in the experiments of M. Moissan and Mr. Kroutschoff

Children's Day Observed in the Churches.

SWEET MUSIC AND PRETTY FLOWERS

Appropriate Programmes Rendered In All the Churches Yesterday, in Which the Children Take Prominent Parts—The Floral Decorations Artistically Arranged—A Joyous Occasion in Every Particular.

The admirable idea of devoting one Sunday in each year to a service for the young religious workers was generally observed in this city yesterday. The exercises in the various churches were as follows:

GRACE M. E. CHURCH.

There was a large attendance at the Grace M. E. church, last evening, when the Children's Day exercises were held. A pleasing service entitled "Beyond the Skies," was carried out under the direction of John Valiant. Mrs. Powell was the organist and Miss Alice Carroll the pianist. The following was the programme: Organ voluntary; singing by school, Sing Praises; invocation, Rev. Herbert F. Randolph; Scripture reading, John Valiant, with musical responses by school; recitation, The First Children's Day, Mabel Loomis; singing by school, The Conquering Host; baptism of infants; Scripture reading, John Valiant; recitation, Summer is Here, Tina Voehl; singing by school, What Says the Sunbeams?; recitation, The Boy that Laughs, Charles Powell; scripture reading, John Valiant; singing by primary department, Little Climbers. At this time a special exercise that was very pretty and attractive was given. A stand with four steps was placed on the platform, on top of which was a cross. The steps represented Jesus Christ, Obedience, Peace and Love. On each side were places for six banners, which read "Living for Christ Day by Day." The exercises were carried out with recitations and singing by the following scholars, who came in bearing the mottoes and banners: Minnie Marsh, Carrie Pangborn, Mary Hoagland, Charles Powell, David Fairchild, Addie Carney, Sadie Winckler, Flossy Conroy, Grace Powell, Winnie Carroll, Belle DeMott, Nellie Valiant, Agnes Morse, Ada VanHorn, Mabel Gerry, Mary Wilson, Edith Taft, Alice DeMott, Anna Bach, Stella Vermeule, Lottie Benner and Tina Voehl. The latter at the close placed a crown over the cross, and all joined in singing "All Hail the Power of Jesus Name." A short address on "The New Youth" by the pastor, Rev. Herbert Randolph, was to the point and helpful. The programme concluded with the collection, singing of "At the Cross" and the benediction. The floral display consisted of palms and cut flowers.

PARK AVENUE BAPT. ST.

A very pretty service was held in the Park Avenue Baptist church yesterday morning. The programme was almost entirely in the hands of the Sunday-school department. A hymn and prayer was followed by a "Song of Welcome" by the school. A recitation, "The First Children's Day", by Bessie Giles, was followed by another song by the school. Recitations entitled "A Song of Summer," by Harry Smalley, and "A Deed and a Word," by Willie Nash, were given. The school sang a selection, entitled "The Flowers of June." "All the Good We Can Do" was recited by Lillian Richardson. The primary department exercises were opened with a song by the class, followed by a recitation by Lillian Odam and a song by six little girls and boys. The "Children's Day Greeting" was sung by twelve girls and Harold Skadden gave a recitation.

A Weary Pilgrim, represented by Miss May Thompson, came on the platform lamenting her weary way. Miss Mary Giles, representing Learning, tried to cheer her up with books, while Ambition, represented by Miss H. Cuming, and Mercy, by Miss Grace Remsen, each in turn endeavored to change the weary traveler's way, and Mercy finally succeeded in awaking her from despondency. The Weary Pilgrim was then led to the "Fountain of Life" at the other end of the platform where a hymn was sung to her. After a short address by the pastor, the exercises were closed with a hymn and the benediction.

The floral decorations were beautiful. Flowers were massed along the edge of the pulpit and choir loft, and in one corner of the stage a bower was made of evergreens, in the midst of which a small fountain of real water played. In the rear of the platform potted plants and cut flowers were placed. The offering was for the benefit of the American Baptist Publication Society.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

The First Presbyterian church was filled yesterday morning with those anxious to hear the rendition of the following Children's Day programme: Song, The King of Glory; invocation; Song, Oh, Come and Sing; Responsive scripture reading, "The Cross; Song, Hosanna, we Sing; The Flag, "Saving Our Country by Saving the Children; Song, Our Country's Voice; Primary exercises, participated in by the following: Lulu Kline, Minnie Line, Bertha Hull, May Pruden, Jennie Hammeal, Edna Martin, Wilhelm Kline, Edmund Templin, Nettie Cain, Willie Gaston, Arthur Templin; Dr. Worden's greeting, read by Miss Grace Overton; Address by Rev. C.E. Herring; Presentation of offerings; Presentation of prizes; Song, March on, O Banner of Jesus; Benediction. The floral decorations were principally daisies, which were arranged in an artistic manner in a large bank at the centre of the pulpit.

MT. OLIVE BAPTIST CHURCH.

The following programme under the direction of Superintendent M. C. Dobbins, was rendered by the Mt. Olive Baptist Sunday-school, yesterday afternoon: Singing by school choir; dialogue, The Glory of Heaven, Mrs. Morris and Miss Doyle; singing by scholars, I Am So Glad; essay, Flowers, Marion Alice Maynard; declamation, Beautiful World, Miss Helen Potts; singing by school; recitation, Miss Anna Connett; singing by choir; address by Superintendent R. K. Case of the First Baptist school; vocal solo, There is a Green Hill, Miss Fanning; address by Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes; singing by choir and school. Miss Shotwell was the organist and A. Vanderbeek the precentor. There was a profusion of flowers used in decoration.

CRESCENT AVENUE CHURCH.

The Children's Day exercises, held in the Crescent Avenue church yesterday morning, were the same as were published in Saturday's Daily Press. The floral decorations were very pretty. On the communion table a mass of daisies and ferns were placed while large bunches of roses stood on either side. The font was also filled with daisies. Charles Davis and Gilbert Lovell assisted in the music with their violins.

Hymn, When His Salvation Bringing responsive reading; Hymn, Holy, Holy, Holy; chant, choir; Solo, Suffer Little Children to Come Unto Me, Miss Banta; reading of Psalms; Hymn, For Jesus Sake; Prayer; Hymn, Jesus, Lover of My Soul; Sermon, Rev. Wm. R. Richards; Prayer; Hymn, Hear the Call; offering for Sabbath-school missionary work; Hymn, Onward Christian Soldiers.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Summer is here at last, and in its train comes the day of rejoicing in the churches—Children's Day. In the Congregational church, yesterday morning, it was celebrated with appropriate exercises. The church was artistically decorated with flowers, daisies being dominant, while large bunch of roses and syringa added to the effect. The special music was furnished by Mrs. B. T. Barnes, organist, Mrs. M. E. Dwight, pianist, and P. Ludwig Conde, violinist, and was rendered in a delightful manner. The programme was as follows:

Voluntary, Rosamande, Schubert; prayer by pastor, Rev. C. L. Goodrich; hymn; responsive reading; Gloria; Scripture reading; offertory, Serenade, Gounod; recitation, Miss Marion Dwight; song, Buttercups, Ethel Van Zandt, Margeurite VanZandt, Edna Conde, Ethel Lorton, and Laura Baker; singing by congregation; recitation, Arthur Robinson; song, violets, Agnes La Boyteaux, Hattie Messersmith, Caroline Fuller, Marion Dwight, and Ethel Weseman; address by Rev. C. L. Goodrich on Ants.; singing by congregation; benediction.

FIRST M. E. CHURCH.

At the First M. E. church a large audience enjoyed the children's services last evening. The church was prettily decorated with choice flowers, well arranged about the platform. The following choir assisted in rendering a service entitled "Merry Sunshine," prepared by W. L. Mason: Sopranos—Mrs. L. S. Bond, Miss Florence Barnes, Miss Edna Harris, Miss Nellie Martin, Miss Maude French, Miss Alice Jenkins, Miss Lizzie Stafford; altos—Miss Cora Sheppard, Miss Etta Raybert, Miss Eva Jenkins; tenors—L. S. Bond, Robert Davis; bassos—Arthur Crone, George Rose. They were assisted by Clarence Mills, W. MacKillop, violin-

DIATHERMANCY, 95° F.

Class Exercises of Graduates at the Chestnuts.

EVOLVED THROUGH THE HEAT

An Entirely Original Sketch Written and Presented By Girl Graduates—The Scene of Action Was in the Coming Century—Knowledge Gained By Electrical Application.

They counted themselves happy who were so fortunate as to be invited to the class exercises of the graduates of '95 at the Plainfield Seminary on Saturday evening. Not a hint had been given that the exercises were any other than the stereotyped performances of such occasions, until the pretty programmes in blue and gold, the class colors, were put in the hands of the guests. They read as follows:

Diathermancy. 95 Degrees F.
Dramatis Personæ.
Mrs. VanHypotenuse, aged grandmother. Mary K. Whiton
Granddaughters.
Inductor Polarization.....Mabelle C. Phillips
Latifolia Cassiopeia.....Bertha McC. Clark
Marionite Cassiopeia....Marion L. Henderson
Electra VanHypotenuse....Gertrude Haviland
Nineteenth Century Girl.....Nancy Lawson
Time, A. D., 2000.

The guests gasped, "What is it all about? Dia!-Dia!-Thermancy!-Dia-Through-Thermal pertaining to heat!" That was the first clue that came to the investigating mind, with the remembrance that at the time this class of '95 was struggling with its exercises, the thermometer stood for days in the neighborhood of 95 degree.

The acting alone of this play would have been creditable, but in addition the fact that the play was written by the class, made the entertainment worthy of the highest praise.

The first scene revealed a morning room in the house of Mrs. Van Hypolenuse, who attired as a venerable dame, gathered the morning news from a phonograph. Some hints of changes in the times were given by the accounts of balloon expeditions, the election of a woman President, and buildings 157 stories high. The phonographic communication was followed by the entrance of three granddaughters, attired in sleeveless, Grecian draperies.

While waiting for instruction from Inductor Polarization, the conversation revealed the fact that knowledge was no longer gained by the slow methods of the nineteenth century, but by the application of electrical apparatus to the fingers, instruction on any subject could be infused into the mind. The aged grandmother disapproved of the new methods and in a reminiscent mood told of her class in the Plainfield Seminary in 1895. She was the only survivor of the class. One had become a Sister of Charity, one had married the Czar of Russia, another had married a Chinese mandarin, and the other, after graduating from college, had written 700 books. A dose of instruction in mathematics was then given one of the girls, who recited glibly a lengthy geometrical proposition.

The harping of the grandmother on the friends of her youth creates a desire on the part of the granddaughters to see a nineteenth century girl, and Inductor Polarization is prevailed upon to call one from the past. With dim lights and weird incantations, accompanied with sweet strains of music, there is evoked by a loud explosion and effective red lights, a beautiful creature who declares herself to be a C. D. Gibson girl. From the tip of her white parasol to the hem of her gown, eleven yards in width, she represents the extreme of style and is a wonder to the simply clad girls of A. D., 2000. A book she carries excites their curiosity and she is persuaded to read from its pages. The story of Gallagher charms them all, and even the Inductor tries to finish the tale and learn the fate of the hero, when the reader disappears.

The last scene represents the young girls attired in costumes of the nineteenth century, which they have found in an old trunk with a book, which they are vainly trying to read. The efforts to master the contents are very amusing as they endeavor to do it with the aid of the paras-sol and the donning of a leghorn hat. Even Inductor Polarization fails to infuse the ability to read with his electrical apparatus. The entrance of the grandmother, who declares the book to be Gallagher, makes the whole party wild to learn the art of reading, and she proceeds to teach them the alphabet.

The closing tableau shows the class spelling with large letters NINETY FIVE.

The class song followed and this was charmingly sung.

Well rendered music by pupils filled the pauses between the scenes.

OLD LAND MARK GONE.

A House Burned That Antedates the Declaration of Independence.

The house owned and resided in by John Miller and sister at Round Top, five miles from this city, was burned to the ground yesterday morning, and New Jersey thereby loses a land mark that antedates the declaration of independence.

Both Mr. Miller and sister were in attendance at church in Mt. Bethel when the fire broke out, which is supposed to have become ignited from a defective chimney, and by the time they arrived at the scene of the conflagration the structure was almost destroyed. A few of the household goods were saved from the building by nearby neighbors. The house and contents were but slightly insured. John Cooper, who discovered the fire, jumped on a horse and after notifying a few near at hand, started at a fast gait for the church to inform Mr. Miller. He had proceeded but a short distance, when the horse he was riding, stumbled and fell. The riders was thrown to the ground and sustained a fracture of the hip.

The house was erected over a century ago, and was of the colonial kind. During the war of the rebellion, when Gen. Washington's troops were camped for the winter near what is now called Washington Rock, this house was frequently used by the General as a stoping place during his reconnoitre expeditions.

ON THE TURF.

Hotly Contested Races at the Driving Park Saturday.

Several spirited horse races were held at Campbell's driving park on Saturday afternoon. The entries in the first race were "Lucy B," owned by Thomas Brantingham of South Plainfield; "Osborn Girl," owned by John Osborn; "Billy," owned by Nathan Robbins, Metuchen. The first heat was won by "Osborn Girl" in 2:44¼, and the second and third by "Lucy B" in 2:51 and 2:45¼.

The second race was a contest between "Gold Dust" and "Little Joe," two Woodbridge horses. "Gold Dust" won in two straight heats, in 2:54¼ and 2:37½.

The third race was between "Andy," owned by John Hayes, "Gen. Benham," owned by Fred Annes, and "Justice," owned by Judge Coddington. "Andy" won in 2:43, with "Gen. Benham," second, and "Justice," third. "Roy," owned by John Brown, of Rahway, entered the second heat and made the contest more exciting. "Gen. Benham" finished first, with "Roy" and "Andy," second, and "Justice" third. Time, 2:39¼.

The last race was between Harry McDonald's "Saving Girl" and Nathan Robbins "Harry." "Saving Girl" won in 2:50¼.

A WOMAN OF INFLUENCE.

Short Sketch of Mrs. Krom, As a Woman's Suffrage Advocate.

The Newark Daily Advertiser is daily publishing sketches of New Jersey women who are prominent in the movement for woman's school suffrage. The following about Mrs. S. R. Krom of this city was published on Saturday:

Mrs. Krom, though of Southern birth, has long resided in Plainfield. She is a white ribboner, and is superintendent of the department of "Tobacco and Narcotics" for the State W. C. T. U. She rendered a valuable service to the association last year by compiling careful statistics of the number of women voting at school elections, and serving on school boards in each county of New Jersey. She thinks the ballot in woman's hand would "raise the moral tone of the whole country, especially as regards the liquor traffic and the prevention of the regulation of vice."

She also points to the trouble women have in getting the age of consent laws raised in different States, while in Colorado, where women composed part of the last Legislature, the age of protection was raised to 18 years. It will be recalled that it was owing entirely to the untiring efforts of the women of this State that the age at which a girl can legally consent to her own ruin was changed in 1885 from 10 to 15 years.

Hung the Hammock Too High.

David Teller and Jacob C. Shephard walked to Johnston's drive yesterday, taking a hammock with them. When the two reached their destination they hung the hammock about thirty feet high between two trees. Both got in it, causing the rope to break. Fortunately they were not injured by their fall.

Lawyer Winfield S. Angleman has returned from Europe.

HIGH SCHOOL GAMES.

Good Sport at the Crescent Oval on Saturday.

TRACK WAS IN FINE CONDITION.

The New Track, However, Was a Little Rough and Soft, Thus Accounting for Slow Time—A Stevens' School Man Captures the Most Points—An Exhibition Mile Ridden By S. C. Crane.

Nature did all she could to give the Plainfield High School Athletic Association a successful field day, Saturday afternoon, and so it was from an athletic point of view, although the attendance was not as large as was anticipated. The day was a perfect one and the bicycle track was in a fine condition, but the new running track was rough and rather soft, thus accounting for the slow time made in the 100 yards dash.

A portion of the stand was decorated in blue and white for the Stevens School contingent, while dark blue and red, the High School colors, appeared at every point. The other schools were not represented by the colors.

In the first event the 100 yards dash there were six starters: L. F. Alfaro, Stevens, Hoboken; George F. Rose, Leals, Plainfield; E. I. Serrell, P. H. S., Plainfield; Howard Sharkey, Stevens, Hoboken; George Hercot, Stevens, Hoboken, and George Dupee, J. S. North Plainfield.

At the pistol shot, Hercot led out with Dupee close behind, and in that order they reached the finish, Dupee gaining slightly. Alfaro succeeded in getting third place. Serrell, who was fourth, was greatly handicapped by running in a street rut. The time was 11 seconds.

The contestants in the next event, putting the shot, were: George P. Smith, P. H. S., Plainfield; Volney F. Green, P. H. S., Plainfield; L. F. Alfaro, Stevens, Hoboken; A. F. Real, Stevens, Hoboken; Lambert Fish, P. H. S., Plainfield, and E. I. Serrell, P. H. S., Plainfield.

Smith out put his competitors at the start and had no trouble winning. His put was 34 feet, 8 inches, breaking the High School record of 32 feet, 1 1-2 inches made by himself last year. Read was second with 33 feet, 6 inches and Fish third with 28 feet.

The one-mile bicycle was run in one heat. The contestants were: V. F. Green, P. H. S., Plainfield; F. Everett, Stevens, Hoboken; W. M. McCutchen, Leals, Plainfield; Mr. Harrington, Stevens, Hoboken, and George Coard, P. H. S., Plainfield.

Everett paced all the way, with Harrington close behind, and the Plainfield boys in the rear. A good steady pace brought the men around in quick time, but at the finish Everett spurted out and crossed the tape a winner. McCutchen and Green followed but could not catch him and finished second and third, respectively. Coard took fourth from the other Stevens man. The time was 2.53 2 5.

In the 440-yard run there were four starters, all Stevens men, J. W. Beveridge, J. F. Alfaro, H. R. Sharkey and G. Hereot. Hereot won in a close finish, with sharkey at his heels. Alfaro secured third. The time was one minute, two seconds.

The high jump brought out four men, Geo. P. Smith, P. H. S., Plainfield; V. F. Green, P. H. S., Plainfield; Lambert H. Fish, P. H. S., Plainfield; Ralph Campbell, N. Y. U., Plainfield. Campbell, holder of the High School record of 5 feet 9 inches, jumped merely as pacemaker for the rest, being ineligible to win a prize as he is a college boy. Green won by clearing 4 feet 10 inches, which Fish was unable to do, thus giving Fish second. Smith took third with 4 feet 6 inches.

The starters in the quarter-mile bicycle race were V. F. Green, P. H. S., Plainfield; Geo. Coard, P. H. S., Plainfield; Mr. Harrington, Stevens, Hoboken; F. Everett, Stevens, Hoboken. Green and Everett fought it out for first place, but a strain received in jumping hampered Green, and Everett won by a length, with Green second. Coard showed up well at the last, leaving the other Stevens man far in the rear and almost catching the leaders, finished third. The time was 35 1-5 seconds.

The pole vault was contested by F. W. Cornwell, P. H. S.; Geo. P. Smith, P. H. S.; E. I. Serrell, P. H. S.; Geo. Hereot, Stevens, Hoboken; F. H. Fish, Jr., P. H. S. A. A. As Fish is not a member of the school, but only the association, he merely contested as pacemaker. Hereot could not jump the first length of 6 feet, and so fell out. Cornwell won by clearing 8 feet with a very pretty exhibition of vaulting. Serrell, after several ludicrous attempts, got the trick of vaulting, and tied Smith for second place at 7 feet 6 inches. Smith won on the jump off.

The last event was the two-mile bicycle race. The starters were: V. F. Green, P. H. S.; R. L. Douglass, P. H. S.; F. Everett, Stevens, Hoboken; and W. M. McCutchen, Leals. Everett set a hot pace with McCutchen, Green and Douglass following in the order named. The first mile was ridden in 2:54, with Everett pacing all the way. The same order was kept until on the long turn of the last lap when McCutchen started out with a spurt for which he is noted. It was too much for Everett, who had to ride his best to keep Green half a length behind. McCutchen won in 2:41, with Everett second, and Green third. Douglass finished two lengths behind Green.

The medals were then presented by Referee Taggart. The Rogers medal for the one-mile bicycle race, the search-light lantern donated by Martin for the one-fourth bicycle race, and the gold medal for the most points given by the Eldridge Bicycle Company, were awarded to the plucky rider from Stevens, F. Everett. McCutchen was given the silver and gold medal for the two-mile bicycle race, presented by the Eldridge Bicycle Company. The other medals were given by the P. H. S. A. A., and were made of silver for first prize, and bronze for second, a very pretty design with the emblem of the association upon it.

S. C. Crane, Columbia, ex-P. H. S. A. A., rode a mile exhibition in 2:23. He was paced by Darling, Havens, and Cuming.

A BAD DAGO.

Licked His Wife and Then Tried to Lick Officer Carney.

John Polanski, of Cottage place, got in a fight with his wife yesterday afternoon and commenced to beat her unmercifully. Neighbors hearing the fracas, went after Policeman Dennis Carney, and when he reached the scene of the quarrel he found the man kicking and abusing his better half. He arrested the man, and just after leaving the house, Polanski almost knocked him senseless by a blow from his hand. Conway attempted to use the club, when the man grabbed him by the throat and took the club away, at the same time giving him a blow on the head. The Hungarian then ran away and Carney after him. The latter finally succeeded in catching him, and with the aid of a chain got him to the lockup. Both were bleeding from the fracas. This morning Justice Nash committed him to Elizabeth jail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

Death of A. P. M. Roome.

Mrs. B. A. Hegeman, Sr., of Sycamore avenue, North Plainfield, received the sad news on Saturday of the death of her brother, A. P. M. Roome, at his residence, 225 Central Park West, New York city, which occurred that morning. Several years ago Mr. Roome lived in his mother's house on Washington avenue in this city, and was so unfortunate as to lose two children by death while residing there. Miss Eleanor Roome, his sister, also of Sycamore avenue, has been at his bedside for several days, and was present at the time of his death. He leaves a wife, besides the two sisters mentioned, to mourn the loss of a good and kind husband. His remains will be interred in Greenwood cemetery this afternoon.

Ordained to the Priesthood.

Roger Aloysius McGinley, who is well known in this city, was ordained to the priesthood in St. Patrick's cathedral at Newark on Saturday, and said his first mass in the Church of Holy Cross in New York yesterday. He was born in New York city in 1870, and began his early studies under the direction of the Sisters of Charity. Later he entered St. Laurent college, Canada. He was graduated from Seton Hall college in 1891, and began his theological studies the following year.

—It was Mr. and Mrs. Edward Chestresmith who celebrated their wooden wedding on Friday evening last, instead of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Smith.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mrs. Thos. Eggers, 139 Florida St., San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result everything else, then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottle at Randolph's drug store. Regular size, 50c and $1.

PRINCETON'S TRAGEDY

Ohl and Cochrane in a Critical Condition.

College Students Still Greatly Excited Over the Affair—John Collins, the Negro Who Is Charged with the Crime Locked Up in the Trenton Jail—Threatened with Lynching.

Princeton, June 10.—The shooting of students Frederick Pierson Ohl and Garrett Cochrane, of the freshman class at Princeton college, Saturday night, by a negro named John Collins, still causes intense excitement among the other students in this town. The shooting took place in an alley in front of the side entrance to the Anderson hotel. Collins is a laborer, 26 years old. He had had words with the students and in a fit of rage drew a 22-calibre revolver and fired first at Ohl, then at Cochrane and again at Ohl.

All Shots Took Effect.

The bullet fired at Cochrane struck him in the mouth and traveled to the base of his right ear. Both of Ohl's wounds were in the stomach. The students dropped to the sidewalk and were quickly removed to the college hospital. Collins was placed under arrest by marshal R. B. Tyrell. He took his prisoner to the town lock-up, but had scarcely got him incarcerated before word of the shooting reached every ear in Princeton and the students gathered on Nassau street by the hundreds.

Wanted To Lynch Collins.

A report gaining circulation that both Ohl and Cochrane were dying, the students grew very excited and demands that the negro be lynched went up on every side. "Hang him, hang him," was an exclamation repeated frequently. At the lock-up it was heard that some of the students had procured a rope and were marching there in a body.

Safe in Jail.

Marshall Tyrell, fearing for the prisoner's safety, handcuffed him and removed him to a piece of woods about a quarter of a mile from the college and kept him there until after midnight. By that time the excitement had subsided and a conveyance was obtained and Tyrell and two other officers took Collins to the county jail at Trenton. Stephen Downs, also colored, was lodged in the county jail at the same time. He was in the company of Collins immediately before the shooting took place. Ohl and Cochrane with some other students it seems were walking down Witherspoon street, a little before 10 o'clock.

Used Insulting Language.

Collins and Downs approached them from an opposite direction, and Collins, it is said, used insulting language, directing it toward the students. The latter rejoined sharply and there was considerable profanity. A few minutes later Cochrane and Ohl met Collins in the alley alluded to. Downs was a few feet away. Collins stood in the door of the hotel bar and reviled the students and dared them to enter. They undertook to do so, when the negro whipped out his weapon and began firing. This is the story of the affair as given by persons who were on the scene soon after the shooting. The negroes would not see reporters in the county jail to-day.

Bullets Extracted.

To-day the wounded students are lying in a critical condition. Dr. Bull, of New York, extracted the bullets from Ohl's body, but failed to dislodge the one underneath Cochrane's ear. Ohl belongs in Newcastle, Pa. He is a brother of Fullback Ohl of the Cornell college football team. He played half-back in the Princeton freshmen football team and was last fall heavyweight cane spreer, winning the only cane won by the freshmen. Cochrane is from Williamsport, Pa. He was captain of the Lawrenceville football team in '93, and played full-back with the Princeton team last fall.

BAHAMAS NEW TARIFF.

Goods Imported for Use of Government and Officers Admitted Free

Washington, June 10.—The department of state has received from Consul T. J. McLain at Nassau, copies of the new tariff act passed by the legislature of the Bahamas, which went into effect on the eighth day of May. Goods for the use of the government, the governor, or officer administering the government, and naval officers, are to be admitted free of duty. A drawback of nine cents per hundred will be allowed on cigars exported made from imported tobacco.

Relief for Flood Sufferers.

Stuttgart, June 10.—The king of Wurtemberg has arrived at Balingen, the scene of the recent disastrous inundation, caused by the overflowing of its banks by the river Eyach. One hundred and twelve persons lost their lives in the flood. The queen has donated 3,000 marks for the relief of the sufferers.

Prominent Mason Dead.

Richmond, Va., June 10.—William B. Isaacs, grand secretary of the grand lodge grand chapter of masons of Virginia, grand secretary of the Virginia grand commandery and grand recorder of the grand encampment, knights templars of the United States, is dead at his residence here.

Dancing Masters Meet.

New York, June 10.—A meeting of the American Association of Dancing masters was held in this city yesterday afternoon, the men present being on their way to Philadelphia, where a meeting of dancing masters from nearly every state in the union will be held this week.

Arrested for Attempted Assault.

Norwich, N. Y., June 10—Benson, charged with the attempt to assault the twelve year old daughter of farmer Paul of South Plymouth, was arrested at Oneida by the chief of police of that place, acting under previous telegrams from Sheriff Payne of this village.

Andree Wins the Grand Prix.

Paris, June 10.—The race for the grand prix de Paris, the French derby, was run to-day at Longchamps, and was won by M. Edmond Blanc's bay filly Andree.

Postmistress Wood Arrested.

Meadville, Pa., June 10.—Miss Cora Wood, assistant postmistress at Conneaut Lake has been arrested charged with the embezzlement of $147.

HUNDREDS HOMELESS.

Baltimore's Disastrous Sunday Conflagration.

Baltimore, June 10.—One of the most disastrous Sunday conflagrations that ever visited this city occurred on east Monument street yesterday. One hundred persons were rendered homeless and $125,000 went up in smoke. The fire was discovered a little before 11 o'clock in the plaining mill of A. Storck & Co., at 557 and 559 east Monument street. The flames spread to the lumber yard adjoining and then to several dwellings.

Nineteen Houses Gutted.

Ten houses adjacent on east Monument street and nine residences on North Front street in the rear were gutted, the burned area covering over 1,000 square feet. The planing mill with its valuable machinery and thousands of dollars worth of valuable material, and the yard, which contained over 100,000 feet of lumber, were wiped away by the flames as if by a magician's hand, and in two hours' time had vanished in some and flame.

Scene About the Fire.

The scene about the fire ground was of a soul-saddening character. Piles of goods and chattels and household effects of the humble people whose homes had been laid waste by the ruthless fiend, littered the streets near by, while men and women rushed about wringing their hands and speechless in their distress. Thousands thronged the streets in the vicinity and viewed with sympathetic eyes the scenes of desolation and distress. There was but little insurance on the houses or their contents.

TO FIGHT FOR CUBA.

An Expedition from the United States To Help the Cause.

Jacksonville, Fla., June 10.—A cablegram from Key West, Fla., says: It is now known that the expedition that left this country Wednesday night landed on the north of Cuba in the province of Las Villas, near Sagua Lachico. The expedition was under the command of General Roloff. Immediately upon landing they were joined by 2,000 insurgents, under command of Zayas, Castillo and Reyes. The party carried five hundred pounds of dynamite. It is rumored that fourteen Americans accompanied the expedition and also an expert telegraph operator, civil engineer and a powder maker. The vessel that carried the expedition though not a warship was prepared to show fight in case they were stopped by any Spanish gunboat. It was undoubtedly the best equipped expedition that has left the States in the cause of Cuban liberty.

APPEAL FOR RELIEF.

Citizens in Medford, Okla., Suffering for Necessaries of Life.

Wichita, Kas., June 10.—An appeal for aid has been received here from Medford, Oklahoma. The citizens are in a wretched condition so far as food and clothing are concerned, and pray for relief immediately. The appeal closes as follows: "In the name of suffering humanity we appeal to you for such food and other things as you can spare to help the destitute, and that as soon as you possibly can, to appease the hunger of crying children."

BIG BLAZE AT MILWAUKEE.

Fire This Morning in the Tannery District Causes Heavy Loss.

Milwaukee, June 10.—Two alarms of fire from Juneau avenue and Water street were turned in at 2 o'clock this morning. The locality is a tanning and lumber district and is distant from the business portion of the city about eight blocks. A number of enginees responded at once, and at 3 o'clock, as the fire was raging furiously, a general alarm was turned in. It was 6 o'clock before the fire was under control. Loss is very heavy.

MISSIONARIES MASSACRED.

It Is Said All Persons Connected With the Mission Were Killed.

London, June 10.—The Telegraph will to-day publish a Shanghai despatch saying it is almost certain that all persons connected with the English, French and American missions at Cheng-Tu have been massacred. The Chinese admit telegrams have been stopped by government orders. A French gunboat has gone to Wu Chang, on the Yang-tse-Kiang, to inquire into the matter.

Train Wrecked; Brakeman Scalded.

Knoxville, Tenn., June 10.—A special train on the Marietta and North Georgia railroad was wrecked at Bartlet, Ga., last evening. Lee Dickey was caught under the overturned locomotive and probably fatally scalded. Train wreckers had placed a spike on the track, which threw the engine and two cars down a 15-foot embankment. All the crew escaped without injury except the fireman. There were no passengers on the train.

Girl's Assailant Lynched.

Live Oak, Fla., June 10.—It is reported here that on last Sunday night Bill Collins, colored, attempted to assault Miss Jeanette Allen near Mayo, Lafayette county, but was frightened away. He was captured the same night, but, before he could be fully identified, made his escape, and was not recaptured until Friday night, when he was taken to the swamps, hanged and his body perforated with bullets.

Freight War In Texas.

Houston, Texas, June 10.—The freight rate situation in Texas has gone from bad to worse and a cut-throat business is being carried on. The cost of transportation no longer cuts any figure. Seven lines have cancelled all contracts with the Missouri, Kansas & Texas, which line they charge with precipitating the war.

Yellow Fever on the Monrovia.

Washington, June 10.—The Marine Hospital service is advised of the detention at the Gulf quarantine station of the British ship Monrovia, from Rio de Janeiro. She had one fatal case of yellow fever at the port of departure and twelve cases and two deaths in transit.

Boys Drowned.

Cleveland, June 10.—Three boys were drowned in Lake Erie yesterday near the life saving station, two of them in an attempt to save their companion. They were Michael Sheridan, Patrick Morris and Emmett Sweeney.

Blaze in Kalamazoo.

Grand Rapids, Mich., June 10.—Fire in Kalamazoo yesterday destroyed nearly one block in the business portion. Grand Rapids rendered assistance.

German Financial Circles Stirred Up.

The Franco-Russian Loan to China Proves To Be a Disagreeable Surprise—Want a Share in Further Loans—The Political Importance of the Arrangement Is Keenly Felt.

Berlin, June 10.—The news of the Franco-Russian loan of $30,000,000 to China has proved to be a disagreeable surprise both to the government and to the leaders in financial circles, who had been relying upon official action to secure a large share of the Chinese loan for Germany. Immediately upon receipt of news of the Russian coup the members of a German syndicate, of which the royal seehandlung is the head, communicated with the financial department of the government upon the prospects of Germany's securing the main indemnity loan, which will amount to $150,000,000 or $200,000,000, and negotiations were also resumed by the syndicate with the London Rothschilds on the question of the co-operation of English bankers in the scheme.

Government Promises Aid.

The syndicate has received prompt assurance that the government will intervene to obtain for Germany a share in such further financial arrangements as China may require, as the $80,000,000 now guaranteed by Russia covers only the indemnity to Japan for the surrender of the Liao Tung peninsula. German financial houses are confident that China must have recourse to them to float the larger loan, which Russia could not guarantee nor French financiers supply without outside assistance.

Its Political Importance.

The German syndicate, with the approval of the government, will therefore seek an entente with the English financial houses in the matter of the larger loan. In the meantime the political importance of the Franco-Russian arrangement is keenly felt, and it is probable that that loan will not be admitted into the German and English markets. This, at least, is the feeling of the syndicate which embraces the leading financial institutions.

CARLISLE GOES HOME.

The Secretary Will Attack Free Silver at Its Champions' Home.

Washington, June 10.—Secretary Carlisle expects to leave for Kentucky tomorrow to deliver at Louisville the financial speech he was obliged to postpone on account of the death of Mr. Gresham. It is possible that he will speak at one or two other places in the state before returning here. His mail is heavy with letters urging him to carry the war into the strong holds of the opposition. Henderson, the home of Governor Brown, who has declared for free silver, and Lexington, within an hour's ride by turnpike of Mr. Blackburn's home, have both invited him to speak. At either place Mr. Carlisle would be addressing the neighbors of a prominent champion of silver.

COMMERCIAL BILLS SCARCE.

Treasury Officials Fear That Gold Exports Will Be Resumed.

Washington, June 10.—The high point reached last week for sterling exchange—the highest for many weeks—causes treasury officials to fear that gold exports may be shortly resumed. At the present rate of exchange, 4.89a.90, many millions of gold were exported last spring. The Belmont-Morgan syndicate has so far been able to prevent gold exports, but their contract to protect the treasury gold reserve is now nearing an end, and an unusual scarcity of commercial bills is reported in New York. The treasury gold reserve is now $99,300,000 with $8,000,000 in gold still due from the syndicate.

American Discoveries in Greece.

Athens, June 10.—Dr. Richardson, of the American School of Archaeology, has found at the site of the ancient Greek city of Eretria a sculptured head of Dionysus, several archaic vases bearing inscription, a number of sculpured female heads, and a block of stone with an inscription comprising fifty lines. The discovery is thought to be of great historic importance.

To Fill Vacancies.

Washington, June 10.—The civil service commission will hold an examination on June 21, 1895, commencing at 9 a. m., to fill three vacancies in the department of agriculture in the position of the operator of the Hollerith electric tabulating machine. The salary of the position is $900 per annum.

Gail Hamilton's Condition.

Washington, June 10.—Miss Abigail Dodge is sinking to-day as new symptoms in her disease have developed. Her physician has no hope for her recovery, but she may linger for some days to come. Representative Hitt continues to improve and he now seems to be on the road to recovery.

Both Were Drowned.

Kansas City, Mo., June 10.—While a man named Shallbacher and Miss Nellie Neff were boat riding on the lake at Washington park their boat capsized about one hundred yards from the boat house, and before assistance could reach them both were drowned. Their bodies were not recovered.

Due to Financial Reforms.

Vienna, June 10.—In an interview today the Turkish ambassador here said that the nomination of Said Pasha as grand vizier in the Turkish cabinet now forming was due to needful financial reforms. It had no relation to the questions concerning Armenia.

Capt. Howgate's Trial.

Washington, June 10.—The trial of Capt. H. W. Howgate, the fugitive ex-disbursing officer of the signal service, upon the indictment still pending against him, is on the docket of the district criminal court for to-day.

Strangled by Medicine.

Winsted, Conn., June 10.—Mrs. J. J. Taylor, aged 22 years, of Waterburg, Conn., was strangled to death while taking a dose of medicine at the house of her parents in this city.

QUELLED WITH SABRES

Freely Used on Vienna Workingmen.

An Attempt To Hold a Meeting Prevented by the Police — Speakers Silenced and Leaders Arrested — Feared an Attack on the Public Buildings.

Vienna, June 10.—Ten thousand workingmen attempted to hold a meeting in the Prater yesterday, but a great force of policemen, on horseback and on foot, prevented them. A large number of the crowd then went into saloons on the Prater, where speeches were made. Herr Engelbert Pernerstor, a radical member of the reichsrath, and the socialist leaders spoke against the ministry's franchise scheme, and insisted upon the right of public assembly.

Leaders Arrested.

The police made several attempts to silence the speakers, and finally arrested the leaders. The crowd then became greatly excited, and it was necessary for the police to fight their way out with their prisoners. The officers used their sabres freely. A charge was then made on the crowd in the Praterstrasse, which was soon cleared.

Public Buildings Guarded.

Later the mob gathered again and paraded the streets. It was feared that an attack might be made on the public buildings, and strong forces of police were detailed to guard the ministerial offices and the parliament house.

Order at Any Cost.

Rome June 10.—Four hundred members of the new chamber of deputies will attend the opening of parliament to-day. The radicals and socialists will absent themselves from the session. Several battalions of troops have arrived to reinforce the garrison here. Order will be maintained at any cost.

COLIMA SURVIVORS.

Fed Diseased Meat and Were Brutally Ill-Treated.

San Francisco, June 10.—Affidavits have been published from Gustave Rowan, a seaman of the ill-fated Colima; Louis Boetticher, Samuel Cohen and C. A. Bertram, passengers of the San Juan, showing that the rescued men were brutually ill-treated and the steerage passengers were fed diseased meat. The claim is made in sworn statements that Dr. Robertson, the surgeon of the San Juan was drunk all the time, and refused to treat the injured. One passenger named Thompson, from New York to 'Frisco, died here the second day after the San Juan arrived. The affidavits make specific charges against the doctor in Thompson's case. The surgeon denies all the charges made, but makes no affidavit.

OPPOSE THE FIGHT.

Y. M. C. A. Wants the Corbett-Fitzsimmons Mill Stopped.

Dallas, Tex., June 10.—A call has been issued by ministers and Y. M. C. A. members for a mass meeting to protest against holding the Corbett-Fitzsimmons fight here. A big petition, already in circulation, is to be sent to the authorities. It is said that Culberson, Mayor Frank P. Holland and Sheriff Ben Cabelle, will place no obstacle in the way of the battle taking place. It is thought that it will be held with as much freedom as the Sullivan-Corbett fight at New Orleans.

Given Up for Lost.

Oswego, N. Y., June 10.—The boats searching for the steam yacht Ginata, which left here last Thursday for the St. Lawrence river, returned without finding any trace of the missing boat, and she has been given up for lost with all on board. It is supposed the yacht shipped a heavy sea and foundered in the middle of the lake. She should have reached the St. Lawrence in nine hours after leaving here.

Consul Williams Home.

Washington, June 10.—Raymond O. Williams, for nearly a quarter of a century consul general of the United States at Havana, Cuba, is in this city. Mr. Williams' recall, it will be remembered, was said to have been asked by the Spanish officials at the beginning of the insurrection in Cuba, and he is now in the country on a sixty days' leave of absence.

Reorganizing a Big Company.

Butte, Mont., June 10.—The first step in the reorganization of the big Anaconda Mining company has been taken in the filing of articles of incorporation of the Anaconda Copper company, with a capital stock of $30,000,000, divided into 300,000 shares of $100 each. The object of the organization is to place the stock of the company on the market.

In the Hands of a Receiver.

Council Bluffs, Iowa, June 10.—The Council Bluffs Insurance company is in the hands of a receiver. The company has been in an unfavorable condition for a long time. It was doing a good business, but $10,000 of the stock was held by a former president whose security was not believed to be sufficient by the auditor.

Their Differences Settled.

Chicago, June 10.—The differences between the American Strawboard company and the outside manufacturers have been settled. The price of the product may be expected to rise at once. A new trust is being organized to handle the product of all the mills.

Died from Inhaling Gas.

Baltimore, June 10.—Arthur L. Brickell, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who was found in his room 218 West Franklin street last Sunday suffering from the effects of inhaling illuminating gas, died yesterday at the Maryland General hospital.

Berlepsch Will Not Resign.

Berlin, June 10.—The newspaper reports announcing that Freiherr von Berlepsch, Prussian minister of commerce, has resigned, are untrue. There has not been at any time the slightest foundation for such a report.

Cardinal Gibbons at the Vatican.

Rome, June 10.—Cardinal Gibbons, of Baltimore, and Cardinal Rampolla, pontifical secretary of state, had a conference at the vatican Saturday night.

CRUSHED BY AN ELEVATOR.

A Teacher in the Y. W. C. A. Building in Brooklyn Killed.

Brooklyn, N. Y., June 10.—Sarah Jane Lester, 40 years old, of Woodstock, Conn., a teacher in the Young Women's Christian association at Schermerhorn street and Flatbush avenue, was instantly killed at 12.20 yesterday afternoon by having her head crushed between the first and basement floors while riding in the elevator of the building. Just how the accident happened nobody seems to know. The supposition of the police is that John Owens, the janitor, left the elevator for a moment and that Miss Lester, in some unknown way, pulled the rope. As the elevator started upwards she leaned out for the purpose of calling Owens. Her head struck the first floor, and before Owens could reach the rope she was caught and crushed to death, her head being horrible mutilated.

NOT A CANDIDATE.

Ex-Secretary Whitney Declares—His Views on the Silver Question.

Boston, June 10—Ex-Secretary of the Navy William C. Whitney was interviewed at the home of his mother in Brookline last night. He said: "I am not and will not be a presidential candidate. If the silver men should carry the next democratic convention it would split the party right in two. The democrats must stand for sound money. There are a good many sound money men in the west and south, and the Memphis convention, I think, has helped the cause along. Carlisle's speech at that convention was an excellent one and deserves to be widely read. It has undoubtedly had an influence in the south. I think the people will eventually treat this question the same as they did the greenback question. They want sound money now just the same as they did then."

DESTROYED BY STORMS.

Many Animals Killed in the Danube and Rhine Valleys.

Berlin, June 10.—The Wurtemberg Staats Anzeiger, of Stuttgart, prints a minutely-detailed account of the storms which recently swept through Alsace, Baden, Wurtenberg, southern Bavaria and the territory along the Danube and Rhine valleys. The hail which accompanied the storms entirely destroyed the vines and crops and the Ammeosee district is submerged, presenting the appearance of a vast inland sea. The bodies of thousands of animals, horses, cows, pigs, sheep, deer, etc., are strewn in every direction or are floating about on the surface of the water. It is as yet impossible to estimate the extent of the damage done, but it is enormous.

MR. REID'S MOTHER DEAD.

Died in the Old Homestead, Where She Had Lived for Seventy Years

New York, June 10.—Hon. Whitelaw Reid received a telegram that his mother had died at two o'clock yesternay moruing at Cedarville near Xenia, Ohio. Mrs. Reid, the deceased, was born at Ryegate, Caledonia county, Vermont, in 1804. Her maiden name was Marion Whitelaw Ronalds. She married in 1826 Robert Charlton Reid. Mr. and Mrs. Reid went west and lived happily together until Mr. Reid's death in 1866. Mrs. Reid died in the old homestead in which she had lived for seventy years. Hon. Whitelaw Reid is her only surviving child.

OIL WELL EXPLOSION.

Natural Gas Was Struck, and Three Men Were Seriously Injured.

Pittsburg, Pa., June 10.—Three men drilling an oil well at McDonald were seriously injured by an explosion in the well. Their names are: John McLeod, aged 51, Edward McLeod, aged 16, and W. R. Proctor, aged 27. When at the depth of about 1,000 feet an unexpected flow of natural gas was struck. Before the fire could be put out under the boiler the gas ignited and an explosion followed that startled the community. The three men were badly burned. They were brought to a hospital in this city.

Narrow Escape From Death.

Elizabeth, N. J., June 10.—A fire in Fitzpatrick row of frame tenements on Court street, Elizabethport, at three o'clock in the morning nearly resulted in the loss of two lives, while many persons escaped in their night clothes. Mary Menzell, a widow, jumped from a second story window, and was severely injured. John Grid, a boarder, was rescued and went back after some money he had left in a trunk. He was overcome by the smoke and when fouud was nearly dead.

Wants the Business Wound Up.

St. Paul, Minn., June 10.—The attorney general says the Tontine Savings association, of Minneapolis, is a swindling concern and has applied to the court to have its business wound up, for the appointment of a receiver, and for an order restricting the officers of the association from performing any of their functions.

Samuel Gompers Better.

Little Rock, Ark., June 10.—Samuel Gompers, the labor leader, left to-day for Nashville via Memphis. He is booked for an address in both cities, but was compelled to cancel his Memphis date on account of sickness. It is barely possible that he will be able to speak at Nashville to-morrow.

Cornell Navy's Launch Destroyed.

Ithaca, N. Y., June 10.—The Cornell navy's 60-foot steam launch which was built last fall at a cost of $6,000 was destroyed by fire late at night. The boat was used Saturday as usual to coach the freshmen crew, which is preparing to try conclusions with "Pennsy's" freshmen this week.

Congressman Hatch's Mother Dead

Hannibal, Mo., June 10.—Mrs. Mary R. Hatch, the aged mother of ex-Congressman Hatch, died at the home of her son at 2 o'clock yesterday morning. She had been quite feeble for months but she was not confined to her bed until a few days ago. She was 82 years of age.

A Good Corn Crop.

Omaha, Neb., June 10.—Heavy rains fell last night over most of the state and western Iowa. They assure a heavy hay crop and will help wheat and oats. Corn is now almost certain to be the best in years.

Gladstone Has a Relapse.

London, June 10.—Mr. Gladstone has suffered a slight relapse due to his going out carriage riding prematurely.

J. K. EMMETT'S CRIME

Attempts To Murder His Wife at 'Frisco.

Chased Her Through the Streets and Shot Her in the Head—Prevented from Shooting a Second Time by Their Protege—The Actor Was Intoxicated.

New York, Juue 10.—Particulars of the attempt of J. K. Emmett, the actor, to murder his wife, who is known on the stage as Emily Lyton, have been received here. The shooting occurred a short distance from their temporary residence in San Francisco, Saturday night. Emmett had been indulging in strong drink and, after his wife returned home, a quarrel ensued. When the shooting occurred there were few people upon the street, and the best account of eye witnesses was given by Frank Berges, twelve years of age. The couple had evidently been practising upon their mandolin and guitar, for, only a few minutes before the first signs of trouble appeared, the music of these instruments was heard in Emmett's apartments. Suddenly the front door was thrown upon by Mrs. Emmett, who pushed their little eight-year-old protege, Baby Synott, out on the front porch ahead of her.

"I'll Shoot You!"

"I'll shoot you", I'll kill you," yelled Emmett, who was in the front room. "No you won't," answered his wife, as she closed the door and hastily inserting the key snapped the lock. Pushing Baby Synot aside, Mrs. Emmett ran along the sidewalk. Emmett rushed to the front window, which he threw open, and started to spring to the ground, a distance of six feet. In doing so his foot caught on the window sill and he fell in the garden, striking his face against the stone coping. His nose bled freely. In the actors hand was a revolver. Springing up he cleared the low fence at a bound, and started in pursuit of his wife. Half way down the block the woman stopped and looked back. She saw her husband and the revolver, and with a scream resumed her flight. She cried loudly for help as she ran.

Baby Synott to the Rescue.

At this point Baby Synott, hearing Mrs. Emmett's cries for help, joined in the race. Near the corner Emmett caught up with his wife and fired. With a scream Mrs. Emmett fell to the sidewalk. He advanced towards his victim as though to shoot again, but as he levelled his pistol the child seized the hand that held the weapon. The actor paused and looked at the little one in astonishment, for he had not seen her before. He pushed her from him, stepped back and placed the muzzle of his weapon against his temple. Baby Synott again sprang upon the would-be murderer, seeming to climb up his limbs. In an instant the little hand was gripping the barrel of the pistol, which she pushed away from his temple. She clung to his arm so that he could not use the weapon again. Emmett stood for a moment as if bewildered, and then with his left hand he threw the weapon into a garden. Then the eight-year-old heroine fell to the sidewalk in a faint.

Calls Emmett a Coward.

Bystanders quickly gathered, and one picked up the child. No one would touch the man, who walked up the street and sat upon his doorstep until an officer arrived. Mrs. Emmett was assisted to a doorstep nearby, where she sat moaning until officers took her to the receiving hospital. The police stated that Emmett was undoubtedly under the influence of liquor at the time of his arrest. Mrs. Emmett was driven to the receiving hospital. When placed on the operating table she was in a very hysterical condition, and declared that there was no bullet in her head, although a supposed bullet wound was in her left temple. She protested against the doctors probing, and insisted upon leaving the hospital. Finally she consented to allow them to probe if they would desist when she cried "stop." Dr. Redding probed for a bullet, but was unable to find one. It had glanced upwards along the bone, and had in all probability lodged under the skin in her scalp. In answer to questions she said her husband had struck her inside the house with the butt end of a revolver, and she ran into the street. He followed her and pointed the pistol at her, when she struck his hand upward and the bullet went into the air. She was positive it had not struck her, saying: "He is too great a coward to do that." When told she would have to remain in the hospital, she refused to do so, and her brother-in-law left to get a hack to take her to his rooms. Captain Lees saw her at the hospital later and agreed to allow her to leave. According to a friend's story, Emmett and his wife have not lived happily together since they arrived in this city, and their quarrels drove Emmett almost crazy at times.

Window Smashing at Long Branch.

Long Branch, N. J., June 10.—Between midnight and 4 o'clock in the morning some unknown person broke several show windows on Main street. Nothing appears to have been stolen. Six stores were damaged by the glass breaking. The most seriously damaged one was that of Joseph Goldstein, whose loss is about $200.

Fell Under a Train.

New Haven, Conn., June 10.—William Lovelace, aged 23, attempted to board a moving freight train on the Consolidated road yesterday. He fell under the wheels, lost an arm and it is feared that he cannot recover.

Authorized To Purchase Vessels.

Madrid, June 10.—The naval commander at Havana has been authorized to purchase merchant vessels to be used as cruisers to prevent the landing in Cuba of partisans of the insurgents.

Gored by a Bull.

Watertown, Conn., June 10.—George A. Skilton, aged 73, a farmer, was attacked by a bull on his farm last evening and was so badly gored that death is looked for at any moment.

Soldiers in an Avalanche.

Rome, June 10.—An avalanche in the Alps threw fifteen French soldiers upon Italian territory. Six of the soldiers were seriously injured.

CHURCH CHIMES.

The Ladies Aid society of Monroe Avenue chapel will conduct a strawberry festival Friday evening.

The Ladies Aid society of the First Methodist church will hold a business meeting on Tuesday at 3:30.

A reception will be given to Rev. M. C. O'Donnell of the Monroe Avenue chapel Tuesday evening, June 18th, in the chapel.

Ex-Mayor L. V. F. Randolph delivered an address at the Children's Day exercises in the Congregational church at Westfield yesterday.

The croquet and lawn tennis grounds of the Epworth league of Grace M. E. church will be formally opened next Saturday afternoon.

Rector Johnstone and the vestry of the Church of the Redeemer have decided to discontinue the Friday evening services at that church during the summer months.

The regular meeting of the Young Ladies Missionary Society of the First Baptist church, will be held Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock, in one of the Bible class rooms.

Rev. J. Preston Searlis who occupied Trinity Reformed church pulpit yesterday, was the guest during his stay in Plainfield of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Titsworth, of 521 Madison avenue.

After the prayer meeting in the First Methodist church on Wednesday evening, the first quarterly conference will be held. The presiding elder, Dr. C. S. Ryman, will be present. There will also be a short business meeting of the Epworth league at the same time.

Miss Mary T. M. Ford, a missionary recently returned from Palestine, will address the Plainfield Branch of the Christian Alliance on the work in that field, on Tuesday, at eight o'clock p. m., at 317 East Front street. Miss Ford will give a Bible reading at 413 Central avenue on Tuesday at 3:30 p. m.

The famous Smith Family will give a concert in the chapel of the First Presbyterian church on Friday evening at eight o'clock. The fame of the Smiths is sufficient to guarantee an excellent programme and a pleasant evening's entertainment. Admission, twenty-five cents.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Faber, jr., of Mercer avenue, have placed a handsome carved wood lectern in the Church of the Redeemer, in memory of Mr. Faber's father, the late William Augustus Faber, who died recently in New York. The lectern was used for the first time yesterday. The pedestal is surmounted by a massive eagle with outstretched wings. The Ladies Guild of the church have presented a richly carved sub-altar. That and the lectern are works of art, and are highly appreciated by Rector Johnstone and the members of the congregation.

—Artists from the Casino, Keiths and Proctor's theatres will take part in the testimonial benefit tendered to W. L. Fursman at Drake's Opera House, Elizabeth, on Tuesday evening, June 11. Mr. Fursman is well known in this city.

FOR THE LITTLE ONES.

ists, and Raymond McGee, cornetist. The following was the programme: Organ voluntary; anthem by school, O Be Joyful; prayer, by Dr. C. R. Barnes; Bible recitation; singing by school, Happy Summer Time; recitation, Songs of Children's Day; singing by school, Come Let Us Sing; exercise, Words of Jesus; recitation, Wayside Flowers; recitation, The Birdie's Song; singing by school, Merry Sunshine; singing by primary department, Here We Come; exercise by primary department, What the Insects Said; Scripture selection; singing by school, Consider the Lilies; recitation, A True Story; recitation, Happy Childhood; singing by school, Marching to Zion; recitation, If I Was a Man; recitation, Over and Over Again; Scripture selection; singing by school, The Path of the Just; benediction.

The exercises were in charge of J. W. Jackson, superintendent of school.

Among those taking part were: Miss Mildren Terrill, Miss Retta Pound, Alfred Coddington, Roland Horn, Mabel Jenkins and the following classes: Mrs. French, Mrs. Hull Miss Horn.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.

The Children's Day exercises at the First Baptist church were held in the Sunday-school room in the morning at 9:30. The front part of the room around the platform was beautified with a profusion of daisies, palms and smilax, presenting a pleasing picture. The exercises were participated in by the children of the primary department, under the direction of the superintendent, Mrs. Powelson. The programme included singing and recitions by the following: May Batchelor, Jeremiah Manning, 2d., Wallace Pierce, Margaret Serrrll, Maude Emmons, Bertha Manning, Ethel Ga Nun, and Ernest Powelson. A pleasing feature was a vocal solo, "Come Unto Me," by Miss Bessie Blair. Howard Case was the pianist, and Lindley Hillman, violinist. There was also singing by the main school. A large number of parents and friends of the school were present, and enjoyed the exercises. The novel idea that every scholar should wear a bouquet was carried out, and as they marched to the church proper and took their seats in the gallery the sight was a most gratifying one. The decorations in the church were beautiful, and consisted of very choice cut flowers. The choir, under the direction of E. J. Fitzhugh, organist, rendered several pretty selections. The pastor, Rev. D. J. Yerkes, preached a very interesting sermon to the children.

Those in the choir were: Sopranos—Miss F. May Grant, Miss Swain, Mrs. Harold Serrell, Miss Bessie Blair, Miss Speer; altos—Misses Gussie Runyon, Nancy Randolph, Florence Kline, Bertha Needham, Grace Bonny; tenors—C. W. McCutchen, Edward B. Ryder, Mr. Smith; bassos—B. T. Barnes, William Holmes, Stacy Raynolds, George Snediker.

TRINITY REFORMED.

At the Trinity Reformed church yesterday Children's Day was observed in the morning at 10:30. The pulpit and platform were made beautiful with flowers and ferns, the arrangement of which reflected credit on those having them in charge. The Sunday-school occupied the front seats and the congregation and friends of the school filled the remainder of the church. Supt. E. E. Anthony had charge of the exercises, which were very interesting, the singing of the choir and school being especially fine. Mrs. J. M. Tier, superintendent of the primary department, is to be congratulated for the proficiency of the little ones in carrying out the following programme:

Singing—The Children's Day.....School
Recitation—Children's Day Greeting.
Albert Yaeger
Scripture Reading.....School
Singing—Jesus, Saviour, Dear to Me...School
Scripture Reading.....School
Recitation—My Three Little Texts.
Bessie Ryndall
Scripture Reading.....School
Recitation.....Clara and Hazel Martin
Singing—Hear My Song.....Bessie Martin
Recitation—Violets.....Ruth Berg
Singing—Only a Parting Word.....School

Following this interesting little programme of the primary department, two little babes were baptized and dedicated to God by Rev. J. Preston Searles, D. D., after which he made a most excellent address to the little ones. "The Relation of the Most Wonderful Book in the World, and its Author, to You" was the foundation or text he held up to his hearers. Dr. Searles has the happy faculty of being able to interest the little ones in his address, and at the same time to instruct his older hearers; and all who listened to his plain, practical address yesterday morning were well pleased with his efforts, and at the close of the service he received many congratulations. At the evening service he again gave evidence of his talents by delivering a powerful sermon from the 110th Psalm, 7th verse.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Fred Foster and Albert Sutterlin left yesterday morning at five on their bicycles for Newark to gaze on the ruins of Ballentine's brewery.

Theodore Shirley, of this city, while riding a wheel yesterday on his way to North Branch, collided with a telegraph pole, considerably damaging his bike. With the assistance of several passing riders the wheel was sufficiently straightened to ride home on.

The great relay bicycle race from Chicago to New York was finished by the two wheelmen on the last relay at the Boulevard and Sixtieth street Saturday morning. They broke the former record. As the first bicyclist rode up to the finishing point, the time recorded for making the 1,000 miles was 64 hours, 57 minutes, 30 seconds, which may be further reduced or increased by later calculations, but not much. The relay race started from Chicago at nine o'clock Wednesday. It was intended to demonstrate to the postal authorities the value of the wheel in delivering mail matter.

The ten-mile team road race for the cycling championship of Union county was won on Saturday by the Elizabeth Athletic Club Cyclers, who beat the Elizabeth Whelmen by a score of 48 to 30. The course was from Elizabeth to Springfield, five miles, and return. The teams consisted of six men on a side. The first man to cross the line was Walter Appley, Elizabeth Cyclers, whose time was 27:35. The second man in was Charles Appley, Elizabeth Cyclers; the third man, H F. Loehrs, and the fourth man, Charles Carpenter, both of the Elizabeth Cyclers.

Jersey cyclists showed clean heels to their rivals in The New York Times tri-State team race, Saturday, defeating for the second time in the history of the great relay contest the representatives of the Empire and Keystone States. Points were scored by the teams as follows: New Jersey, 75; New York, 55; Pennsylvania, 45. Starting at nine a. m. from The Times building in Newspaper Row, the finish was made on the track of the Riverton Athletic Association, at Riverton, at 5:52 p. m., making the elapsed time 8:52:00 for the 150 miles. This is 57 minutes and 45 seconds better than the time made last year.

Went to the Bottom of the Trench.

Dr. J. B. Probasco's horse narrowly escaped fatal injury this noon. The doctor had left his horse and wagon in front of a residence on East Second street while he went to make a call. The animal became frighted at something, and broke loose from the wagon. The horse then ran at a high speed down Second street to Watchung avenue, where he collided with a heavy board that was laid on the top of some sewer pipes. The board was thrown off, and the animal's hind feet struck the edge of the sewer trench causing him to fall ten feet sideways in the excavation. It was found necessary to throw dirt in the trench sufficient to lead the horse to upper terra firma. The doctor by that time appeared and, assisted by Harry Bush, succeeded in getting the horse home. There were no injuries.

For a Field Day.

The Young Men's Association of the Monroe Avenue chapel at a business meeting held Friday evening, decided to accept the challenge of the Hope chapel association for the field day exercises, which will probably be held the last Saturday in August. The president was instructed to purchase baseball material, the amount not to exceed $10.

Put Over The Term.

Owing to the absence of an important witness for the prosecution the cases of McClurg and Goldstein were this morning in county court put over the term. They will be tried the first Tuesday in October.

A Chairman Decided On.

The committee appointed to fill vacancies in offices for the Fourth of July celebration have decided on V. W. Nash for the office of chairman. His name will be submitted this evening at the meeting of the committees.

—Wm. Conover, who was to have been sentenced in Elizabeth on Saturday for forgery, did not make his appearance and sentence was suspended.

—Owing to an oversight in the making up of the copy for The Press of Saturday, an appeal emanating from the Relief Association was attributed to the Citizens Organized Aid. It appears in corrected form in the issue of this day.

Gashed His Hand.

George Egel, the butcher, who was in the employ of Mrs. D. I. Smalley, gashed his left hand severely on Saturday while cutting a piece of meat. Dr. Mattison dressed the wound.

Fred Fullerton, of Harned Academy, returned to his home in Montclair last evening.

Foreman William J. Newman of Gazelle Engine Company, is visiting his grandfather, Dr. William Newman in Brooklyn.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Miss Etta Krymer, of West Second street, left today to spend a few days with Miss Ella Shann of New Brunswick.

Capt. George Edwards, of Duer street, was a guest at West Point Saturday and witnessed the various drills. He met William Cadmus, who belongs to the engineer corps. The latter will be graduated in January next.

The Flower Queen.

The cantata of the Flower Queen, to be given in Vincent chapel tomorrow evening, will prove a most enjoyable entertainment. The chorus has been brought to a very proficient state by means of thorough and hard drilling on the part of the director, Mrs. Metta Horton Cook, a graduate of the New England Conservatory, who has given this cantata in a number of New England cities. The price of admission has been placed at the low figure of twenty-five cents, and already a large number of tickets have been sold. As the entertainment will commence promptly at eight o'clock, and as there are no reserved seats it will be prudent to go early in order to secure more desirable seats. At the close of the concert refreshments will be served by the ladies at a moderate price.

Don't Be Afraid of Water.

It is stated as a fact that over one hundreds loads of earth was carted away from the abandoned Watchung avenue sewer ditch between Front and Second streets, instead of the ditch being flooded with water and all the earth put back. If such is the case the city will be compelled to pay for earth to fill the ditch when it settles.

Walked in Front of the Train.

Nicholas Apgar, of South Bound Brook, walked in front of an approaching Lehigh Valley passenger train at the Bound Brook station this morning and was struck and thrown quite a distance by the locomotive. He was severely injured. He is seventy years of age and deaf, this affliction accounting for his not hearing the train.

ANOTHER WESTFIELD SQUABBLE.

Officials To Be Prosecuted For Taking More Than Fees.

L. G. Cohn, of Westfield, will next Thursday present to the Supreme Court at Trenton a petition asking leave to prosecute the Westfield Township Committee, and the Township Assessor and Collector of Taxes, in the name of the inhabitants of the Township of Westfield, to recover from the Assessor and Collector several hundred dollars which he claims the Township Committee have paid them in excess of their legal fees. S. S. Swackhammer, of Plainfield, is counsel for Mr. Cohn, and C. N. Codding will represent the officials. The petition was to have been presented to the court last Tuesday, but Mr. Codding, pleading assembly business, secured a postponement. The amount of fees paid to the Assessor and Collector for the past six years is involved.

I have two little grandchildren who are teething this hot summer weather and are troubled with bowel complaint. I give them Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and it acts like a charm. I earnestly recommend it for children with bowel troubles. I was myself taken with a severe attack of bloody flux, with cramps and pains in my stomach, one-third of a bottle of this remedy cured me. Within twenty-four hours I was out of bed and doing my housework. Mrs. W. L. Dunagan, Bonaqua, Hickman Co., Tenn.

For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves., T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

While at Peekskill, N. Y., Mr. J. A. Scriven, a prominent manufacturer of New York City, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Such good results were obtained from its use that he sent back to the druggist from whom he had obtained it for two more bottles of the same remedy. When you have a cough or cold give this preparation a trial and like Mr. Scriven you will want it when again in need of such a medicine. It is a remedy of great worth and merit. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

FOR CHARITY.

The Ladies Relief Association to the People of Plainfield.

It may be assumed that Plainfield people know something of the ceaseless labors of this, their oldest charitable association; something, too, of the extraordinary demand during the last two years for practically helpful charity.

Now, although local conditions are improving, and the rigors of winter have passed; although our work has been cut down to a minimum; yet the association has now upon its hands several families or individuals for whom self support is impossible because of sickness or old age, or because of the presence of young children needing constant care. Without charitable help these must suffer, and such help it is ours to supply. Yet the work of the winter has absolutely exhausted our treasury and, without the aid of the friends of the association, our operations must quickly cease.

With regard to the late public entertainment, The Russian Honeymoon, which was fully expected to replinish our treasury. It should be explained that the very kind offer of C. P. Ralli to present the play for the benefit of the association was accepted by the managers with the understanding that they would assume no responsibility whatever. Assuredly the entertainment was in itself a great success. Mr. Ralli and those who assisted him in its production have placed the public, and ourselves as well, under real obligations by their zealous and generous labors. But, because of the heavy, unexpected expenses, the financial result was most unfortunate. So far from turning over to us a profit, Mr. Ralli has had to face a deficit, and our treasury remains empty.

There remains to us, therefore, the one resource which has never yet wholly failed: To appeal to the people of Plainfield, who, surely, from their abundance, will not allow God's poor to suffer; and who, through many years, have relied upon this association to administer some portion of their many benefactions.

Contributions may be handed to members of the executive committee (named below); to any officer or members of the association; or checks may be sent to the treasurer, Mrs. H. P. Reynolds, 71 Washington avenue, North Plainfield.

By the executive committee,
Mrs. L. V. Randolph, president,
Mrs. J. R. Myers, vice-president,
Mrs. C. E. Brooks, secretary,
Mrs. Emil Woltman.
Miss Mary E. Tweedy.

MR. HAND'S LIBERAL OFFER.

The Use of the Crescent Building Offered for the Fourth.

If Plainfield had a few more people like Charles Hand there would be no question as to the success of the proposed Fourth of July celebration. Mr. Hand told a Press representative this morning that he had decided to throw open the Crescent riding academy for the use of the general committee to entertain the visiting organizations or for any other purpose they may desire to use it for. The only expense attached to the acceptance of the offer will be to pay for the cleaning and lighting, which will be comparatively small. The building can be used to great advantage in serving dinner to the visitors, for fully 2,000 persons can be accommodated in the structure and attended to with ease. The offer of Mr. Hand is a very liberal one.

INS AND OUTS.

The famous female ball team that played at Westfield last week will play a game at Dunellen next Saturday.

The Y. M. C. A. baseball team went to Rahway Saturday and were beaten by the home team 19 to 11. Features of the game was Warren McLaughlin's pitching and Egan's catching. Owing to very poor support by the balance of the team they lost the game.

The Monroe Avenue chapel baseball team on Saturday defeated a picked nine on the Clinton avenue grounds by the score of 37 to 25. Four innings were played. The batteries were: Monroes, B. Randolph and A. Taylor; picked nine, C. Apgar and W. Apgar.

Shiloh's cure is sold on a guarantee. It cures incipient consumption; it is the best cough cure, only 1c a dose; 25c, 50c, $1. Sold by all druggists.

Karl's Clover Root, the great blood purifier, gives freshness and clearness to the complexion and cures constipation; 25c, 50c, $1. Sold by all druggists.

Mrs. T. S. Hawkins, Chattanooga, Tenn., says; "Shiloh's Vitalizer saved my life; I consider it the best remedy for a debilitated system I ever used." For dyspepsia, liver or kidney trouble it excels; 75c. Sold by all druggists

YOUR SCALP! During the heats of summer does it become irritated and invite an occasional friendly scratch? To wash it is well, but not too often, lest your hair become "brash" and stiff. But treat it twice or thrice a week with our Petroleum Hair Tonic—a little rubbed in with your finger ends, and you will find the feeling of comfort and coolness truly delightful. Positively nothing equals it as a balm for the woes of your scalp. Sprinkler bottles 50c. Only at

REYNOLDS'S PHARMACY, PARK AND NORTH AVENUES.

Old People.

Old people who require medicine to regulate the bowels and kidneys will find the true remedy in Electric Bitters. This medicine does not stimulate and contains no whiskey nor other intoxicant, but acts as a tonic and alterative. It acts mildly on the stomach and bowels, adding strength and giving tone to the organs, thereby aiding nature in the performance of the functions. Electric Bitters is an excellent appetizer and aids digestion. Old people find it just exactly what they need. Price 50c a bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

While in Topeka last March, E. T. Barber, a prominent newspaper man of La Cygne, Kansas, was taken with cholera morbus very severely. The night clerk at the hotel where he was stopping happened to have a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and gave him three doses which relieved him and he thinks saved his life. Every family should keep this remedy in their home at all times. No one can tell how soon it may be needed. It costs but a trifle and may be the means of saving much suffering and perhaps the life of some member of the family. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

Sometime ago I was troubled with an attack of rheumatism. I used Chamberlain's Pain Balm and was completely cured. I have since advised many of my friends and customers to try the remedy and all speak highly of it. Simon Goldbaum, San Luis Rey, Cal. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

Corporation Notice.

Public notice is hereby given that The Plainfield Street Railway Company, a corporation incorporated under the laws of the State of New Jersey, did, on the third day of June, A. D. Eighteen Hundred and Ninety-Five, file with the Common Council of the City of Plainfield, the petition of said The Plainfield Street Railway Company, in the words and figures following, that is to say:

To the Mayor and Common Council of the City of Plainfield, N. J.

Gentlemen.—The Plainfield Street Railway Company, a corporation incorporated under the laws of the State of New Jersey, authorized to locate, construct, maintain and operate a street railway in the City of Plainfield, Union County, New Jersey, to be operated by electricity or other motive power except steam, respectfully represents that it desires an extension of the location of its railway in the City of Plainfield, as follows:

1. From the present terminus of the road in Watchung avenue, through Watchung avenue to East Fifth street, through East Fifth street to Richmond street, through Richmond street to Putnam avenue, and through Putnam avenue to Woodland avenue, through Woodland avenue to South avenue, through South avenue to the station of the Central Railroad of N. J. at Netherwood.

2. From the present terminus of the road in Watchung avenue, through Watchung avenue to East Third street, through East Third street to Richmond street, through Richmond street to North avenue, through North avenue to the city line at the Township of Fanwood.

3. From the present terminus of the road in Front street at Grant avenue, through Front street to the city line at Dunellen.

4. From the present terminus of the road in Watchung avenue, through Watchung avenue to Fourth street, and through Fourth street to Grant avenue.

And therefore respectfully petitions your Honorable Body to locate the tracks of the street railway and to consent to the extension thereof in said streets or highways, and further petitions your Honorable Body to consent to the operation of said extension of said railway with electric motors and to the erection of the necessary poles and to the necessary stringing of the necessary wires for the operation of said extensions by electricity; the tracks to be placed in the center of the streets and to be a single track with turn outs every thousand feet.

(SEAL) Yours respectfully,
J. T. FRITTS, Vice Pres.
Attest, ADRIAN RIKER, Sec'y.

The character of the road intended to be constructed, operated or maintained; the motive power to be used thereon and the street or streets or other public places through which the same shall extend are those specified in said petition above quoted in full.

That upon the first day of July, A. D. Eighteen Hundred and Ninety five, at the Common Council chamber, No. 109 Park avenue, in the City of Plainfield, New Jersey, at the hour of eight o'clock p. m., or upon such subsequent date as the hearing of said petition may be adjourned to, the Common Council will consider such petition, and intend by ordinance and not otherwise to grant or by resolution to refuse permission to construct, maintain or operate such street railway as prayed for in said petition, or in their discretion, to consent to the construction, maintenance or operation of such street railway upon part of the streets, highways or public places designated in such petition or notice, and refuse permission to construct, maintain or operate the said street railway upon the remainder of such streets or public places.

Dated, June 4, 1895.

By order of the Common Council.
J. T. MACMURRAY, City Clerk.

WE WANT

every one to know just how low we are selling merchandise—not the cheap, poor sort, or imitation of the good, but the best made—most reliable kind. That when you buy here you will be satisfied, that every article will stand the wear. It's why so many trade at White's.

DO YOU?

SILKS

Makes one think that Silks have gone back, but it's only the price. We place on sale today one entire stock of swivel and wash silks at one price, 34c yd. 34c.

WASH GOODS.

They tell us we have the best selected assortment of wash fabrics, and it must be so when everyone says so. How they sell.

EXTRA. EXTRA.

Challies that the manufacturer wanted 10c for a month ago, now they are 6 1-2c; imported Plisse that sold formerly for 17c are now 10c; German organdies, beautiful styles and the finest thing in wash fabrics we have ever offered, cost to import 30c, now 15c; thin underwear—it keeps them guessing how and where we buy it to sell at such prices; it's spot cash that does it. Ladies ribbed vests 12, 15, 18c; men's shirts and drawers 25, 33, 48c; children's gauze vests 12, 15, 18, 20c. Shirt waists; you are sure of finding just what you want, as we have more kinds, more of a kind, and the prices are as the waists, just to your liking.

SKETCHES OF LINCOLN.

Dennis Hanks' Visit to the White House.

BENT ON A STRANGE MISSION.

Recollections of John F. Speed—Lincoln's Lack of Affectation and Vices—How He Made Two People Happy—Plucking Thistles and Planting Flowers.

[From "The Life of Lincoln" by William H. Herndon and Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1888, by Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1892, by D. Appleton & Co.]

XXII.

In 1863 Mr. Lincoln was informed one morning that among the visitors in the anteroom of the White House was a man who claimed to be his relative. He walked out and was surprised to find his boyhood friend and cousin, Dennis Hanks. The latter had come to see his distinguished relative on a rather strange mission. A number of persons living in Coles county, in Illinois, offended at the presence and conduct of a few soldiers who were at home from the war on furlough at the town of Charleston, had brought about a riot, in which encounter several of the latter had been killed. Several of the civilian participants who had acted as leaders in the strife had been arrested and sent to Fort McHenry or some other place of confinement equally far from their homes. The leading lawyers and politicians of central Illinois were appealed to, but they and all others who had tried their hands had been signally unsuccessful in their efforts to secure the release of the prisoners. Meanwhile some one of a sentimental turn had conceived the idea of sending garrulous old Dennis Hanks to Washington, fondly believing that his relationship to the president might in this last extremity be of some avail. The novelty of the project secured its adoption by the prisoners' friends, and Dennis, arrayed in a suit of new clothes, set out for the national capital. I have heard him describe this visit very minutely. How his appearance in Washington and his mission struck Mr. Lincoln can only be imagined.

The president, after listening to him and learning the purpose of his visit, retired to an adjoining room and returned with an extremely large roll of papers, labeled "The Charleston Riot Case," which he carefully untied and gravely directed his now diplomatic cousin to read. Subsequently, and as if to continue the joke, he sent him down to confer with the secretary of war. He soon returned from the latter's office with the report that the head of the war department could not be found, and it was well enough that he did not meet that abrupt and oftentimes demonstrative official. In the course of time, however, the latter happened in at the executive mansion, and there, in the presence of Dennis, the president sought to reopen the now noted Charleston case. Adopting Mr. Hanks' version, the secretary, with his characteristic plainness of speech, referring to the prisoners, declared that "every d——d one of them should be hung." Even the humane and kindly inquiry of the president, "If these men should return home and become good citizens, who would be hurt?" failed to convince the distinguished secretary that the public good could be promoted by so doing. The president not feeling willing to override the judgment of his war secretary in this instance, further consideration of the case ceased, and his cousin returned to his home in Illinois with his mission unaccomplished.

DENNIS HANKS.

Dennis' Opinion of Stanton.

Dennis retained a rather unfavorable impression of Mr. Stanton, whom he described as a "frisky little Yankee with a short coattail." "I asked Abe," he said to me once, "why he didn't kick him out. I told him he was too fresh altogether." Lincoln's answer was, 'If I did, Dennis, it would be difficult to find another man to fill his place.'" The president's cousin sat in the office during the endless interviews that take place between the head of the nation and the latter's loyal subjects. He saw modesty and obscurity mingling with the arrogance of pride and distinction. One day an attractive and handsomely dressed woman called to procure the release from prison of a relative in whom she professed the deepest interest. She was a good talker, and her winning ways seemed to be making a deep impression on the president. After listening to her story he wrote a few lines on a card, inclosing it in an envelope and directing her to take it to the secretary of war. Before sealing it he showed it to Dennis. It read, "This woman, dear Stanton, is a little smarter than she looks to be." She had, womanlike, evidently overstated her case.

Before night another woman called, more humble in appearance, more plainly clad. It was the old story—father and son both in the army, the former in prison. Could not the latter be discharged from the army and sent home to help his mother? A few strokes of the pen, a gentle nod of the head, and the little woman, her eyes filling with tears and expressing a grateful acknowledgment her tongue could not utter, passed out.

A Near Friend's Testimony.

It will interest the reader and no doubt aid him greatly in drawing the portrait of Lincoln to call up for the purpose a friend of his, whose testimony is not only vivid and minute, but for certain reasons unusually appropriate and essential. The friend here referred to is Joshua F. Speed. Under date of Dec. 6, 1866, he says: "Mr. Lincoln was so unlike all the men I had ever known before or seen or known since that there is no one to whom I can compare him. In all his habits of eating, sleeping, reading, conversation and study he was, if I may so express it, regularly irregular—that is, he had no stated time for eating, no fixed time for going to bed, none for getting up. No course of reading was chalked out. He read law, history, philosophy or poetry, Burns, Byron, Milton or Shakespeare, and the newspapers, retaining them all about as well as an ordinary man would any one of them who made only one at a time his study. I once remarked to him that his mind was a wonder to me; that impressions were easily made upon it and never effaced. 'No,' said he, 'you are mistaken. I am slow to learn and slow to forget that which I have learned. My mind is like a piece of steel—very hard to scratch anything on it and almost impossible after you get it there to rub it out.' I give this as his own illustration of the character of his mental faculties. It is as good as any I have seen from any one.

"The beauty of his character was its entire simplicity. He had no affectation in anything. True to nature, true to himself, he was true to everybody and everything around him. When he was ignorant on any subject, no matter how simple it might make him appear, he was always willing to acknowledge it. His whole aim in life was to be true to himself, and being true to himself he could be false to no one.

Relaxation In Anecdotes.

"He had no vices, even as a young man. Intense thought with him was the rule and not, as with most of us, the exception. He often said that he could think better after breakfast, and better walking than sitting, lying or standing. His world-wide reputation for telling anecdotes and telling them so well was in my judgment necessary to his very existence. Most men who have been great students, such as he was, in their hours of idleness have taken to the bottle, to cards or dice. He had no fondness for any of these. Hence he sought relaxation in anecdotes. So far as I now remember of his study for composition, it was to make short sentences and a compact style.

"Unlike all other men, there was entire harmony between his public and private life. He must believe he was right, and that he had truth and justice with him, or he was a weak man, but no man could be stronger if he thought he was right.

"His familiar conversations were like his speeches and letters in this—that while no set speech of his, save the Gettysburg address, will be considered as entirely artistic and complete, yet when the gems of American literature come to be selected as many will be culled from Lincoln's speeches as from any American orator. So of his conversation, and so of his private correspondence. All abound in gems.

"My own connection or relation with Mr. Lincoln during the war has so often been commented on, and its extent so often enlarged upon, I feel impelled to state that during his whole administration he never requested me to do anything, except in my own state, and never much in that, except to advise him as to what measures and policy would be most conducive to the growth of a healthy Union sentiment.

His Kindness of Heart.

"The last interview but one I had with him was about ten days prior to his last inauguration. Congress was drawing to a close. It had been an important session. Much attention had to be given to the important bills he was signing. A great war was upon him and the country. Visitors were coming and going to the president with their varying complaints and grievances from morning till night with almost as much regularity as the ebb and flow of the tide, and he was worn down in health and spirits. On this occasion I was sent for to come and see him. Instructions were given that when I came I should be admitted. When I entered his office, it was quite full, and many more, among them not a few senators and members of congress, still waiting. As soon as I was fairly inside the president remarked that he desired to see me as soon as he was through giving audiences, and that if I had nothing to do I could take the papers and amuse myself in that or any other way I saw fit till he was ready. In the room, when I entered, I observed sitting near the fireplace, dressed in humble attire, two ladies modestly waiting their turn. One after another of the visitors came and went, each bent on his own particular errand, some satisfied and others evidently displeased at the result of their mission. The hour had arrived to close the door against all further callers. No one was left in the room now except the president, the two ladies and me. With a rather peevish and fretful air he turned to them and said, 'Well, ladies, what can I do for you?' They both commenced to speak at once. From what they said he soon learned that one was the wife and the other the mother of two men imprisoned for resisting the draft in western Pennsylvania. 'Stop,' said he. 'Don't say any more. Give me your petition.' The old lady responded: 'Mr. Lincoln, we've got no petition. We couldn't write one and had no money to pay for writing one, and I thought best to come and see you.' 'Oh,' said he, 'I understand your cases!' He rang his bell and ordered one of the messengers to tell General Dana to bring him the names of all the men in prison for resisting the draft in western Pennsylvania. The general soon came with the list. He inquired if there was any difference in the charges or degrees of guilt. The general replied that he knew of none. 'Well, then,' said he, 'these fellows have suffered long enough, and I have thought so for some time, and now that my mind is on the subject I believe I will turn out the whole flock. So draw up the order, general, and I will sign it.' It was done, and the general left the room. Turning to the women, he said, 'Now, ladies, you can go.' The younger of the two ran forward and was in the act of kneeling in thankfulness. 'Get up,' he said 'Don't kneel to me, but thank God and go.'

"We were now alone. I said to him, 'Lincoln, with my knowledge of your nervous sensibility, it is a wonder that such scenes as this don't kill you.' He thought for a moment and then answered in a languid voice: 'Yes, you are to a certain degree right. I ought not to undergo what I so often do. I am very unwell now. My feet and hands of late seem to be always cold, and I ought perhaps to be in bed, but things of the sort you have just seen don't hurt me, for, to tell you the truth, that scene is the only thing today that has made me forget my condition or given me any pleasure. I have, in that order, made two people happy and alleviated the distress of many a poor soul whom I never expect to see. That old lady,' he continued, 'was no counterfeit. The mother spoke out in all the features of her face. It is more than one can often say that in doing right one has made two people happy in one day. Speed, die when I may, I want it said of me by those who know me best that I always plucked a thistle and planted a flower when I thought a flower would grow.' What a fitting sentiment! What a glorious recollection!"

TO AID LITTLE WAIFS.

HOW "POOR CHILDREN'S DAY" IS CELEBRATED IN CHICAGO.

Appointed Each Year by the Mayor—Taking the Annual Bath—A Memorable Time of Feasting and Festivity—Races and Prizes.

Poor Children's day is a Chicago institution. Although under the management of the Chicago Waifs' mission, it has the honor of being appointed each year by a special proclamation from the mayor of the city. It is a great contrast to the Children's day more generally known about, for that comes on Sunday, is celebrated by most churches, and so reaches and delights all classes of children. Poor Children's day is a secular affair and takes place on a weekday, and everybody who believes that cleanliness is next to godliness, and that to reach a man you must first feed him and then preach to him, will approve of it.

Poor Children's day is simply a great outdoor festival, prepared for by washing, barbering and clothing the children a day or so beforehand.

The following account of the celebration held a year or so ago, given in The American Youth, is the story of what takes place annually:

"A certain Tuesday in July was washday for the waifs. It comes annually, not once a week, and is an event toward which the ragamuffins look for months. The boys were dirty, filthy and vile. Some swore, many fought, and all, either for the novelty of the thing or sheer dirtiness, wanted to have a hand in the bath, an arm in a new coat or some hair off their head. Many of them looked as if they had missed entirely all the previous baths given by the Waifs' mission. A tent had been pitched early in the day, and as early came the droves of ragamuffins who sleep with the sparrows, stunted, dwarfed and decrepit little chaps, whose keen eyes glowed in anticipation of the treat in store for them. It was the motliest assemblage ever congregated under the blue dome of heaven, and they were as inquisitive and just as numerous as ants. They peeked in the flaps of the tent and looked at the 12 big tubs already filled with pure, sparkling water. Then they swarmed over everything.

The active warfare against dirt did not commence until near noon, but all the morning there was a string of boys anxious to have a hair cut. They bobbed in one door of the tent, and in about 30 seconds they were shot out the other as bald as the day they were born. The three barbers shouted, "Next gent!" and the kids, with a grin like a man who had taken laughing gas, planked themselves in wooden chairs, and the operation commenced. It was not a fancy cut. It was simply a serviceable one. A few slashes from the back of the neck to the eyebrows, and the negro, Bohemian or Arab came out sans hair.

Then the real work commenced. Such dirty children! It did not seem possible that a human body would carry such accumulations of dirt as the dropping of a few rags exposed. Grime in concentric rings, like the growth of trees, enveloped many of the applicants Clean apparel was given to those who got through the finishing up process, and they were turned out clothed and in their right minds.

The Thursday following this memorable washday was the time of the annual picnic. The organization of a celebration like Poor Children's day entails much work and planning.

There is nothing in "What's-his name's Lightning Calculator" or "Ray's Third Part" that would shed any light upon the amount of food necessary to expand the vests of 10,000 hungry youngsters, not one of whom had enjoyed a square meal since the time of the Mission Christmas feast, and one who has never witnessed the storing of a waif's larder can never arrive at an exact idea of the herculean proportions of the task. Superintendent Daniels of the Waifs' mission, when questioned as to the quantity required, said that his many years' experience of Poor Children's days had taught him that it took all he could get, and he instructed his coworkers to labor to that end. A few weeks before the picnic several thousand strawboard boxes were manufactured and each box made to hold enough lunch for one half starved urchin. These boxes were nested in sixes, incased in larger boxes and loaded on express wagons. Each wagon was equipped with a driver and crew and allotted certain streets on which to work. A house to house canvass was made, and it was seldom that a family refused to fill at least one nest of boxes.

Now, hydrant water may do to wash down an ordinary lunch, but it takes lemonade, with lemons in it, and sugar, to mellow up the picnic cake and pie. This requires innumerable empty barrels, hundreds of tin cups, small mountains of sugar and lemons, to say nothing of the ice to cool the decoction.

It takes one person several days to visit the ice cream establishments and see what they will do for the waifs. They generally respond liberally. Then there are the games and prizes to look after. Several days' work is necessary along that line. Suitable grounds must be secured and booths erected. After the grounds are located the railroads have to be seen and the transportation arranged for.

There must also be a place of meeting arranged for down town, and there must be marshals for the parade, and the bands must not be forgotten. You couldn't handle 6,000 or 10,000 street children without music, and it takes several large bands to furnish enough. What would a parade be without flags and banners! If the reader thinks that a waifs' picnic can be stirred up out of nothing, without any exertion, that reader should join the forces next year. It takes work, and it takes money. But to go back to that great July day.

The parade came first, and after the parade there were races for big girls and races for little girls, races for big boys and races for little boys. Over 100 prizes were distributed. Then came the banquet, boys and girls being served separately. The objective point for the crowd was a slit in the wall of a rude board shanty, barely wide enough for a child to squeeze through.

A policeman stood on either side of the slit passing the boys through. Near by were a dozen other police gesticulating and shouting in vain endeavor to induce the larger portion of the crowd to get in line. Finding they could do nothing in this way, they devoted their efforts to gathering up all the small and sickly looking youngsters they could see, picking them up bodily and planting them in the front of the line where they would have first chance at the lunch. Inside the shanty was a mountain of pasteboard boxes, around which were 50 women. It was quick work. The children were hustled along so fast that before they could grasp the situation they would emerge from the other side of the shanty with a box of cold victuals and a dazed look.

The waifs ate until they were tired. They ate until they were in misery. After the feast they lined up for the lemonade, which was issued in the same way as the lunches. Each child was given a huge tincupful of the nicest lemonade made out of sure enough lemons and real water. That ended the feast.

Then came more fun. But as all days have an end Poor Children's day was no exception, and after 5 o'clock the children were back in their old haunts again.

A Dream of Poor Children.

I had a dream. So sad, so sad it was
It hurts my heart to tell that dream again.
I thought I stood above the life that draws
Its weary breath in crowded street and lane,
Above the rough, hot pavement and the glare
From binding roof and wall and sun scorched air.

I looked as might a spirit from on high,
Not strong, but trembling, and I saw God.
The children's poor sweet faces, bold or shy,
All, all were piteous; none seemed bright nor glad.
I heard their songs and cries, their restless feet
And their wild, longing hearts that beat and beat.

Then, as a spirit might, I turned my eye
Out to the broad blue waters of the bay,
To all the widespread loveliness that lies
Within the reaches of God's glorious day—
The hills, the fields, the streams that laugh and move
And the kind, happy heaven that smiled above.

I saw fresh daisies in the cool deep grass
And bending boughs that shook their blossoms down.
I watched the birds on sun swept pinions pass,
And then I saw again the crowded town,
The pale young children, where they waked and slept,
Their eager, pleading faces, and I wept.

And some dressed wan and faint for want of bread,
And trembling some, with fear of curse or blow,
And some at heavy tasks bent hand and head,
Numb with the pain that hopeless toilers know,
And some were girls, children no more—O God,
I dared not look to see the path they trod!

Near me white seraphs hung and mutely wept,
And Christ, methought, wept, too, above it all,
A broken prayer against my sobbing swept,
And I awoke. I weep when I recall
That dream, so sad, so strange! It can but seem Only a dream! Surely 'twas but a dream!
—Mary A. de Vere in Ladies' Home Journal.

A Gay Procession.

By general usage and from its annual occurrence over so many years Anniversary day has grown to be a peculiar and a distinctive ceremony in Brooklyn. No other city in the length and breadth of the Union has anything like it. It commemorates the founding of the Brooklyn Sunday School union, which binds together all the evangelical churches of the town. What it has accomplished, save in the way of fraternalism and this annual showing, is not great, but Children's day alone is sufficient to mark it as a success.

A parade in which nearly 70,000 children march is a picturesque sight. Each Sabbath school class has a banner of its own, a gayly colored piece of silk, with gilded letters. The big boys of the schools are pressed into this service, and they are only too glad of the burden. Streamers ending in tassels hang from these gay flags, and they are held by tiny girls. The color of the parade is in cheeks, banners, sashes and ribbons. There are miles and miles of white frocks. It is a day of white—swiss, muslin and dimity. Hats are white too. If the May day is ideal in weather, the classes of girls march along, hardly broken by pinks, blues or yellow. Behind them the coming masculine generation look somber. But the girls are always in the great majority. Each class' teacher is at the side of her line, like a marshal or adjutant. It is only in parasols that the teachers attempt to outdo each other. Whether the sun pours down or not, every parasol is up, bewildering combinations of lace and color.

A Precious Trust.

Let the child always appear to us as a living pledge of the presence, of the goodness and of the love of God.—Froebel.

A Wise Admonition.

Develop the child, not train him.—Pestalozzi.

Wind in warm, warm weather,

One thing yet there is, that none,
Hearing ere its close be done,
Knows not well the sweetest one
Heard of man beneath the sun,
Hoped in heaven hereafter;
Soft and strong and loud and light,
Very round and very light,
Heard from morning's rosiest height,
Where the soul of all delight
Fills a child's clear laughter.
Golden bells of welcome rolled
Never forth such notes, nor told
Hours so blithe in tones so bold
As the radiant mouth of gold
Here that rings forth heaven.
If the golden crested wren
Were a nightingale, why, then
Something seen and heard of men
Might be half as sweet as when Laughs a child of seven.

RECENT DISCOVERIES.

No Woman's Day, but Children's Day Comes Once a Year.

The two great modern discoveries are woman and the child. The world has been absorbed all these centuries with men. Men have made its history, set up and overthrown its governments, monopolized its enterprises, privileges, glory, while women have been tolerated as a necessary evil, and children have only been regarded as possibilities of the future. The great past recognized the man, the wife and the family. Under this latter head were hidden the children. Their individuality was merged, so to speak, in that convenient term.

But in these days of overturnings and revolutions, when institutions hoary with age and canonized by centuries are rudely classified as effete and new ideas are irreverently thrust into their places, woman is asserted in such a positive manner that she can no longer hide herself behind the veil of the centuries, but must come to the front not only in the great secular but also in the religious world, and as she comes forward in her hesitating, modest manner she brings the child with her. We have no woman's day in our calendar, but we have Children's day. Children's day comes but once a year. Perhaps it is because woman's day comes much oftener that we do not make an anniversary of it, and perhaps Children's day will some time disappear for the same reason. Certainly there is no day in the year when we can afford to forget them. They are very dear, delightful little personages, a benediction to the home, to society and certainly to the church. We are apt to consider them in the church relation only as possibilities of the future. They are potentialities of the present, and a church that has no place for them and only tolerates them because of what it expects them to become is not half the church it ought to be.

Fit for the Sunday school? Yes, of course. Fit for the church? Why not? Of such is the kingdom of heaven. Let them in, take them in, high chairs and all, into the very sanctuary, not once a year, not for the purpose of a celebration, but put them into the midst of every worshiping assembly, and if the service has to be modified, and the sermon shortened and simplified, why, so much the better for all. What is meet for the kingdom of heaven is meet for the children.—Independent.

Can Speak if They Wish To.

Freddy was telling his aunt about Children's day. "You see, auntie," he said, "it's a Sunday when we children have a chance to say something in church, and, my, don't we make the big folks listen!"

Children's Day.

Oh, Children's day in the summer's prime!
How bright is the world and how fair
When over the bowers the roses climb
And the lilies are waving in air!

We bring to our altars our gifts of flowers,
And the singing birds, and say
The happiest day of the summer hours
Is the children's Sabbath day!

The Sabbath of lilies and roses!
Our souls draw near in praises
To the beauty of Christ in paradise
On the children's Sabbath day.

Today the censers of roses swing,
More sweet than the censers of gold.
The birds at the altar sweetly sing
As they sung in the temple of old.

We joyfully sing 'mid the birds and flowers
To the praises of God, and say
The beautiful time of the summer hours
Is the children's Sabbath day.

The Sabbath of lilies and roses!
Our souls draw near in praises
To the beauty of Christ in paradise
On the children's Sabbath day!

Oh, who is the Rose of Sharon today?
And who is the Lily white?
And whose is the love that leads our way
To the gardens of paradise bright?

At his feet triumphant we cast our flowers,
And our off'rings there we lay.
Rejoicing the gifts of his love are ours
On the children's Sabbath day!

The Sabbath of lilies and roses!
Our souls draw near in praises
To the beauty of Christ in paradise
On the children's Sabbath day.

THE EXPLOITS OF BRIGADIER GERARD.

How the Brigadier Slew the Brothers of Ajaccio.

BY A. CONAN DOYLE.

CHAPTER II.

(Copyright, 1895.)

"This is Monsieur Etienne Gerard, Monsieur de Talleyrand," said Lasalle. I saluted, and the statesman took me in from the top of my panache to the rowel of my spur with a glance that played over me like a rapier point.

"Have you explained to the Lieutenant the circumstances under which he is summoned to the Emperor's presence?" he asked in his dry, creaking voice.

WHEN HE HEARD MY NAME SHOWED ME STRAIGHT IN.

They were such a contrast, these two men, that I could not help glancing from one to the other of them, the little, black, sly politician and the big, sky-blue Hussar, with one flat on his hip and the other on the hilt of his sabre. They both took their seats as I looked, Talleyrand without a sound and Lasalle with a clash and jingle like a prancing charger.

"It's this way, youngster," said he, in his brusque fashion. "I was with the Emperor in his private Cabinet this morning when a note was brought in to him. He opened it, and as he did so he gave such a start that it fluttered down onto the floor. I handed it up to him again, but he was staring at the wall in front of him, as if he had seen a ghost. "Fratelli dell' Ajaccio" he muttered, and then again "Fratelli dell' Ajaccio." I don't pretend to know more Italian than a man can pick up in two campaigns, but I could make nothing of this. It seemed to me that he had gone out of his mind, and you would have said so also, Monsieur de Talleyrand, if you had seen the look in his eyes. He read the note, and then he sat for half an hour or more without moving."

"And you?" asked Talleyrand.

"Why, I stood there not knowing what I ought to do. Presently he seemed to come back to his senses. 'I suppose, Lasalle,' said he, 'that you have some gallant young officers in the Tenth?' 'They are all that, sire,' I answered. "If you had to pick one who was to be depended upon for action, but who would not think too much—you understand me, Lasalle, which would you select?" he asked. I saw that he needed an agent who would not penetrate too deeply into his plans. 'I have one,' said I, 'who is all spurs and moustaches, with never a thought beyond women and horses.' 'That is the man I want,' said Napoleon. 'Bring him to my private Cabinet at 4 o'clock.' So youngster, I came straight away to you at once, and mind that you do credit to the Tenth Hussars."

I was by no means flattered by the reasons which had led to my colonel's choice, and I must have shown as much in my face, for he roared with laughter, and Talleyrand gave a dry chuckle also

"Just one word of advice before you go, Monsieur Gerard," said he, "you are now coming into troubled waters, and you might find a worse pilot than myself. We have none of us any idea as to what this little affair means, and, between ourselves, it is very important for us, who have the destinies of France upon our shoulders, to keep ourselves in touch with all that goes on. You understand me, Monsieur Gerard!"

I had not the least idea what he was driving at, but I bowed and tried to look as if it were clear to me.

"Act very guardedly, then, and say nothing to anybody," said Talleyrand. "Col. Lasalle and I will not show ourselves in public with you, but we will await you here, and we will give you our advice when you have told us what has passed between the Emperor and yourself. It is time that you started now, for the Emperor never forgives unpunctuality."

Off I went on foot to the palace, which was only a hundred paces off. I made my way to the antechamber, where Duroc, with his grand, new scarlet-and-gold coat, was fussing about among the crowd of people who were waiting. I heard him whisper to Monsieur de Caulaincourt that half of them were German dukes who expected to be made kings and the other half German dukes, who expected to be made paupers. Duroc, when he heard my name, showed me straight in, and I found myself in the Emperor's presence. I had, of course, seen him in camp a hundred times, but I had never been face to face with him before. I have no doubt that if you had met him without knowing in the least who he was you would simply have said that he was a sallow little fellow with a good forehead and fairly well-turned calves. His tight white cashmere breeches and white stockings showed off his legs to advantage. But even a stranger must have been struck by the singular look of his eyes, which could melt into tenderest sympathy or harden into an expression which would frighten a grenadier. It is said that even Auguereau, who was a man who had never known what fear was, quailed before Napoleon's gaze, at a time, too, when the Emperor was but an unknown soldier. He looked mildly enough at me, however, and motioned me to remain by the door. De Meneval was writing to his dictation, looking up at him between each sentence with his spaniel eyes.

"That will do; you can go," said the Emperor abruptly. Then, when the secretary had left the room, he strode across with his hands behind his back, and he looked me up and down without a word. Though he was a small man himself, he was very fond of having fine-looking fellows about him, and so, I think, that my appearance gave him pleasure. For my own part I raised one hand to the salute and held the other upon the hilt of my sabre, looking straight ahead of me, as a soldier should

"Well, Monsieur Gerard," said he at last, tapping his forefinger upon one of the brandebourgs of gold braid upon the front of my pelisse. "I am informed that you are a very deserving young officer. Your colonel gives me an excellent account of you."

I wished to make a brilliant reply, but I could think of nothing save Lasalle's phrase that I was all spurs and moustaches, so it ended in my saying nothing at all The Emperor watched the struggle, which must have shown itself upon my features, and when finally no answer came he did not appear to be displeased.

"I believe that you are the very man that I want," said he. "Brave and clever men surround me upon every side. But a brave man who" —— He did not finish his sentence, and, for my own part, I could not understand what he was driving at. I contented myself with assuring him that he could count upon me to the death.

"You are, as I understand, a good swordsman," said he.

"Tolerable, sire," I answered.

"You were chosen by your regiment to fight the champion of the Hussars of Chamborant," said he.

I was not sorry to find that he knew so much of my exploits.

"My comrades, sire, did me that honor," said I.

"And for the sake of practice you insulted six fencing masters in the week before your duel?"

"I had the privilege of being out seven times in as many days, sire," said I

"And escaped without a scratch?"

"The fencing master of the Twenty-third Light Infantry touched me on the left elbow, sire."

"Let us have no more child's play of the sort, monsieur," he cried, turning suddenly to that cold rage of his, which was so appalling. "Do you imagine that I place veteran soldiers in these positions that you may practice quarte et tierce upon them? How am I to face Europe if my soldiers turn their points upon each other? Another word of your dueling and I break you between these fingers." I saw his plump, white hands flash before my eyes as he spoke, and his voice had turned to the most discordant hissing and growling. My word, my skin pringled all over as I listened to him, and I would gladly have changed my position for that of the first man on the steepest and narrowest breach that ever swallowed up a storming party. He turned to the table, drank off a cup of coffee, and then, when he faced me again, every trace of this storm had vanished, and he wore that pleasant smile with which he had won so many a rough soldier's heart.

FOURTH OF JULY COMMITTEES APPOINTED.

Vincent W. Nash Will Be the Permanent Chairman—Eighteen Organizations Make Favorable Reports.

There was a large attendance of the members of the Fourth of July committees at the meeting in Red Men's hall last evening. Chairman V. W. Nash presided and called for the reading of the minutes of the last meeting, which were approved.

T. J. Carey reported that he had seen J. W. Murray and that he had declined the position of chairman of the committee. William Newcorn stated that the position had been filled by appointing V. W. Nash, and Wm. Kirk had been appointed to the latter's place as first vice-president.

Communications were received from Warren Engine Company No. 1, and the Plainfield Gesang and Turn Verein society, signifying a desire to participate in the celebration.

A communication was received from S. H. DeHart in regard to the purchase of fireworks, which was received and filed.

The Ancient Order of Hibernians reported the following committee: E. Birmingham, M. Nugent, and J. F. O'Haran. The Catholic Benevolent Legion: T. A. McCarthy, Thomas Matthews, and Patrick Divver. The T. A. B: P. J. Reville, John Hickey, and John Carney.

Alert Hose Company responded with the following committee: William Kirk, S. H. Whitney, and Louis Timpson. The City Council: W. A. Westphal, V. L. Frazee, and S. A. Ginna.

Motions were made that executive, finance, subscription, parade and printing committees be appointed, and that all be under the direction of the executive committee. It was so ordered.

The subject of when the parade should take place was discussed considerably, and it was finally decided to have it at 9:30 in the morning.

Out of a list of thirty-three societies called, fifteen either reported no action taken or had no report to make, leaving eighteen who were enthusiastic over the celebration, some stating that music had been secured.

A motion was made and carried that Alert Hose Company be asked to loan their silver hose wagon and also that the old hand engine from Scotch Plains be secured.

The following committees were then appointed by the chairman:

Executive Committee—Councilmen V. L. Frazee and S. A. Ginna; John Valiant, M. J. Cashin, A. E. Kenney, L. G. Timpson, F. A. Long, William Douglass, J. E. Flannery, Charles M. Ulrich.

Finance Committee—T. J. Carey, G. Q. Packer, Eugene Laing, James Buckle, Elston French.

Parade Committee—E. C. Morse, Amos Andrews, Joseph Blimm, C. F. Stephens, G. F. Edwards and Henry Haurand.

Committee on Collections—Mayor Alexander Gilbert, Borough Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., Councilman C. J. Fisk, S. P. T. Wilbur, J. J. Kenney, William Kirk, Charles Lyman, Roger Murray, J. C. Peck and William Newcorn.

Committee on Printing—Councilman William Westphal, J. P. Allis, W. A. Woodruff, P. A. VanFleet, and Joseph T. Dunham.

Mr. Newcorn made a motion, which was carried, that the Executive Committee be empowered to create any sub-committees they saw fit.

The meeting then adjourned and the various committees met to organize and get down to business.

PARK CLUB TO CELEBRATE, TOO.

The Board of Governors Will Discuss the Matter Tonight.

The Board of Governors of the Park club will hold a meeting this evening when the matter of celebrating the Fourth of July in their usual and complete style will be discussed and arranged for. The annual festivities of this organization on this natal day have in the past been one of the enjoyable events the members and friends of the club participate in, and the Board of Governors this year intend to arrange for the evening display of fire works and reception on a more magnificent scale than in previous years. The matter of enlarging the clubhouse will also be discussed at the meeting of the Governors tonight, and steps taken towards improvements in this direction which have long been needed.

BRIGHT LITTLE SCHOLARS.

CLOSING EXERCISES OF MISS FAWCETT'S SCHOOL.

The Pupils Show Careful Training and Well Developed Minds—A Large Attendance of Parents and Friends.

After the Christmas holidays are over, then the school children long for the summer vacation, and now to the pupils in Miss Fawcett's school and kindergarten, it is here.

The closing exercises were held at the Park club, last evening, before an admiring throng of parents and friends. At one end of the room the pupils were gathered together. They were:

Willer Ryder, Mary Neal, Helen Adams, Virginia Hegeman, Sadie Howell, Laura Osgood, Grace Osgood, Arthur Reed, Harold Hegeman, Joe Osgood, Ralph Hallock, Neal Compton, William Barlow, May D. Thompson, Alice Barlow, Jessie Hockridge, Nellie Hockridge, Elfleda Dunham, Genice Hanigan, Evelyn Lock, Blanche Heideloff, Sophie Barlow, Louise Saunders, Ray Hooley, Mabel Hooley, Margaret Townsend, Ruth VanVliet, Mary Barlow, Edith Taft, Frank Lock, Martin C. Fawcett, Regie Fawcett, Charlie Lyman, Raymond Lyman, Sam MacDonald.

Shortly after 7:30, the programme began with a march by the pupils and a concert recitation of Scripture. A prayer was next sung and the school sang the selection, "The Roll Call," Miss Blanche Hiedeloff singing the solo part. Miss Lillian A. Force acted as accompanist throughout the evening in her usual excellent manner.

Then followed the recitation "Jerry," by Miss Eugenia Hanigan, and the French recitation "Le ned de fauvette," by Miss Laura Osgood. "The Chicken," a laughable little dialogue, was rendered in a delightful way by Miss Ruth VanVliet and Miss Mabel Hooley.

The kindergarten next showed their friends some of their many games, many of which called forth the laughter and applause of the audience.

Miss Virginia Hegeman gave a French recitation "Pigeon vole," which was loudly encored. This was followed by "The Reason Why," by Miss Margaret Townsend.

Miss Blanche Hiedeloff next displayed her talent singing in the selection of "The Merry Brown Thrush."

A very graceful and beautiful wand drill was led by Miss Eugenia Hanigan, at the close of which Master Charles Lyman brought out an American flag while he recited "The Red, White and Blue" in his most impressive manner.

That humorous recitation, "The Owl," was next given by Miss May D. Thompson, one of the afternoon class. Miss Alice Barlow, another of the same class, gave a piano solo.

A dialogue entitled "The Record of the Hours" was most amusing. Harold Hegeman made a splendid "Father Time," while Miss Sophronia Barlow played her part well as "Day." The "Hours" were taken by the following:

Ray Hooley, Louise Saunders, Ruth Van Vliet, Blanche Heideloff, Mary Neal, Joe Osgood, Arthur Reed, Ralph Hallock, Neal Compton, William Barlow.

"Les lunettes" a French selection, was recited by Miss Eugenia Hanigan.

A French song, "Le chant de l' ecolier," was prettily sung by Misses Barlow and Hiedeloff, and Masters Hegeman and Bartow. A recitation, "Whose Afraid in the Dark," by Ralph Hallock, and other games of the kindergarten, were followed by the little dialogue, "Playing Grown Up", which was acted out by Miss Louise Saunders and Miss Ray Hooley in a manner that brought down the house.

The drill by the school formed a very pretty picture, with the little girls in their white gowns moving about before the more brilliant costumes of the audience.

The dainty story of "Little Christel" was told by Miss Sophronia Barlow, and after the song "Good Night" by the primary department the exercises came to an end.

The audience was then invited to examine some of the work of the children, which was on exhibition in an adjoining room. Here were a number of drawings made under the instruction of Mlle. Clara S. Hellwig, which, considering the age of the pupils, were exceedingly well done.

North Plainfield is to be congratulated in having Miss Fawcett's school within its limits. Miss Fawcett is assisted at her work of instructing the children by Miss J. V. Harriott, teacher in the English branches, Mlle. Cillier, French teacher, and Mlle. Hellwig, drawing teacher.

The school will reopen for the fall term on September 12th.

DEATH OF HORACE KIMBALL IN HIS NINETY-SECOND YEAR.

A Respected and Substantial Citizen—First Dentist to Recognize the Value of Sulphuric Ether As an Anesthetic.

By the death of Horace Kimball, which occurred this morning at his home on East Fifth street, this city loses one of its oldest, most respected and substantial citizens. Mr. Kimball was in his ninety-second year and had resided in Plainfield since 1871. Mr. Kimball was the son of James and Mary Esterbrook Kimball and was born in Newburyport, Mass., in 1804. He received his early education in that place, and afterwards entered Philips Academy at Andover, Mass., where he graduated in 1818. From that time up to 1830 he was engaged in business in Boston and New York, where he was successful. However, he had a natural inclination towards medicine, and in 1831 he left business to enter the Harvard Medical school, from which he graduated three years later. After leaving this school he studied dentistry with Dr. Flagg in Boston, and in 1836 he opened an office in Park place, New York. Eight years after he removed to Orange where he established a reputation that brought to him a large and lucrative practice.

He was the first dentist to recognize the value of sulphuric ether as an anesthetic, and administered it with much success for the elder Dr. Valentine Mott in a number of early operations.

Mr. Kimball leaves a wife, six sons and two daughters. The funeral will take place from his late residence on Thursday afternoon at half-past two o'clock.

The Flower Queen.

The cantata of the Flower Queen, to be given in Vincent chapel this evening, will prove a most enjoyable entertainment. The chorus has been brought to a very proficient state by means of thorough and hard drilling on the part of the director, Mrs. Metta Horton Cook, a graduate of the New England Conservatory, who has given this cantata in a number of New England cities. The price of admission has been placed at the low figure of twenty-five cents, and already a large number of tickets have been sold. As the entertainment will commence promptly at eight o'clock, and as there are no reserved seats it will be prudent to go early in order to secure more desirable seats. At the close of the concert refreshments will be served by the ladies at a moderate price.

Why the Dirt Was Carried Away.

It is explained that the cause of the scant watering of the abandoned trench on Watchung avenue was the shutting off the water from the mains by the Water Company, on account of the serious danger to the 8-inch water pipe in the trench.

After the new trench is filled, and before the stone is put on the old one, the latter will be well flooded, and any deficiency caused by hauling away too much dirt will be made good.

Industry in Westfield.

The Cooper Lamp Company Saturday morning filed articles of incorporation with the Clerk of Union county. The plant is to be located at Westfield and the company's capital is $75,000. The incorporators are Sherman Cooper and Enoch Richardson, of Westfield; Philip and Chas. E. Hathaway, of Bergen Point. The company will engage in the manufacture and sale of a lamp patented by Mr. Cooper, and will have a branch office in New York city.

Luscious Things to Eat.

"What is so rare as a day in June" especially if ice cream and strawberries are to be had, and the Christian Endeavor society of the Park Avenue Baptist church will give all a chance to enjoy them at their strawberry festival this evening. An entertaining programme has also been provided, the principal feature of which will be an amusing dialogue.

Second Organ Recital.

William MacClymont will give another one of his enjoyable organ recitals on Tuesday evening, June 26th, in the First Presbyterian church. Mr. Benson, a prominent basso, of Newark, will take part, and an effort is being made to secure Malcomb Barnes, the wonderful boy soloist, of New York.

Why of Course.

Every boroughite admits that Watchung avenue will be both a blessing and an improvement to the whole community when that much talked of thoroughfare is opened. The tide is steady. The road will be opened.

THE SWEET GIRL GRADUATES.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES AT THE CHESTNUTS.

Themes of the Graduates—Conferring of Diplomas—The Graduates Gowned in White, Carried Forget-Me-Nots.

The conferring of diplomas on the graduating class at the Plainfield Seminary took place yesterday afternoon when themes were read on subjects taken from English literature.

The hall was tastefully decorated with a back ground of screens, and roses and rhododendrons in the fore ground. The graduates wore dainty white dresses, with forget-me-nots, the class flower for their ornamentation.

The song was given by Miss Meredith, the Misses McCready and Miss Lulu Lewis, accompanied by Miss Genivere Daniels.

Miss Gertrude Haviland read a carefully written theme on "The Growth of Shakesperian Criticism," showing that from the scarcity of books and lack of general information, Shakespeare was illy appreciated for many years and unknown even in some parts of England. Through the influence of Voltain in France, Goethe in Germany and Ben Jonson and later writers in England, the criticism has become more just and the great writer's wonderful genius more fully appreciated.

Miss Mabelle Phillip's theme had for its subject the old English epic, "Beowulf," called by some "Our Genesis, the book of our origins." The combats between Beowulf and Grendel, Beowulf and Grendel's mother, and Beowulf and the Dragon, were told in a spirited manner, with some of the deep significations of the ancient poem.

Miss Marion Henderson's theme was "Patient Griseldas" and there was much that was humorous in her contrast of the modern advanced woman with the creation of Chaucer's patient heroine who swore never to contradict her husband. It was the writer's opinion that Petruchio found Katharine the more interesting woman. She closed with the hint that at some time in the future, writers might take for their theme that interesting subject, the patient man.

Miss Mary Whiton was excused from writing a theme on account of extra work required in preparation for college, and she read the theme of Miss Bertha McCullough Clark, who was absent because of the death of a relative. The subject was "Diaries in English Literature," and she gave extracts from the journals of Samuel Pepys, John Evelyn and Fanny Barney, showing that while they gave lively and truthful delineations of society, manners and the court, they depended on the personal detail and amusing experiences for much of their interest.

In a few well chosen words Miss Kenyon presented the diplomas to the girls just entering the greater University of Experience, when the lessons learned and the success attained would depend on themselves and their attitude to the centre of highest influence, the Sun of Righteousness.

A song by Miss Meredith, the Misses McCready, and Miss Lulu Lewis, closed the exercises.

The value of the seminary training cannot but be apparent on occasions like these when, with quiet dignity, the young girls take their parts so well, but the positions of some of the pupils in the colleges where they have gone, is the highest testimonial to the character of their instructions. Miss Rose Eleanor Mix, who was graduated last year, entered with high honors Cornell university, and the faculty of that institution decided that any graduate from the Plainfield Seminary should be admitted to their classes on the diploma received at graduation.

From Pa and Ma to the Baby.

The following is a cast of the characters that will take part in the entertainment to be given by the famous Smith Family in the First Presbyterian church Friday night:

Pa Smith	Harry Williams
Ma Smith	Bessie Blair
Uncle John	George O. Stevens
Aunt Jemima	Kate Overton
Sissy Smith	Edith Lane
Sonny Smith	John Petrie
Infant Prodigy	Lottie Messersmith
Baby Smith	Charles Hazeltine

Giving the Road a Good Start.

The trolley cars in Elizabeth on Sunday carried 15,000 passengers, 12,000 of whom paid fares and 3,000 transfers. It was the first Sunday of rapid transit, and as a result more than one third of the population of the city rode. The routes leading to the suburbs appeared to be the best patronized.

"THE PLAYERS" ORGANIZED.

ANOTHER CLUB TO ADD TO PLAINFIELD'S SOCIETY REPUTATION.

Large and Enthusiastic Meeting of Those Interested in Amateur Theatricals—Membership to Be Limited.

A large and enthusiastic meeting gathered at the Hillside Tennis Club last night in response to invitations sent out by a number of gentlemen who have become interested in forming a dramatic club in Plainfield. Little time was lost in empty discussion, for the meeting settled right down to business and accomplished a remarkable amount of work before it adjourned, including the adoption of a name and a constitution, the election of officers for the ensuing year, and the discussion of plans for the next season, 1895-'96.

Without going into the details of the constitution the general plan of the club may be told in few words. The membership, as in nearly all organizations of the kind, is divided into two classes: active members and subscribing members, both classes being represented in the management of the club, in committees and among the officers. The administration of the club is in the hands of two committees which are to be elected annually by the club at large. These committees are the governing committee of seven members and the dramatic committee of five members.

The dues from both classes of members are extremely moderate and include tickets for all performances given by the club, with the usual privileges of securing additional tickets.

It will be seen from the above that the performances are put on a strictly "club basis," and that only members or friends of members can secure tickets. It goes without saying that where the question of profits is put aside, performances can be given for which the tickets will be sold at a reasonable price, and that subscribers will get far more for their money than in the old charity performances.

Following a happy suggestion made by George Wharton Edwards, the name of "The Players" was adopted, and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Charles J. Fisk, Esq.; vice-president, George Wharton Edwards; secretary and treasurer, William M. Runyon; dramatic committee, the president, the secretary and treasurer, James Stowell Anthony, Mrs. Charles E. Brooks, and Mrs. George Wharton Edwards; governing commitee, the president, the secretary and treasurer, the chairman of the dramatic committee, W. R. Cock, H. G. Runkle, Rowland Cox, and S. St. John McCutchen.

Several of those who intended to be present, but who were kept away by one cause and another, sent their regrets and good wishes, together with the statement that they were "in for it" and were anxious to do everything they could to help the scheme.

It was proposed last night that as soon as the finances of the club warranted it a club room should be secured for meetings and in order to have some place to keep what library and properties that may accumulate.

The number of subscribing members has been limited, and it is confidently expected that the limit will be filled before the next season opens. With such a list of officers the club is sure to be firmly and well managed and to achieve the success it undoubtedly deserves.

FESTIVAL AT THE Y. M. C. A.

Profitable Affair For the Base Ball Team.

The members of the Y. M. C. A. base ball team conducted a successful strawberry and ice cream festival in the small hall of the building last evening. The boys were out in large numbers and their lady friends were also present, thus making the affair complete.

During the evening many called and assisted the team by partaking of the refreshments on sale. The festival was under the direction of physical director D. A. MacPhie, and to his skilful planning is due the success attained.

The young women assisting were: Mrs. A. C. Wyckoff, Miss Lillian Thorn, Miss Edith Hulbert, Miss Bertha Wheeler, Miss Livezy, Miss Lisa Livezy, Miss Williams, Miss Smith.

Cook & Co. Not Yet Finished.

Harry L. VanEmburgh made a final inspection yesterday of Cook & Co.'s work on the sewers. He found many places that need touching up in order to make the job first class. Mr. Prout, the representative of the contractors, is now in Jamestown, N. Y., but will return in a few days and complete his work.

BAD MEN, ACROSS THE WAY.

BOROUGH MARSHALS KEPT ON THE MOVE ON SUNDAY.

Young Men Who Enjoyed a Beer Party, a Poker Party and a Swimming Party Take Refuge on This Side.

There was plenty of business in the borough on Sunday and the marshals were kept on the hustle all day. In the morning Marshal J. Goodwin found several young men on Charles Hyde's property on Beekman street enjoying a box of beer and having a good time in general. Before he could reach them they crossed the brook and were just as well off as if they had been in Canada, so far as the powers of the marshal extended to arrest them.

In the afternoon Chief Marshal Van-Horn started a tramp, who was loafing about Giraud and Myrtle avenues, on the road and he left town.

From there he walked along Green brook and found several boys swimming without tights. Their clothes were on the Plainfield side of the brook and the chief was not able to catch them. However, his presence was sufficient to drive them from the water.

Further down stream near Grant avenue the chief discovered about twenty-five young men in a lot playing poker, evidently for money. They received warning enough to admit of their escape and none were caught. One of them is a well-known young man in the borough whose detection in a like manner on former occasions does not seem to have the desired effect of making him desist from his discreditable practices.

Attention, Mr. Postmaster.

A few months ago The Press called attention to the fact that although the post boxes in town were provided with receptacles for lists of times at which collections were made from individual boxes these lists had never been posted, and that anyone who consigned his letter to a box did so in great uncertainty as to how long it would stay there before being taken to the postoffice. Since that time these lists have been provided for every post box in town and some of them have been placed in position, but the boxes on the outskirts of the town where the lists are of far greater use than in the closely settled districts, have, with one or two exceptions, been left exactly as they were before. The Press is very glad to see them even on the main streets where they are very little needed, but when they are all ready for the other boxes why not have them up?

New Residence for Washington Park.

Geo. T. Rogers has purchased a building lot on Myrtle avenue, adjoining Councilman Peck's residence, and yesterday ground was broken for the erection of a dwelling which he will occupy. Seaman Williams has the contract for the masonry work. Charles H. Smith is the architect.

At Hymen's Altar.

Cards of invitation have been issued by Mr. and Mrs. Elias T. Day for the marriage of their daughter, Katharine Green, to William Hinckley Mitchell, on Monday evening, June 24th, at Calvary church, East Orange. Miss Day has many friends in Plainfield.

Gin Mills Galore.

There will be eighty-one applications for liquor licenses to come up for consideration when the Common Council organizes in New Brunswick. Most of these applications are made for the renewal of licenses which expired on June 1st. According to a ruling of the City Attorney, all saloon keepers who have deposited $250 with the City Clerk, and have filed the proper petitions, signed by twelve freeholders shall be permitted to sell until such time as the Common Council shall dispose of their cases. Samuel S. Scheuer & Sons, the Burnet street grocers, have made another application.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mrs. Thos. Eggers, 139 Florida St., San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result everything else, then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottle at Randolph's drug store. Regular size, 50c and $1.

TO WATCH FILIBUSTERS

The Raleigh Ordered To Florida Waters.

Efforts To Prevent Expeditions from Leaving This Country — More Troops for Cuba—An Engagement With Rebels Under Maceo—Coast Vessel Fired Upon.

Washington, June 11.—Officials of the state and navy departments are considering the advisability of sending a war ship to guard the Florida coast to prevent filibustering expeditions from leaving the United States for Cuba, but an embarrassing question has arisen to prevent immediate action. By ordering a vessel to guard that part of the coast line, it is feared this government may place itself in the position of being held responsible by Spain for neglect in not having done so before. Such action it is contended would be a virtual acknowledgment that the United States have failed to do their duty toward the Spanish government, with which they are in friendly relations.

Embarrassment Might Result.

It is also feared that even if Spain should waive the right to claim damages for previous neglect by this country, embarrassment would likely arise if any filibustering expeditions succeeded in evading the patrol.

Raleigh Ordered to Florida Waters.

That was the situation last evening, but Secretary Herbert has settled all doubt as to the course to be taken by this government by issuing orders to the Raleigh to proceed at once to Key West, Fla. She will be retained there to watch filibusterers and see that no more expeditions leave this country for Cuba with contrabands or men for the insurgents.

More Troops for Cuba.

Madrid, June 11.—The war officer announces that the reinforcements of ten battalions of infantry and other troops intended for the island of Cuba will leave Spain on next Monday, June 17.

Brush With Maceo.

Havana, June 11.—Capt. Gen. Martinez de Campos left this city last night for the province of Puerto Principe. Colonel Canellas, in cammand of a detachment of troops, has had an engagement with a band of insurgents at Sebarruco de Cuba, cammanded by Jose Maceo. On the side of the troops Lieut. Nieto and two soldiers were wounded. The insurgents had seven wounded.

Fired Upon a Coast Vessel.

The insurgents have fired upon a coast guard vessel which was watching the coast between Punta Corda and Savanilla de Matanzas. One volunteer was killed and one was wounded.

MAY LEAVE THIS EVENING.

Everything Ready for Mr. Cleveland's Departure for Buzzard's Bay.

Washington, June 11.—President Cleveland may leave this evening after the cabinet meeting to join his family at Gray Gables, Buzzard's Bay. Every arrangement has been made for his departure when he sees fit to take it. Several important matters, however, including appointments to offices in the District of Columbia, demand his attention, and he may delay leaving until he has disposed of these. Mrs. Thurber, wife of the president's private secretary, left Washington yesterday with her family to join Mrs. Cleveland for the summer. Mrs. Thurber will occupy the Thurber cottage at Marion, near Buzzard's Bay.

HOT WAVE AT ST. LOUIS.

For Several Hours the Mercury Fluctuates Between 102 and 98.

St. Louis, Mo., June 11.—A torrid wave swept over this section yesterday. At 9 a. m., street thermometers registered 83 degrees. At noon 91 degrees was reached. At 1 o'clock this afternoon the thermometer had mounted to 97, and at 3 o'clock the mercury had climed the bulb to the 100 mark. At this point the indicator in the tube fluctuated between 102 and 98 degrees, and at 6 p. m., the bulb registered 99 degrees. This has been the hottest day of the year so far.

SEVERE RAINS IN MINNESOTA.

Great Damage to Railroads and Other Property One Drowned.

St. Paul, Minn., June 11.—A severe rain storm prevailed over the southern half of Minnesota Sunday, doing great damage by washing out railroad tracks. Two bridges were swept away in Stearns county. In St. Paul the downpour caused the roof of the Selby avenue cable power house to cave in, but nobody was under it. On lake Bypher a boat capsized, throwing three men into the lake. One of them, Henry Schneider, aged 30, was drowned.

Our War Ships at Copenhagen.

Washington, June 11.—Admiral Kirkland has notified the navy department that the cruiser New York has just joined the San Francisco and Columbia at Copenhagen. The Columbia and New York left Southampton together and the triple-screw cruiser arrived at Copenhagen about five hours ahead of her consort in a run of about 800 miles.

Proposed International Games.

London, June 11.—Secretary Fitzherbert, of the Cambridge Athletic union, states that nothing further is to be said at present relative to the proposed international inter-university games. He is awaiting a reply from America, which is expected in a few days.

Another Earthquake at Trieste.

Trieste, June 11.—The population of this city was thrown into a panic yesterday morning by two severe earthquake shocks. The people rushed in terror to the streets and camped out until the panic subsided. No damage, however, was done.

Czar Inspects His Warships.

Cronstadt, June 11.—The czar, who is in this city, yesterday inspected the Russian warships that will take part in the opening of the North Sea-Baltic canal.

Georgia's Peach Carnival.

Macon, Ga., June 11.—The management of the Georgia Peach carnival is making extensive preparations for a practical exhibit.

EXERCISES AT WEST POINT.

Heavy Artillery Drill and Exhibition of Military Pyrotechnics.

West Point, N. Y., June 11.—There was a heavy artillery drill at the sea coast battery at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The battery was manned by members of the third class, with chiefs of detachments from the first class. Cadet Roberts was the gunner of No. 2. It is a 15-inch, smooth bore, weighs 22 tons, requires 40 pounds of mammoth powder and carries a solid round shot of 450 pounds. The other four gunners were Cadets Smither, Cheney, Bowley and Newbill. Their guns were 8-inch converted rifles, weighing seven tons each. They were charged with twenty-five pounds of hexagonal powder, and the shot, which is known as "Butler cored," weighs 180 pounds.

Smaller Than Service Charges.

The charges for the guns were much smaller than service charges on account of the danger from fragments of shell. The target was placed at two degrees' elevation above the battery and the range for the guns was 2,100 yards. The diameter of the bullseye is five feet. Not a shot struck the circle at yesterday's drill, although last year four bullseyes were made. The drill was under the command of Lieutenant Holbrook. At 8 o'clock in the evening there was an exhibition drill of siege mortars and military pyrotechnics.

ZIMMERMAN WILL NOT RACE.

Is in No Condition and Johnson Can Have the Championship.

Ilion, N. Y., June 11.—A. C. Batchelder, the official handicapper of the L. N. W., for New York state, telegraphs the following special: "Judging from what Zimmerman said last night there will be no series between himself and Johnson. Grand Rapids offered a $2,500 purse for a heat race, and Kirk Park of Syracuse raised the figure to $3,000. Johnson was willing to accept either offer and also furnish a side bet of $1,000. When asked about the matter Zimmerman said: 'The truth is that I do not want to do any racing before going to Australia. I am far from being in condition, and can just about ride fast enough to keep in ordinary condition. No matter how large a purse might be offered it would not tempt me to change my mind. Nevertheless, I would accommodate Johnson if he supplied a side bet of $5,000. If he wants to claim the professional championship of the world he can do so. I never claimed to hold it and he is free to take it.'"

EMMETT UNDER $2,000 BAIL.

Affectionate Scene with His Wife After He Took the Pledge.

San Francisco, June 11.—There was an affectionate scene between actor J. K. Emmett and his wife after the former was released on $2,000 bail yesterday. He has taken the pledge and says he will never drink again. Mrs. Emmett is out of danger.

Both Are Blamed.

According to friend's story Mrs. Emmett has lived extravagantly, and Emmett now has little ready money. It is said his most intimate friends were not at all surprised that he tried to take the life of his wife. Other friends take an opposite view, and say the fault is on Emmett's side; that he abused his wife, and that when drinking the actor was unbearable.

SURVEYORS NOT KILLED.

False Report About a Party Having Been Murdered by Indians.

Washington, June 11.—The report [illegible] a New York newspaper [illegible] of government surveyors [illegible] Chickasaw Indians near [illegible] Indian territory, last Wednesday, is incorrect. A dispatch has been received at the geographical survey office from Bannett, chief typographer [illegible], stating that there was no truth in the reports of a massacre. [illegible] has ten parties of about ten men each at work in the Indian territory subdividing the lands of the Chickasaw nation. It is said that the Indians know that the work is for their benefit and give the best of treatment to the surveyors.

DEFENDS THE LEGISLATURE.

New York Republican Committee Issue a Statement.

New York, June 11.—The republican state committee sent out last night a long statement in defense of the recent legislature. It is in the form of an address to the republican voters of the state. It says that so much has been said in criticism of the legislature that has been misleading that it is deemed advisable to call the attention of the people of the state to the true facts in connection with the matter.

Second Trial of Capt. Howgate.

Washington, June 11.—The trial of Capt. Henry W. Howgate on two indictments charging forgery and falsification of accounts while disbursing officer of the signal service in 1879, was begun yesterday. The day was consumed in obtaining a jury and making the opening speeches.

Seminary Destroyed by Lightning.

Emporia, Kans., June 11.—The Neosho Rapids seminary building was struck by lightning about noon yesterday and burned to the ground. The building was a three-story brick and belonged to the free methodists. It cost $15,000 and was insured for $3,000.

Congressman Hitt Improving.

Washington, June 11.—Congressman man Hitt, of Illinois, continues to steadily improve. He sat up for some time to-day, but has not recovered sufficiently to leave his room. Miss Abigail Dodge, who had a bad night, was resting easy this morning.

American Bishops at Rome.

Rome June 11.—There is at present an unusually large number of American bishops in this city. Among these now here are the bishops of Detroit, Brooklyn, Omaha, Syracuse, Davenport and Harrisburg.

McLaughlin Dropped from the Rolls.

New York, June 11.—Wm. W. McLaughlin, the convicted police inspector now locked up in Tombs cell, has been formally dropped from the rolls by the police commissioners.

Rosebery Returns to London.

London, June 11.—Minister Rosebery has returned from his yachting trip and is now in London. A cabinet council will be held to-day.

OLNEY TAKES THE OATH

Sworn in as Secretary of State.

The Oath Administered at the State Department by Chief Justice Fuller—Judge Harmon Arrives This Morning from Cincinnati and Will Qualify This Afternoon.

Washington, June 11.—Mr. Olney became secretary of state yesterday, succeeding Walter Q. Gresham. Chief Justice Fuller, who had come to Washington from Richmond, administered the oath of office to the new secretary in the diplomatic room at the state department. Mr. Olney came alone to the state department, and after a few minutes conversation with Mr. Landis, private secretary to the late Secretary Gresham, he was joined by assistant secretaries Uhl, Adee and Rockhill, and received their congratulations.

The Oath Administered.

After waiting half an hour, Chief Justice Fuller appeared, accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. Aubrey. Secretary Lamont also came over from the war department and the party which had been chatting in the secretary's office, repaired to the diplomatic room adjoining and the oath was administered to Mr. Olney. The secretary then received the bureau chiefs of the state deparament and settled down at once to the routine of his office.

JUDGE HARMON ARRIVES.

He Will Qualify as Attorney General This Afternoon.

Washington, June 11.—Judge Judson Harmon arrived this morning to qualify this afternoon as attorney general of the United States. He will live at the Arlington.

HAWAII'S NEW MINISTER.

Wm. B. Castle Will Be Sent to Washington in August.

Honolulu, June 3 via San Francisco, June 11.—The Hawaiian government has commissioned William B. Castle as its minister to Washington. The announcement of Mr. Castle's appointment by steamer Monwai sailing from here on May 31 was premature, as the appointment was not made until the following day.

Will Not Remain Long.

Mr. Castle will proceed to his post in August with his family. On account of business interests here he does not expect to occupy the position for any length of time. He was the second member of the commission, of which Thurston was the head, which negotiated the treaty of annexation with President Harrison in February, 1893.

Quiet Regarding Mr. Thurston.

The government desires to avoid giving any needless irritation. It has, therefore, refrained from discussing Mr. Thurston's course. It is not therefore to be interpreted as censuring him, on the contrary, it is deeply sensible of Mr. Thurston's great fidelity and ability in his support at a critical period in December, 1893, as well as on many other occasions when he was obliged to assume an attitude necessarily unpleasant to the Washington administration.

For a Cable to Honolulu.

Hon. Audley Coote, of Australia, is here. He intended to go to Washington, but will defer that visit until near the opening session of congress. He represents the Pacific Cable company which laid the first link of a thousand miles to New Caledonia. Mr. Coote is prepared to lay a proposed cable from Monterey to Honolulu, to be owned by the United States government if desired, or otherwise, subject to their control. His intention is then to proceed with a line to Japan and another to Australia.

25 KILLED; MANY WOUNDED.

Rebels Defeated in an Attack on the Capital of Corrientes.

London, June 11.—A dispatch of the Central News from Buenos Ayres says that a revolt has broken out in the province of Corrientes. The rebels attacked San Juan de Corrientes, the capital of the province, yesterday, but were repulsed with a loss of twenty-five killed and many wounded. The leaders of the attacking force were captured.

360 MAY BE DEAD.

Terrible Disaster in the Segingoltes Mine Near Breslau.

Breslau, June 11.—The Segingoltes mine, belonging to Count von Donnersmark, is on fire. Of the 400 miners at work when the fire broke out only forty reached the surface in safety. The fate of the others is not known as this dispatch is sent, but a terrible disaster is apprehended.

Young Girl Abducted.

Pana, Ill., June 11.—Ethel Hartsock, the 15-year-old daughter of L. M. Hartsock, a miller at Nokomis, nine miles west of here, was abducted Saturday night by Pat Downey, Fred Murray and Alfred Goist, three young men of this city. The girl is very handsome and bore a good reputation.

League Games Yesterday.

At New York—New York, 5; Chicago, 4. At Brooklyn—Brooklyn, 4; Pittsburg, 0. At Boston—Boston, 9; Louisville, 5. At Philadelphia—Philadelphia, 7; Cleveland, 0. At Baltimore—Baltimore, 13; Cincinnati, 4. At Washington—Washington, 3; St. Louis, 2 (ten innings).

A Niece of Gen. Schofield Weds.

Freeport, Ill., June 11.—Mrs. H. W. Andress, daughter of J. H. Wise, was married yesterday to William J. Bigelow, of Chicago. The bride is a niece of Gen. John M. Schofield, of the United States army.

Comment on Niagara's Performance.

London, June 11.—The Times in its comment on the Niagara's performance says that she is not above mediocrity. She is not as good as the Audrey.

New 300-Yard Record.

Glasgow, June 11.—Downer yesterday ran 300 yards in 31 2-5 seconds, beating Bredin. This is claimed to be the world's record for the distance.

To Strengthen Russian Forces.

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the following Ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same.

JAMES T. MACMURRAY, City Clerk.
Plainfield, N. J., June 3, 1895.

A further ordinance to provide for the construction of a system of sewerage.

Whereas, pursuant to the provisions of the act of the Legislature entitled "An act to provide for sewerage and drainage in cities of this State," approved April 7, 1892, and of an ordinance of said city, duly passed pursuant to said act, entitled "An ordinance to provide for the construction of a system of sewerage" approved July 25, 1894, the Common Council hath ascertained and determined and doth hereby ascertain, adjudge and determine to acquire by purchase or condemnation certain land within said city, needed for sewerage purposes, and said Common Council hath deemed it expedient and doth hereby ascertain, adjudge and determine that it is expedient to collect the sewage of said city from sewers constructed under the said act of the Legislature, and to utilize and dispose of the same by its application to land by the method of intermitent downward filtration and broad surface irrigation, and to erect all necessary buildings, works and machinery thereon, and to take and appropriate for said purposes the lands and real estate hereinafter specified, the Common Council having ascertained, adjudged and determined and hereby do ascertain, adjudge and determine that the whole of said lands and real estate is necessary for said purposes, upon making compensation to the owner or owners, as in said act of the Legislature provided, and said Common Council hath deemed it necessary and doth hereby ascertain, adjudge and determine that it is necessary to take and appropriate for such purposes the said lands and real estate in order to effectually construct said system of sewerage pursuant to said act of the Legislature and said ordinance;

And, whereas, the Common Council having duly investigated the premises and considered the same, is of the opinion that the public good requires the construction of said system of sewerage, and particularly the adoption of said plan of sewage disposal, and the taking and appropriation of said lands as authorized by said act of the Legislature, and the Common Council hath so determined, and doth hereby so determine;

The inhabitants of the City of Plainfield by their Common Council do enact as follows:

Sec. 1. That the Common Council doth hereby direct and order that the plan of sewage disposal above specified be and the same is hereby adopted, in connection with the ordinance aforesaid, and that the land hereinafter specified being needed for said sewerage purposes, and the Common Council deeming it necessary to take and appropriate the same for such purposes, be taken and appropriated for the purposes aforesaid, pursuant to the provisions of said act of the Legislature upon making compensation to the owner or owners thereof, as in said act provided, that is to say; the first tract now owned by Letitia S. Penfield, is described as follows, butted and bounded as follows: The first lot lies in Plainfield township (now city) Union county, and begins at a stake near the middle of Greenbrook a little west of the bridge and runs South twenty-six and three-quarter degrees East five chains and sixty-seven links to a stone in the road (Rock avenue); thence South seventy-one and a quarter degrees West two chains and ninety-five links; thence South seventeen degrees East six chains and twenty-four links to a stone, thence North seventy and three quarter degrees East three chains and thirty-six links to a stone in the aforesaid road, thence with said road South sixteen and a half degrees East three chains and seven links to a stone, thence still with said road South twenty-six and a half degrees East thirteen chains and ninety links to the centre of North street (now West Front street), thence with the middle of said North street North fifty seven degrees East six chains and thirty-eight links to a stake, thence North twenty-five degrees West twenty-four chains and eight links to a stake in Greenbrook; thence down said brook the various courses thereof to the place of beginning, containing sixteen acres and eighty-five hundredths of land be the same more or less

Being the same tract the undivided one-half of which was conveyed to George Smock by deed of Isaac V. Brokaw and wife, dated September 6, 1869, and recorded in Union county Clerk's office in Book 39 of Deeds for said County, on pages 562, etc., and therein described as the first lot and being the property shown in blue on map filed with the City Clerk May 20, 1895, entitled "Map showing land proposed to be taken and appropriated for sewerage purposes, Plainfield, N. J., May, 1895."

The second tract now owned by the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York is described as follows: Beginning at a point in Greenbrook, being the westerly corner of the tract first above described, thence along the line of said property and in Rock avenue South twenty-five degrees thirty minutes East five chains and sixty-seven links to the corner of said first tract; thence South seventy-one degrees ten minutes West two chains and ninety-five links to another corner of said tract; thence South seventeen degrees East six chains and twenty-four links to another corner of said tract; thence North seventy degrees and thirty-seven minutes East three chains and thirty-six links to another corner of said tract, said point being in Rock avenue; thence still along said tract in Rock avenue South sixteen degrees and twenty-seven minutes East three chains and seven links; thence still along said tract in Rock avenue South twenty-five degrees fifty-five minutes East, thirteen chains and ninety links to the centre of West Front street; thence along said centre line of West Front street in a southwesterly direction eight hundred feet more or less to the easterly corner of property owned by —— Milliken; thence along property of said Milliken and others North twenty-five degrees and forty-five minutes West two thousand feet more or less to the middle of Greenbrook; thence in a northeasterly direction along Greenbrook following the various courses of the same eight hundred and fifty feet more or less to the place of beginning. Said second tract being all the property lying northwesterly of West Front street described in the two deeds from Seth B. Ryder, sheriff, and Thomas Forsyth, sheriff, respectively, to the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, one dated October 7, 1881, and recorded in the Union County Clerk's office in Book 151 of Deeds for said county, on pages 362, etc., and the other dated April 16, 1883, and recorded in Union County Clerk's office in Book 163 of Deeds for said county, on pages 325, etc., excepting therefrom a small irregular tract of about two hundred feet frontage on West Front street heretofore sold by said Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York to —— —— Milliken, and said second tract being also shown colored in red on the map before mentioned filed with the City Clerk May 20, 1895.

COCHRAN WILL LIVE

Ohl, However, in Danger of Blood Poisoning.

The Wounded Princeton Students Resting Quietly in the College Infirmary—Accounts of What Led to the Shooting Are Contradictory. Were the Boys on a Lark?

Princeton, N. J., June 11.—Garret Cochran and Fred Ohl, the two freshmen of Princeton college and well-known football players, who were shot late Saturday night by a negro named Collins, pased the night well, and this morning were reported to be resting easily. The wounded athletes are at the infirmary, under the care of a staff of eminent surgeons.

Ohl in the Most Danger.

Ohl was the most seriously wounded. The attending physicians are hopeful of his recovery if blood poisoning does not set in. Cochran, the physicians said, is doing nicely and his recovery is only a question of time. Ohl is still suffering from shock. The wounded men are being kept very quiet, and some of their intimate college mates who called at the hospital to-day were not allowed to see them.

Statements Differ.

Contradictory statements are made as to the condition of the two students at the time they met the negro Collins and his companion, Steve Downs, and quarrelled with them. At the college it is denied that either Ohl or Cochran was under the influence of liquor. It is also denied that the students attacked the negroes with clubs. Ohl and Cochran are blamed for not avoiding Collins and Downs when they had a chance to do so.

Probably Out on a Lark.

There is a report that Ohl and Cochran were out on a lark and in a quarrelsome mood. It is generally believed that Collins fired all the shots and that Downs was merely in his company.

THE NEW CELLULOSE.

A Test of the Product Given at Indian Head Yesterday.

Washington, June 11.—Test trials were made yesterday afternoon at Indian Head proving grounds to determine the relative value of the new cellulose as compared with the product now in use by this government. The new cellulose is made from the pitch of corn stalks by a process, the inventiou of an American, and the old article is made of cocoa fibres. Cellulose on account of its great compressibility and other necessary characteristics is used in war ships to prevent leaks through holes made below the water line. The only tests conducted yesterday were the firing tests, the result being that the new cellulose proved slightly superior to the old article. On the result of the trials depends the kind of cellulose to be used by this government in the future.

THE INNOCENT MEN SUE.

Sent to Prison Falsely, Henry and Shannon Seek Damages.

New York, June 11.—Lawyer Reiser has instituted suit against the state for $.00,000 damages, and against William B. Ackerman for $100,000 on behalf of John Henry and Patrick Shannon, who were confined in the penitentiary from Aug. 17, 1894, until June 7 last. Henry and Shannon were proved to be guiltless of robbing Ackerman, who upon their trial positively identified them as two burglars who entered his house a short time previously. It is probable that the suit against the state will not be brought to trial, as the state board of claims undoubtedly will award damages in a sufficient amount to satisfy the men. It is expected that the state will give them about $10,000 each. The suit against Ackerman, who is reported to be wealthy, will be pushed. It will be for damages for false identification.

SILVER QUESTION IN KANSAS.

Results of a Canvass of Republican Newspapers.

Topeka, June 11.—A local paper has made a canvass of the republican papers of Kansas to ascertain how many favor the free and unlimited coinage of silver. Out of 102 papers 17 are for free and unlimited coinage of silver at 16 to 1, while 85 stand squarely on the money plank in the last republican national platform. Politicians who claim to know say this is about the way the sentiment runs in the republican party in the state.

Cornell Crew in Fine Form.

London, June 11. Sporting Life will to-morrow publish an interview with Charles S. Courtney, coach of the Cornell crew. He says that the men are very well indeed. They seemed stuffed up on the first day, but this has now worn off. What is called hot weather here just suits the Americans. English food suits them capitally. Mr. Courtney adds that it must be remembered that the men will row against the watch for ten days or a fortnight.

Yale Baseball Association.

New Haven, Conn., June 11.—The following officers of the Yale Baseball association were last night elected for the coming year: President and manager, W. S. Miller, Chicago; vice-president, Frank C. Vetoed by Gov. Altgeld.

Springfield, Ill., June 11.—Gov. Altgeld, has vetoed the Crawford corporation consolidation bill. The bill provided for the consolidation of any number of corporations organized for the same or similar general purposes.

MURDER OF LIZZIE COLEMAN.

Litkey Was Enraged Because His Presents Were Not Returned.

Hyannis, Mass., June 11.—The quiet village of Osterville was greatly excited yesterday by the murder of Lizzie Coleman, 13 years of age, while on her way to school, by a German laborer named Henry Litkey, who afterward committed suicide by shooting. Litkey was a married man with a wife and three children in Germany and has been employed on the farm of Mrs. S. Leonard more or less of the time for the last six years. He was steady and honest and a faithful laborer. For the last six months he has been infatuated with the Coleman girl and has spent considerable of his spare time at the house of Mr. Coleman. His infatuation was not noticed by the family of the girl until recently, when her parents forbade his coming to the house.

Wanted His Presents Returned.

He made the girl various presents at different times, also made a present to the mother. After his visits were forbidden he wanted the presents that he had made to the girl and her mother returned, which they refused to do, and that was what incited him to commit the terrible deed. He went repeatedly for the presents, but they refused to return them.

Shot at the Boys First.

The girl with her two brothers started for school about 8:30. Litkey was in the habit of meeting her on the way to school for the purpose of speaking with her, and often intercepted her on her way home. He fired two shots at one of the boys, missing him, then asked him what he had to say about turning him out of doors. Then Litkey turned to the girl and shot her twice, the first time through the mouth, the second shot taking effect in the back of her head or neck. He immediately turned the weapon upon himself, the ball passing through his head. Both probably died instantly.

TO ENTER THE LECTURE FIELD.

Senator Gordon Announces His Intention of Retiring from Politics.

Reynolds, Ga., June 11.—The following is the text of the letter written by Senator Gordon, addressed to "My personal friends and political friends in Georgia," announcing his intended withdrawal from public life at the end of his present term as United States senator:

Will Drop Politics.

"The many inquiries made to me as to my candidacy for the senate at the next election would seem to justify some public announcement of my purpose. For more than a year past my determination to retire from official life at the close of my present term of service, has been known to many personal friends, and the statement that I shall not be a candidate for re-election seems now due to all who may feel an interest in the subject.

To Return to Private Life.

"I shall return to private life, with nothing but good will for all my countrymen—for those from whose opinions and policies I have felt it my duty to dissent, as well as for the devoted friends, who, in all contests, have been my earnest and constant advocates. I shall retire with profoundest gratitude to that generous people, who have so long trusted me and who have denied me no honors within their gift.

To Enter the Lecture Field.

"In resuming the station of private citizen I shall still feel the deepest interest in the political and material welfare of our state, and in all efforts to promote the prosperity and unity of the whole country." It is understood that Senator Gordon intends to take to the lecture field.

BANKERS INDICTED.

Statute of Limitation, However, May Free the Men.

Lancaster, Pa., June 11.—The grand jury has returned twenty true bills for embezzlement against E. K. Smith and C. E. Graybill, the former Columbia, Pa., bankers. Counsel for the defense filed reasons to quash the indictments, alleging the illegality of the present grand jury, and the argument will come up to-day. If these indictments should be set aside the accused will escape, as further prosecution will be barred by the statute of limitation.

HIS HEALTH WILL NOT PERMIT.

Bismarck Unable To Attend the Kiel Fetes.

Berlin, June 11.—Prince Bismarck has written to the Hamburg senate saying that he regrets that his health is such as to prevent him from accepting the invitation extended to him by the senate to attend the opening of the North Sea-Baltic canal.

New Government Department.

Washington, June 11.—Minister Ewing informs the deparment of state that a new department—the ministry of industry and labor—has been created in Belgium and Mr. Nissens, a member of parliament for Lourain, has been appointed to direct the office.

Heavy Rains in the West.

St. Louis, June 11.—Telegrams received here from points in Kansas, Indian territory and western Missouri report heavy and continuous rains.

THE TREASURY DEFICIT

Believed That It Will Soon Be Wiped Out.

Receipts Partaking of the General Business Revival, and They May Exceed Expenditures by the Last of June — Articles Formerly in Stock Now Nearly Exhausted.

Washington, June 11.—The treasury receipts are partaking of the general business revival and, while they do not quite reach to the point of equalling the expenditures, are getting nearer striking an even balance each day. For the ten days of June the receipts have aggregated $8,435,000, or $1,000,000 a day, Sundays excluded, and the expenditures have been $10,004,000, or only $1,569,000 in excess of receipts.

Deficit Will Be Reduced.

This deficit will by wiped out before many days and the end of June is likely to show for the month an excess of two or three millions of dollars receipts over expenditures, a condition not reached in any one month for several years by the treasury. The deficit for the year which now stands at $48,326,000 will be reduced to $45,000,000 or below by June 30.

Business Adjusting Itself.

This turn in affairs in the treasury condition is accounted for by the fact that business is adjusting itself to tariff conditions and that large revenue is now being received from articles that heretofore yielded little as they were in "stock." This is notably the case as regards sugar, which had been imported free under the former tariff law. The free stock is now exhausted and imports have been resumed.

Internal Revenue Receipts.

The large quantity of whiskey taken out of bond to escape the increased tax of twenty cents a gallon, is now nearly or completely consumed and new whiskey is being taken out of bond to supply the consumptive demand. The increase in internal revenue receipts shows this plainly.

Receipts Still Too Small.

With all the principal lines of business adjusting themselves to the present tariff conditions and with an increased volume of business apparent, still the revenues of the government are not quite sufficient to meet fixed expenditures. The increased revenue of $40,000,000 or $50,000,000 provided by the senate over the house tariff act, principally on the items of sugar, iron ore and coal, makes the deficit just so much less, but leaves the treasury still short by about twenty-five or thirty million dollars a year of equalling expenditures. This will have to be provided for by the next congress.

RETRIAL DENIED.

Mrs. Hart Again Defeated in Her Efforts To Break Her Father's Will.

Middletown, Conn., June 11. — For several years Mrs. Geo. S. Hart of Brooklyn, N. Y., has been seeking to break the will of the late Erasmus Brainerd, her father, of Portland, claiming that her brother Leroy, the executor, exercised undue influence, thereby causing her to be left out of the will. The lower court and superior court decided in favor of the executor. She then moved for a retrial, claiming the discovery of new evidence. Leroy, through his attorney, demurred, claiming that such new evidence was known to her when the case was first tried and should have been introduced then. Judge Shumway of the superior court sustained the demurrer. She may appeal to the supreme court. About half a million is involved in the suit and leading lawyers of the state have been counsel on one side or the other during the five years it has been in the courts.

AFTER A YEAR UNDER WATER.

Tons of Iron Pipe To Be Removed from a Sunken Schooner.

Boston, June 11.—Capt. Sorensen and crew has left with a lighter for the wreck of the schooner Mary A. Hood, which went ashore off Strawberry Hill more than a year ago. They will remove the 125 tons of 22-inch iron water-main pipe which is still on board. More than seventy-five tons of pipe were removed some time ago. The pipe will be reshipped to the McNeil Pipe & Iron Foundry company, Burlington, N. J., the original manufacturers.

DEATH OF SIGNOR FERRARI.

Victim of the Assault at Rimini, Following His Election.

Rome, June 11.—A despatch received here from Rimini announces that Signor Ferrari, who was recently elected a member of the chamber of deputies, defeating the socialist candidate in his district, and who was shot by unknown men during a dispute on June 3, is dead.

Iowa To Be a Flagship.

Washington, June 11.—Secretary Herbert has ordered the battleship Iowa fitted as a flagship. This vessel, which is still on the stocks at Cramps in Philadelphia, will not be ready for sea in less than two years, when she will carry the flag of an admiral cammanding the North Atlantic squadron.

Ericsson Takes a Short Spin.

New London, Conn., June 11.—The torpedo boat Ericsson had a preliminary run for a short distance into Long Island sound yesterday, dut did not go more than fifteen or twenty miles before she ran into so much fog that it was deemed best to return. She has been overhauled thoroughly.

To Colonize Negroes in Brazil.

St. Louis, Mo., Matther Lancaster, an intelligent and well educated negro has been quietly corresponding for some months with persons controlling large tracts of land in Brazil and to-day announced his purpose of colonizing American negroes upon these lands.

Potters Threaten To Strike.

Trenton, N. J., June 11.—Five hundred sanitaryware potters left off work yesterday to attend a secret meeting and discuss the wage question. The men will demand the increase and threaten to strike if the concession is not promptly made.

Extend the trolley road.

The census returns show that the population of Newark is about 210,000.

Give a dog a bad name, and if he takes to writing society novels he will make a fortune.—Evening Sun.

Elizabeth people seem to have gone trolley mad. On Snnday the newly newly opened road carried 15,000 passengers.

Today is the day set for testing the constitutionality of the Elective Judiciary law passed by the Legislature last winter.

"I am not and will not be a Presidential candidate," says William C. Whitney. Mr. Whitney evidently intends to enjoy life.

The Daily Press extends congratulations to "The Players," and trusts that a prosperous career looms up before them in amateur histrionic circles.

Next Friday is the anniversary of the day on which Congress adopted the Stars and Stripes as the National emblem. Patriotic citizens should display the flag on this occasion above all others.

New Brunswick with 20,000 population has eighty-one applicants for liquor licenses, the most of which will be granted. Plainfield and North Plainfield, with an equal number of people, have eighteen licensed places. There is some little difference.

New Jersey won the great tri-State relay race and New York Times medals on Saturday last. When it comes to bicycling New Jersey has thus far beaten the world. New Jersey is a State that doesn't take the dust from anybody's heels—Elizabeth Journal.

New Jersey has been allotted $1,963.64 for her naval militia, consisting of 216 men. This is in accordance with the act approved July 26th, 1894, making appropriation of $25,000 for naval militia to be allotted to the various States after deducting $500 for books.

Boston is noted for its culture, but with a few more organizations like the Woman's Rescue League, who have declared and resolved against the bicycle woman, it will become noted for its crankism. The Press desires to state that wheelwoman is all right, even if she does wear bloomers.

Governor Werts yesterday vetoed the bills which aimed to break the deadlock in the New Brunswick common council. With reference to these bills the Governor says the legislation was purely partisan, and therefore he cannot allow the bills to become laws. Aside from this point of view and admitting, for the sake of argument, that no partisan ends would have been gained by the enactment of the proposed laws, the bills should have been vetoed just the same. The tendency among the people of today to appeal to the Legislature for the passage of what they themselves admit must be temporary laws for the correction of every municipal abuse, is in the wrong direction and contrary to the fundamental intentions of the constitution. When such methods as these are invoked by the people, who are themselves primarily to blame for the abuses that exist, it must eventually prove disastrous to the communities for whom the laws are effected. In the end New Brunswick will be better off than if the bills had become laws.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Bert Heinrichs is out again after a severe illness.

Miss Sadie Giles is on a week's visit to Warrenville.

James E. Martine went to Trenton last night on business.

Will Cadmus, of Brooklyn, greeted Plainfield friends yesterday.

Miss Mattie MacMurray, a sister of City Clerk James MacMurray, will assist. Those who will attend from Plainfield are: City Clerk and Mrs. James MacMurray, Mr. and Mrs. Seaman Williams, Miss Minnie Williams, and Mrs. M. F. Elderton.

A Mammoth Strawberry.

Nicholas Messerschmitt, of 80 Jackson avenue, called at the Press office this morning and left a mammoth strawberry, which measures 6¼ inches in circumference. It was grown in Mr. Messerschmitt's garden, and is the largest to which the attention of the Press has been called this season.

Long Been Needed.

A new clock dial has been purchased and is expected daily to arrive for attachment to the borough fire gong. When placed in position it will blow the gong twice instead of three times on the test blows, and at seven o'clock in the morning, instead of eight as now, and at six o'clock at night.

Tingley's Wrath Cooled Off.

On complaint of Leslie Tingley, Wm. Kennedy, of Greenbrook road, was arrested by Marshal Dowd yesterday, charged with assault. A hearing was held last night before Justice Crosley, but Tingley did not press the charge and the case was dismissed.

Committed to the Asylum.

Lucy A. Greenleaf, a feeble-minded woman, sixty-three years of age, was examined by Drs. Rushmore and Long yesterday as to her sanity, and this morning was committed to the asylum at Morris Plains.

Grocers to Meet.

The Grocers Protective association meet this evening to take action on the Fourth of July celebration matter.

—Harrison Randolph and Adam Beek engaged in a fight on East Second street this afternoon. Randolph's left eye is very much enlarged in consequence.

—Messrs. Brown, Cruikshank, Dyett, and Ostermore, residents of Belvidere avenue, are complying with a city ordinance, by laying a stone walk and curb in front of their respective properties on that avenue.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destored forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflammed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh, that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

INS AND OUTS.

The following very complimentary notice was given Billy Keeler of the Baltimores in the last issue of The Sporting Life: "Keeler is on an even keel all the time. He just simply attends to business in an earnest, conscientious manner, whatever the others may be doing. Nothing appears to affect him. He is the most evenly balanced player that ever appeared on the field. Every day is alike, and that is of the very best. He is so quiet and modest with all his excellence that to praise him is a real pleasure.

The Y. C. C. A. baseball team have the following games scheduled to be played at the Crescent Oval on Saturday afternoons: June 15th—Y. M. C. A., Orange vs Y. M. C. A., Plainfield. PARSIMONIOUS UNCLE SAM.

Wants To Cut Down the Expenses of the Local Postoffice.

Postmaster Hetfield has found it necessary to issue an order that the carriers' window be closed at seven o'clock on Saturday evenings, which is a half hour earlier than has been the practice. The department at Washington has notified Mr. Hetfield that he will have to reduce the overtime bills of carriers, and the closing of the carriers' window is one of the means to that end which he has adopted. The department also orders that if carriers cannot deliver all mail on the last delivery in the allotted time they must return to the office and hold it until morning.

Better Late Than Never.

The Borough Commissioners of Dunellen drove to Summit on Sunday to investigate the system of sewage used at that place. These men are becoming active in securing knowledge along the lines of sewage disposal.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Mrs. Clarence Leland, of Elmwood place, now rides a Crescent wheel.

The Victor Wheelmen will hold an important business meeting Thursday evening, at the home of Capt. Israel Jones.

The annual club races of the Union County Wheelmen will take place at Rahway on July 4. There will be no race meet held by them this season.

"Little Jack" Benner's wheelmen's rest near Fanwood on the county road is a delightfully cool, cosy and inviting place for the weary wheelmen to stop for a few moments rest.

Wheelmen who after a long ride stop by the roadside for a few minutes rest, should take care not to allow their wheels to stand in the sun, as it damages the tires, depriving them of much of their elasticity. When the fabric of the cover of the tire is exposed, cement or guttapercha should be used at once to repair it, as oil or exposed fabric will rot them rapidly.

Students of cycling who believe that the time is ripe for the league or some other body to experiment with professional racing are likely to see a step taken in this direction at no distant day. The upper ten of B-ism are worried over Johnson's suspension, and have cast about for a safe landing along the shore of the cash-prize sea. They have not yet reached a snug harbor, but it is claimed that they will succeed ere long. There is to be a conference in New York this week between certain Class B men and several well-known trainers on one side, and a committee representing the Cycle Board of Trade on the other. Something definite may be known after this meeting. If a plunge is not made in the near future it does not seem likely that the professional league will be organized until too late for a fair trial this season.

THE SECRET ORDERS.

The Ladies Aid society of Monroe Avenue chapel will hold a strawberry festival on Friday night of this week.

The regular meeting of the Carpenter and Joiners union will be held tonight when business of importance will come up. All members are requested to be present.

Prosecute Them.

The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals at Newark has decided to make a crusade against the canal boatmen who use crippled and diseased animals for motor purposes. The cruelty practised by the boatmen has often been the subject of complaint to the society, and this summer the canal or tow path will be patrolled as far as Bloomfield, and whenever a case of cruelty is seen the captain of the boat to which the animals are attached is to be arrested and prosecuted.

A Surprise to Mr. and Mrs. Terry.

An enjoyable surprise was given to Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Terry, Sr., at their home last evening by a large number of friends. The evening was passed pleasantly in a social manner, during which refreshments were serveed.

FEW KNOW ABOUT THE SHAKERS OF MOUNT LEBANON.

We may not accept their peculiar religious views. We cannot enter into the spirit of their sacrifices, and therefore we do not study their habits of life.

It is not necessary to believe as they do, but we can and do respect their sincerity of purpose and the honor and uprightness which mark all their business dealings.

In one particular the Shakers excel all other men or classes of men. This is in the cultivation of medicinal herbs and plants. They have made it a study for more than one hundred years. They are also expert in extracting from them their characteristic essences and medicinal virtues.

This is their peculiar industry. Their lives have been devoted to it. By it they are supported. They excel in this branch as do the Monks of the order of St. Benedict with their famous liqueur called "Benedictine."

Now, this lifelong study on the part of the Shakers has not been in vain. They have accomplished much good. Their medicinal extracts and cordials are known throughout the world.

The Shaker Digestive Cordial is probably the most useful medicine ever given to the public. It is not a cure for all diseases; it doesn't pretend to be; but one disease it will cure, and that is indigestion. It is not pretended that it will cure anything else, and a sufferer has not long to wait to see the result. The effect is immediate. Almost the first dose will give relief, and, if continued, a permanent cure will follow. The Shaker motto is:—"Prove all things and hold fast that which is good." For this reason the Shakers put into the hands of the retail druggists who sell their remedy small trial bottles, which can be had for ten cents each, so that for this small sum the reader can ascertain whether it is adapted to his case.

Want to Wear the Braid.

Hon. Charles N. Fowler, member elect of Congress, has announced that the successful candidate of the competitive examination for admittance to West Point Military Academy is John J. Standish, of Bayonne, with Lewis Hathaway Rand, of this city, as alternate. The following were the young men from Plainfield who tried the examination: Alexander DeLong, Elwood Sebrin, George Francis Rose, and Llewellyn Bull. The successful candidate for the naval academy at Annapolis was Chauncey Shackford of South Orange, with Spencer L. Higgins, of Roselle, as alternate.

Encountering All Sorts of Things.

The men working on the sewers on Watchung avenue struck a bunch of large roots near Second street which with considerable difficulty they are removing. They were dropped there several years ago when a well was located at that point.

Use it in Time.

Catarrh starts in the nasal passages, affecting eyes, ears and throat, and is in fact, the great enemy of the mucous membrane. Neglected colds in the head almost invariably precede catarrh, causing an excessive flow of of mucous, and if the mucous discharge becomes interrupted the disagreeable results of catarra will follow, such as bad breath, severe pain across forehead and about the eyes, a roaring and buzzing sound in the ears and oftentimes a very offensive discharge. Ely's Cream Balm is the acknowledged cure for these troubles.

YOUR SCALP! During the heats of summer does it become irritated and invite an occasional friendly scratch? To wash it is well, but not too often, lest your hair become "brash" and stiff. But treat it twice or thrice a week with our Petroleum Hair Tonic—a little rubbed in with your finger ends, and you will find the feeling of comfort and coolness truly delightful. Positively nothing equals it as a balm for the woes of your scalp. Sprinkler bottles 50c. Only at

Old People.

Old people who require medicine to regulate the bowels and kidneys will find the true remedy in Electric Bitters. This medicine does not stimulate and contains no whiskey nor other intoxicant, but acts as a tonic and alterative. It acts mildly on the stomach and bowels, adding strength and giving tone to the organs, thereby aiding nature in the performance of the functions. Electric Bitters is an excellent appetizer and aids digestion. Old people find it just exactly what they need. Price 50c a bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

I have two little grandchildren who are teething this hot summer weather and are troubled with bowel complaint. I give them Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and it acts like a charm. I earnestly recommend it for children with bowel troubles. I was myself taken with a severe attack of bloody flux, with cramps and pains in my stomach, one-third of a bottle of this remedy cured me. Within twenty-four hours I was out of bed and doing my housework. Mrs. W. L. Dunagan, Bonaqua, Hickman Co., Tenn.

While at Peekskill, N. Y., Mr. J. A. Scriven, a prominent manufacturer of New York City, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Such good results were obtained from its use that he sent back to the druggist from whom he had obtained it for two more bottles of the same remedy. When you have a cough or cold give this preparation a trial and like Mr. Scriven you will want it when again in need of such a medicine. It is a remedy of great worth and merit. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

While in Topeka last March, E. T. Barber, a prominent newspaper man of La Cygne, Kansas, was taken with cholera morbus very severely. The night clerk at the hotel where he was stopping happened to have a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and gave him three doses which relieved him and he thinks saved his life. Every family should keep this remedy in their home at all times. No one can tell how soon it may be needed. It costs but a trifle and may be the means of saving much suffering and perhaps the life of some member of the family. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

Sometime ago I was troubled with an attack of rheumatism. I used Chamberlain's Pain Balm and was completely cured. I have since advised many of my friends and customers to try the remedy and all speak highly of it. Simon Goldbaum, San Luis Rey, Cal. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. S. SKETCHES OF LINCOLN.

A Study of His Peculiar and Personal Traits.

QUALITIES THAT MADE HIM GREAT

Faithful and Lifelike Descriptions—His Personal Appearance—Cheerfulness and Gloom—His Perceptive Faculties—Little Reading, but Great Thinking.

[From "The Life of Lincoln" by William H. Herndon and Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1888, by Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1892, by D. Appleton & Co.]

XXIII.

Soon after the death of Mr. Lincoln Dr. J. G. Holland came out to Illinois from his home in Massachusetts to gather up materials for a life of the dead president. The gentleman spent several days with me, and I gave him all the assistance that lay in my power. I was much pleased with him and awaited with not a little interest the appearance of his book.

Dr. Holland had only found what Lincoln's friends had always experienced in their relations with him—that he was a man of many moods and many sides. He never revealed himself entirely to any one man, and therefore he will always to a certain extent remain enveloped in doubt. Even those who were with him through long years of hard study and under constantly varying circumstances can hardly say they knew him through and through. I always believed I could read him as thoroughly as any man, and yet he was so different in many respects from any other one I ever met before or since his time that I cannot say I comprehended him. I give my recollection of his individual characteristics as they occur to me and allow the world to form its own opinion. If my recollection of the man destroys any other person's ideal, I cannot help it. By a faithful and lifelike description of Lincoln the man, and a study of his peculiar and person traits, perhaps some of the apparent contradictions met with by Dr. Holland will have melted from sight.

His Personal Appearance.

Mr. Lincoln was 6 feet 4 inches high, and when he left the city of his home for Washington was 51 years old, having good health and no gray hairs, or but few, on his head. He was thin, wiry, sinewy, rawboned, thin through the breast to the back and narrow across the shoulders. Standing he leaned forward—was what may be called stoop shouldered, inclining to the consumptive by build. His usual weight was 180 pounds. His organization—rather his structure and functions—worked slowly. His blood had to run a long distance from his heart to the extremities of his frame, and his nerve force had to travel through dry ground a long distance before his muscles were obedient to his will. His structure was loose and leathery; his body was shrunk and shriveled; he had dark skin, dark hair and looked woestruck. The whole man, body and mind, worked slowly, as if it needed oiling. Physically he was a very powerful man, lifting with ease 400 and in one case 600 pounds. His mind was like his body and worked slowly, but strongly; hence there was very little bodily or mental wear and tear in him. This peculiarity in his construction gave him great advantage over other men in public life. No man in America, scarcely a man in the world, could have stood what Lincoln did in Washington and survived through more than one term of the presidency.

When he walked, he moved cautiously, but firmly. His long arms and giant hands swung down by his side. He walked with even tread, the inner sides of his feet being parallel. He put the whole foot flat down on the ground at once, not landing on the heel. He likewise lifted his foot all at once, not rising from the toe, and hence he had no spring to his walk. His walk was undulatory, catching and pocketing tire, weariness and pain all up and down his person, and thus preventing them from locating. The first impression of a stranger or a man who did not observe closely was that his walk implied shrewdness and cunning, that he was a tricky man, but in reality it was the walk of caution and firmness. In sitting down on a common chair he was no taller than ordinary men. His legs and arms were abnormally, unnaturally long and in undue proportion to the remainder of his body. It was only when he stood up that he loomed above other men.

His Head and Face.

Mr. Lincoln's head was long and tall from the base of the brain and from the eyebrows. His head ran backward, his forehead rising as it ran back at a low angle, like Clay's, and unlike Webster's, which was almost perpendicular. The size of his hat measured at the hatter's block was 7⅛, his head being from ear to ear 6½ inches and from the front to the back of the brain 8 inches. Thus measured it was not below the medium size. His forehead was narrow, but high; his hair was dark, almost black, and lay floating where his fingers or the winds left it, piled up at random; his cheek bones were high, sharp and prominent; his jaws were long and up curved; his nose was large, long, blunt and a little awry toward the right eye; his chin was sharp and up curved; his eyebrows cropped out like a huge rock on the brow of a hill; his long, sallow face was wrinkled and dry, with a hair here and there on the surface; his cheeks were leathery; his ears were large and ran out almost at right angles from his head, caused partly by heavy hats and partly by nature; his lower lip was thick, hanging and undercurved, while his chin reached for the lip up curved; his neck was neat and trim, his head being well balanced on it. There was the lone mole on the right cheek and Adam's apple on his throat.

Thus stood, walked, acted and looked Abraham Lincoln. He was not a pretty man by any means, nor was he an ugly one. He was a homely man, careless of his looks, plain looking and plain acting. He had no pomp, display or dignity, so called. He appeared simple in his carriage and bearing. He was a sad looking man. His melancholy dripped from him as he walked. His apparent gloom impressed his friends, and created sympathy for him—one means of his great success. He was gloomy, abstracted and joyous—rather humorous—by turns, but I do not think he knew what real joy was for many years.

Mr. Lincoln sometimes walked our streets cheerily, he was not always gloomy, and then it was that on meeting a friend he greeted him with plain "Howd'y?" clasping his hand in both of his own, and gave him a hearty soul welcome. On a winter's morning he might be seen stalking toward the market house, basket on arm, his old gray shawl wrapped around his neck, his little boy Willie or Tad running along at his heels asking a thousand boyish questions, which his father, in deep abstraction, neither heeded nor heard. If a friend met or passed him and he awoke from his reverie, something would remind him of a story he had heard in Indiana, and tell it he would, and there was no alternative but to listen.

Thus, I repeat, stood and walked and talked this singular man. He was odd, but when that gray eye and that face and those features were lit up by the inward soul in fires of emotion then it was that all those apparently ugly features sprang into organs of beauty or disappeared in the sea of inspiration that often flooded his face. Sometimes it appeared as if Lincoln's soul was fresh from its Creator.

His Perceptive Faculties.

I have asked the friends and foes of Mr. Lincoln alike what they thought of his perceptions. One gentleman of unquestioned ability and free from all partiality or prejudice said, "Mr. Lincoln's perceptions were slow, a little perverted, if not somewhat distorted and diseased." If the meaning of this is that Mr. Lincoln saw things from a peculiar angle of his being, and from this was susceptible to nature's impulses, and that he so expressed himself, then I have no objection to what is said. Otherwise I dissent. Mr. Lincoln's perceptions were slow, cold, clear and exact. Everything came to him in its precise shape and color. To some men the world of matter and of man comes ornamented with beauty, life and action, and hence more or less false and inexact. No lurking illusion or other error, false in itself and clad for the moment in robes of splendor, ever passed undetected or unchallenged over the threshold of his mind—that point which divides vision from the realm and home of thought. Names to him were nothing, and titles naught, assumption always standing back abashed at his cold, intellectual glare. Neither his perceptions nor intellectual vision was perverted, distorted or diseased. He saw all things through a perfect mental lens. There was no diffraction or refraction there. He was not impulsive, fanciful or imaginative, but cold, calm and precise. He threw his whole mental light around the object, and after a time substance and quality stood apart, form and color took their appropriate places, and all was clear and exact in his mind. His fault, if any, was that he saw things less than they really were—less beautiful and more frigid. He crushed the unreal, the inexact, the hollow and the sham. He saw things in rigidity rather than in vital action. He saw what no man could dispute, but he failed to see what might have been seen.

The truth about Mr. Lincoln is that he read less and thought more than any man in his sphere in America. No man can put his finger on any great book written in the last or present century that he read thoroughly. When young, he read the Bible, and when of age he read Shakespeare; but, though he often quoted from both, he never read either one through. He is acknowledged now to have been a great man, but the question is what made him great. I repeat that he read less and thought more than any man of his standing in America, if not in the world. He possessed originality and power of thought in an eminent degree. Besides his well established reputation for caution he was concentrated in his thoughts and had great continuity of reflection. In everything he was patient and enduring. These are some of the grounds of his wonderful success.

His Reasoning Powers.

Not only were nature, man and principles suggestive to Mr. Lincoln, not only had he accurate and exact perceptions, but he was causative. His mind, apparently with an automatic movement, ran back behind facts, principles and all things to their origin and first cause—to that point where forces act at once as effect and cause. He would stop in the street and analyze a machine. He would whittle a thing to a point and then count the numberless inclined planes and their pitch making the point. Mastering and defining this, he would then cut that point back and get a broad transverse section of his pine stick and peel and define that. Clocks, omnibuses, language, paddle wheels and idioms never escaped his observation and analysis. Before he could form an idea of anything, before he would express his opinion on a subject, he must know its origin and history in substance and quality, in magnitude and gravity. He must know it inside and outside, upside and down side. He searched and comprehended his own mind and nature thoroughly, as I have often heard him say. He must analyze a sensation, an idea, and run back in its history to its origin and purpose. He was remorseless in his analysis of facts and principles. When all these exhaustive processes had been gone through with, he could form an idea and express it, but no sooner. He had no faith and no respect for "say so's," come though they might from tradition or authority. Thus everything had to run through the crucible and be tested by the fires of his analytic mind, and when at last he did speak his utterances rang out with the clear and keen ring of gold upon the counters of the understanding. He reasoned logically through analogy and comparison. All opponents dreaded his originality of idea, his condensation, definition and force of expression, and woe be to the man who hugged to his bosom a secret error if Lincoln got on the chase of it. I repeat, woe to him! Time could hide the error in no nook or corner of space in which he would not detect and expose it.

Long Enough.

Stephen A. Douglas and Mr. Lovejoy were once gossiping together when Abraham Lincoln came in. The two men immediately turned their conversation upon the proper length of a man's legs.

"Now," said Lovejoy, "Abe's legs are altogether too long, and yours, Douglas, I think, are a little short. Let's ask Abe what he thinks of it."

Then, turning to Lincoln, he said:

"We're talking about the proper length of a man's legs. We think yours are too long and Douglas' too short, and we'd like to know what you think is the proper length."

"Well," said Mr. Lincoln, "that's a matter that I've never given any thought to, so of course I may be mistaken, but my first impression is that a man's legs ought to be long enough to reach from his body to the ground."

Pardonable Pride.

There was a well to do tailor in Springfield who owned a handsome house just across the street from the Lincolns. Mrs. Lincoln did not feel pleased that a tailor should live in a finer residence than that occupied by a leading lawyer. When Abe was off on circuit, therefore, she had a story added to their house. The job was nearly finished when Abe returned. He strode down the street, gazed at his house in surprise and then crossed to the tailor's side of the road.

"Who lives in that palatial mansion over there?" he asked of his neighbor.

"The widow Lincoln," answered the smiling tailor. Then was heard a voice from the top story of the Lincoln house:

"Abe, Abe, come to dinner! You're late!"

DESPERATE MEANS.

The lecture was just at an end, and Walter Dundas, M. A., Cantab, gathered his papers together, while his audience, chiefly consisting of ladies, prepared to depart. The University Extension had but recently penetrated into the remote provincial town of Slumberleigh, and had met there with almost unprecedented success.

Reaching the outer door before the whole assembly had dispersed, Dundas scanned each of his students, exchanging greetings and farewells with some whose acquaintance he had made during his short stay at Slumberleigh. As the last departed, he turned on his heels and heaving a slight sigh, betook himself to his hotel.

"I must have missed Miss Clifford," he muttered; "she was certainly at the lecture. I wish I could have seen her before I left New York, just to say good by."

Meanwhile the subject of his reflections, a pretty, bright faced girl of nineteen, had arrived at her home, a large, handsome house in the principal street of the little town. In the hall she met her father.

"Come into the study and shut the door," he said. "I have something rather serious to tell you."

His daughter obeyed.

"The fact is," said Mr. Clifford. "I have been, as you have noticed, in pecuniary difficulties for some time past. Some months ago, to meet my more pressing claims. I was obliged to mortgage the house and to get a bill of sale on the furniture. But things have gone from bad to worse, and I have just found that, unless I can raise £300 within two months, I shall be in a fair way to become a bankrupt.

"Your Uncle George is such a miser that if he heard the faintest rumor that I was in difficulties through extravagance, he would'n't leave me a farthing, far less give me anything. In fact, it is partly on his account that I am so anxious to raise this money quickly, for if I am gazetted before he dies (the doctor says he hasn't two months to live) my name will be cut out of his will."

After a pause he went on:

"I wish some rich fellow would come and marry you, Mab; that would provide for you, at least, and you might be able to spare a few halfpence for your poor old father."

Mabel laughed. "At least you can have the wedding presents in that case," she said.

Clifford suddenly stopped short in the midst of his pregrinations. "The very thing!" he exclaimed.

"What do you mean?"

"Quite simple. Send out invitations to your wedding to some person, imaginary, if you like. Then, when you have got a fine array of wedding presents—well, the event can be postponed—sudden illness of the bridegroom—anything. Meanwhile, the presents are converted into ready cash. I am once more solvent. Uncle George dies; hey, presto! everything in a flourishing condition again!"

"But the whole scheme is so preposterous! No, father, I really can't do it!"

"So you won't even do that little service for me? Well, I might have expected it! Here am I, toiling all these years"—(Mabel looked slightly incredulous)—denying myself, paying sweet guineas for your fees to local lectures, and this is all the thanks I get!"

"I was at the last to-day," said his daughter, coloring slightly.

"The last! Then that lecturer fellow—what's his name?—Dundas has gone? Look here, Mabel! Let him be the bridegroom. He'll never hear of it—he's not likely to ever come back again and it will seem much more natural for you to be engaged to him than to a stranger. There! I flatter myself that I have made a really brilliant suggestion."

"Father, I must tell you plainly," said Mabel, flushing angrily, "I decline to have anything to do with the plan."

"Now, Mabel, dear," in a more wheedling tone. "you will be sensible, won't you? Surely you can't see me trembling on the brink of ruin like this, and not stretch out a hand to help me? Come, now!"

Poor Mabel looked irresolutely before her.

"If I could do anything else," she said entreatingly. "But a deceitful thing like that—and think of the exposure if it should come out!"

"No fear of it coming out, if you only play your part properly," quick to detect the signs of yielding in her tone. "And, after all, it's only for a month or two at most. There, I knew you would be sensible."

"But I don't like it at all."

"Pooh! You'll soon get accustomed to it. And now to set about preparations for carrying it out. I think, as we want that thing widely known, we cannot do better than give a hint to Miss Worboise, and let nature do its work."

Mabel quite recognized the truth of this assertion, for Miss Cynthia Worboise, a maiden lady of uncertain age, and a near neighbor of theirs, had a well merited reputation for gossip, and was frequently made use of by her friends as an easy means of spreading. She, therefore, assented languidly to the proposal.

"Then that's settled, and I'll drop in myself after dinner to-night and tell her. We'll fix the wedding for this day seven weeks, and who knows what may happen between this and then? There, my love, I knew you would soon get reconciled to the idea."

True to his resolution, Clifford sallied forth that night to the gossip monger, and returned in high glee at the manner in which his plausible story had been received.

"Miss Worboise was delighted," he said, "and consulted me immediately as to what I recommended for a present. She is coming round to-morrow morning to talk it over with you, so mind and prepare yourself for any emergency."

Mr. Clifford had not miscalculated when he said that it would be quite unnecessary to do more than tell the news to Miss Cynthia. In less than a week the whole town was discussing the engagement, and Mabel had received calls of congratulation from all her friends. Her father, wishing to hurry up matters, had fixed a day some six weeks hence and had sent out dainty, silver written invitation cards to their whole circle.

As he expected, on their being sent out, a stream of presents, steady enough to realize his most sanguine hopes, began to flow in, and he more than once congratulated himself and his daughter on the success that had met their scheme.

Time passed on, till at last but one week remained before the date fixed for the eventful ceremony. Mr. Clifford had just been consulting Mabel as to the propriety of announcing the sudden indisposition of the bridegroom, when Miss Worboise paid her usual morning call.

"Oh, Mab, darling, you didn't tell me, but I knew you would like to talk it over, so I called in early. Naughty man! to combine business with pleasure like this?"

"What do you mean?" asked Mabel, with apprehension.

"You know as well as I. I really wonder you let him. It's hardly respectable!"

"What is hardly respectable?" the girl asked, a horrible fear seizing her.

"Why, of course, letting him lecture here the very day before his marriage. Didn't you know?—but of course you did—he has promised to give an extra lecture to supplement his course!"

"Oh, yes—I know," said, or rather gasped, Mabel. "Of course—I have rather a headache this morning, and—would you excuse?"

Miss Worboise, of course, took the hint and left, with many expressions of regret, while Mabel sought her father.

"What shall we do?" she panted. "He is coming here before he crosses the Atlantic—actually here—in five days—he must hear of it—and I—I shall die of shame!"

"It is deuced awkward," said Mr. Clifford, perplexed; "but, never mind, I've brought you into this mess and I'll get you out. Now, see here. I'll wire at once and get him dine and stay the night with us—in fact, we'll keep him entirely to ourselves, and he won't get a hint of it. In the morning he'll leave by an early train—we can say his mother is suddenly taken ill. There, isn't that all right?"

Mabel assented, doubtfully. Nothing could be done now, except wait and hope for the best.

Mr. Dundas, duly invited, wired his acceptance, and on the appointed day was met at the station and conveyed home by Mr. Clifford. Mabel awaited his arrival with a beating heart and could hardly hide her confusion on first meeting him. When 5 o'clock, the hour appointed for his lecture, arrived, she professed herself slightly unwell, and Dundas found himself, to his disgust, relegated to the care of her father, who received strict injunctions from Mabel not to allow the lecturer to interchange greetings with any one.

"They might congratulate him!" she said. "How very awkward that would be!"

Dinner passed off without mishap. Mabel was shy and constrained, and spoke little; but as Clifford was in high spirits at the success with which everything passed off, and kept the conversation chiefly in his own hands, his guest did not notice the unusual preoccupation and silence of his daughter.

But alas! the best laid scheme may fail sometimes. No sooner were the three established in the drawing room than the door bell rang sharply, and a few moments later the servant announced:

"Miss Worboise."

Mabel, nearly distracted, managed at last to welcome the very unwelcome guest, and then sat down on thorns, waiting in a kind of despair for what she might say.

"I know," said Cynthia archly, "that it is rather an inconvenient time to call. "You must be so very busy—such a lot of preparations as you must have to make before to-morrow, haven't you, Mr. Dundas?"

"I? No," said Dundas, rather surprised. "I really have no packing to speak of, and that's done already, as I am leaving by an early train."

"An early train! But surely you won't miss the reception?"

"Good gracious!" thought the young man, "are they getting up a levee for me?" But aloud he only said: "Well, I'm afraid I shall, unless it's very early."

"Which reminds me," said Miss Worboise, "Mabel, darling, you forgot to say at what time we are expected to come," and then, to the girl's infinite horror, she produced from her pocket her dainty invitation card.

"Confound that woman!" thought Clifford, savagely, and then, jumping up, he exclaimed eagerly, "See here, Miss Cynthia, "I must have your opinion on some of Mabel's presents in the next room," and, rather against her will, hurried out of the room, but not before he saw that the mischief was done, for Dundas had stopped politely to pick up the card which had fallen from Mabel's nerveless hand, and in doing so could not help seeing what it was. His name on the card arrested his attention, and he read it through, scarcely realizing its meaning. Then, too amazed to speak, he looked toward Mabel for an explanation; but, seeing her pale and speechless, sprang toward her, fearing she was about to faint. His touch, however, recalled her to herself; and, waving him back with an effort, she rose and faced him.

"You had better know the whole," she said, and then, as calmly and collectedly as she could, she told the humiliating story.

Half an hour later Mr. Clifford reentered the drawing room, a telegram in his hand. He stood for a moment on the threshold, and then, advancing said:

"I suppose my daughter told you all, Mr. Dundas? She is not to blame in the matter, but I feel I owe you a deep apology for the unwarrantable liberty I have taken with your name. Mabel," he continued, turning to his daughter, "I can never repay you for the service you have rendered me—and the suffering you have undergone. But this telegram tells me Uncle George is dead, and, as I am his heir, we can now, at least, send back the wedding presents."

"With your permission, sir," said Dundas, smiling, "Mabel and I have decided to keep them."—London Tit-Bits.

POSTMEN MUST SALUTE.

In the City of Churches Military Tactics Prevail.

A. T. Sullivan, Postmaster of Brooklyn, has decided to require his subordinates to salute their superior officers hereafter. He is a Cleveland Democrat. This is what he says:

"The attention of the letter carriers at this office is called to the advisability and propriety of extending a uniform salute or mark of recognition to their immediate superiors whenever they meet them in the performance of their duties outside the office. I have long been of the opinion that such a practice would add materially to the dignity and discipline of the carrier force in its effect upon the public, and the absence of such a system has undoubtedly provoked unfavorable comment and has been attributed to lack of system and careless discipline. The salutation now in vogue in regular organizations, namely, the raising of the right hand to point of contact with cap or helmet, should be adopted, and the carrier and substitute carrier force of this office are hereby directed to immediately conform to the provisions of this order when accosting or passing on the public streets the postmaster, assistant postmaster and division superintendents."

Sergeant McElroy's Whereabouts.

"The Ninth Cavalry was the first regiment to use the Hotchkiss mountain gun," said Capt. Day "and the way the gun was hauled about by our troops was a caution. Lieutenant Humphreys commanded the gun outfit in our troop and he could hit an ordinary target as far as it could be seen.

"He was a very profane man, and whenever any of the boys got weary on a march they would say: 'Let's go back and hear Humphrey swear.' In marching over mountains it is very often necessary to climb down inclines which are almost a sheer drop, and at such places the soldier will sit down between the forelegs of his horse and they slide down together.

"The gun outfit, always being in the rear, would generally find such places worn about as smooth as glass when they came up, and Humphrey's profanity was something terrible.

"I remember one very amusing incident connected with an affair of that sort. The incline was almost a sheer precipice, leading thirty feet below into the canon. When Humphrey came up, of course, all the dirt was worn off, leaving only the slippery side of the rock.

"He sat down and swore long and loudly, but finally got up and ordered the outfit over. The sergeant, a colored man, named McElroy, was about to let the gun and the two mules go over by themselves, when Humphrey yelled:

"'Hold on there, go over with them and report.'

"So over they all went, and after hearing a big splash in the canon below, followed by silence, Humphrey called out:

"'McElroy, are you killed?'

"A big spluttering was heard below and pretty soon McElroy's voice came up:

"'No, sah; Ise not killed.'

"'Where's the mule?'

"'He's kickin' on top o' de heap, sah.'

"'Well, where's the wheel mule?'

"'He's under de off mule, sah.'

"'Is the gun all right?'

"'Yes, sah; dat's under de wheel mule, sah.'

"'Well, where are you?'

"'Ise under de gun, sah.'"—Washington Times.

The Thoughtful Drug Clerk.

"What can I do for you, miss?" inquired the clerk in a Market street drug store of a blushing young woman. She glanced about her in embarrassment and then replied:

"I want some castor oil."

"All right; in just a moment."

The clerk moved around behind the counter for a moment and then went to the soda fountain.

"Do you like soda?" he asked.

"Oh, yes, indeed."

"What flavoring do you prefer?"

"Pineapple, please."

The clerk drew a glass of the fizz and the young lady drank it. Then the clerk sat down on a stool and commenced to chat with her. She was apparently annoyed, but replied courteously to all of his remarks. Finally she said:

"If you'll give me the castor oil I'll go."

"Why, you took it in that glass of soda."

"Took it in the soda! I didn't want to take it. It was for my little brother."—San Francisco Post.

The Blacksmith Preacher.

Rev. Robert Collyer, pastor of the Unitarian Church of the Messiah, is one of the most eloquent as well as one of the most popular ministers in New York. His reputation as an author and lecturer is almost world wide. His attainments are all the more interesting as he was obliged to leave school when eight years of age and work in a factory. He became a Methodist preacher, but drifted into Unitarianism. He was born in Yorkshire, England, in 1823, and came to this country in 1850.

THE EXPLOITS OF BRIGADIER GERARD

How the Brigadier Slew the Brothers of Ajaccio

BY A. CONAN DOYLE.

CHAPTER III.
(Copyright, 1895.)

"I have need of your services, Monsieur Gerard," said he. "I may be safer with a good sword at my side, and there are reasons why yours should be the one which I select. But first of all, I must bind you to secrecy. Whilst I live what passes between us to-day must be known to none but ourselves."

I thought of Talleyrand and of Lasalle, but I promised.

"In the next place I do not want opinions or conjectures, and I wish you to do exactly what you are told."

I bowed.

"It is your sword that I need, and not your brains. I will do the thinking. Is that clear to you?"

"Yes, sire."

"You know the Chancellor's Grove in the forest?"

I bowed.

"You know also the large double fir tree where the hounds assembled on Tuesday?"

Had he known that I met a girl under it three times a week he would not have asked me. I bowed once more without remark.

"I HAVE BEEN THINKING, SIRE," CRIED I.

"Very good. You will meet me there at 10 o'clock to-night."

I had got past being surprised at anything which might happen.

If he had asked me to take his place upon the imperial throne I could only have nodded my busby.

"We shall then proceed into the wood together," said the Emperor. "You will be armed with a sword, but not with pistols. You must address no remark to me, and I shall say nothing to you. We will advance in silence. You understand?"

"I understand, sire."

"After a time we shall see a man, or more probably two men, under a certain tree. We shall approach them together. If I signal to you to defend me, you will have your sword ready. If on the other hand, I speak to these men you will wait and see what happens. If you are called upon to draw you must see that neither of them, in the event of there being two, escapes from us. I shall myself assist you."

"But, sire," I cried, "I have no doubt that two would not be too many for my sword, but would it not be better that I should bring a comrade than that you should be forced to join in such a struggle?"

"Ta, ta, ta," said he, "I was a soldier before I was an Emperor. Do you think, then, that artillerymen have not swords as well as the hussars? But I ordered you not to argue with me. You will do exactly what I tell you. If swords are once drawn, neither of these men is to get away alive."

"They shall not, sire," said I.

"Very good. I have no more instructions for you. You can go."

I turned to the door, and then an idea occurring to me, I turned:

"I have been thinking, sire," said I——

"He sprang at me with the ferocity of a wild beast. I really thought that he would have struck me.

"Thinking," he cried. "You! You! Do you imagine I chose you out because you could think. Let me hear of your doing such a thing again! You, the one man—but there! You meet me at the fir tree at 10 o'clock."

My faith, I was right glad to get out of the room. If I have a good horse under me, and a sword clanking against my stirrup iron, I know where I am. And in all that relates to green fodder or dry, barley and oats and rye, and the handling of squadrons upon the march, there is no one who can teach me very much, but when I meet a chamberlain and a marshal of the palace, and have to pick my words with an Emperor, and find that everybody hints instead of talking straight out, I feel like a troop horse who has been put in a lady's caleche. It is not my trade, all this mincing and pretending. I couldn't do it, and I never like those who can. So I was right glad to get into the fresh air again, and I ran away up to my quarters like a schoolboy who has just escaped from the seminary master.

But as I opened the door the very first thing that my eyes rested upon was a long pair of sky-blue legs, with hussar boots, and a short pair of black ones with knee breeches and buckles. They both sprang up together to greet me.

"Well, what news?" they cried, the two of them.

"None," I answered.

"The Emperor refused to see you!"

"No I have seen him."

"And what did he say?"

"Monsieur de Talleyrand," I answered, "I regret to say that it is quite impossible for me to tell you anything about it. I have promised the Emperor."

"Pooh, pooh, my dear young man," said he, sidling up to me as a cat does when it is about to rub itself against you. "This is all among friends, you understand, and goes no further than these four walls. Besides, the Emperor never meant to include me in this promise."

"It is but a minute's walk to the palace, Monsieur de Talleyrand," I answered. "If it would not be troubling you too much to ask you to step up to it, and to bring back the Emperor's written statement that he did not mean to include you in this promise, I shall be happy to tell you every word that passed."

He showed his teeth at me then like the old fox that he was.

"Monsieur Gerard appears to be a little puffed up," said he. "He is too young to see things in their just proportion. As he grows older he may understand that it is not always very discreet for a subaltern of cavalry to give such very abrupt refusals."

I did not know what to say to this, but Lasalle came to my aid in his downright fashion.

"The lad is quite right," said he. "If I had known that there was a promise, I should not have questioned him. You know very well, Monsieur de Talleyrand, that if he had answered you, you would have laughed in your sleeve and thought as much about him as I think of the bottle when the burgundy is gone. As to me, I promise you that the Tenth would have had no room for him, and that we should have lost our best swordsman, if I had heard him give up the Emperor's secret."

SO I SUPPOSE HE WAS TRYING TO MAKE HIS PEACE WITH TALLEYRAND.

But the statesman became only the more bitter when he saw that I had the support of my colonel.

"I have heard, Col. Lasalle," said he, with an icy dignity, "that your opinion is of great weight upon the subject of light cavalry. Should I have occasion to seek information about that branch of the army I shall be very happy to apply to you. At present, however, the matter concerns diplomacy, and you will permit me to form my own views upon that question. As long as the welfare of France and the safety of the Emperor's person are largely committed to my care, I will use every means in my power to secure them even if it should be against the Emperor's own temporary wishes. I have the honor, Col. Lasalle, to wish you a very good day." He shot a most unamiable glance in my direction, and, turning upon his heel, he walked with little, quick, noiseless steps out of the room.

I could see from Lasalle's face that he did not at all relish finding himself at enmity with the powerful minister. He rapped out an oath or two, and then catching up his sabre and his cap he clattered away down the stairs. As I looked out of the window, I saw the two of them, the big blue man and the little black one, going up the street together. Talleyrand was walking very rigidly, and Lasalle was waving his hands and talking, so I supposed that he was trying to make his peace.

The Emperor had told me not to think, and I endeavored to obey him. I took up the cards from the table where Regnier had left them, and I tried to work out a few combinations at ecarte, but I could not remember which were trumps, and I threw them under the table in despair. Then I drew my sabre, and practiced giving point until I was weary, but it was all of no use at all. My mind would work in spite of myself. At 10 o'clock I was to meet the Emperor in the forest. Of all extraordinary combinations of events in this whole world, surely this was the last which would have occurred to me when I rose from my couch that morning. But the responsibility—the dreadful responsibility! It was all upon my shoulders. There was no one to halve it with me. It made me cold all over. Often as I have faced death upon the battlefield, I had never known what real fear was until that moment. But then I considered that after all I could but do my best like a brave and honorable gentleman, and above all obey the orders which I had received, to the very letter. And if all went well, this would surely be the foundation of my fortunes. Thus alternating between my fears and my hopes, I spent the long, long evening until it was time for me to keep my appointment.

JUVENILES DEFT FINGERS.

THE SEWING SCHOOL GIVES AN ENTERTAINMENT.

The School Has Become An Important Factor, With Gratifying Results—Display of Exhibits.

The sewing school organized at Reform hall last February by Mrs. Geo. F. Opdyke has become an important factor, and the children have done excellent work. Miss Pessinger, the superintendent, has been faithful with the girls and the result of their labor is most gratifying. This was attested last evening when a large number of people gathered to enjoy the excellent entertainment provided under the direction of Miss May Thompson. The children marched from the basement to the upper hall, and as they entered singing "Onward Christian Soldiers," it was an inspiring sight to all.

Mrs. Opdyke made a few remarks in opening, in which she explained the objects and character of the girls work. She also stated that the boys were being taken care of in the manual training department, under the direction of John Dalziel and Frank Patience, and that their work for the first three months was most creditable.

The literary and musical programme was then rendered as follows, frequent and hearty applause being accorded each number:

Speed On, choir; The Lost Child, Jennie Smith; Selfish and Lend a Hand, Erna Arnold; What Grandmother Says, Mamie Mehl; A Useful Possession, May Smith; Wishes, three girls; Song, Lillie Zeisz and Lena Mills; Blind Man's Dog, Tessa Gayes; Five Little Chickens, Carrie Weiss; Contentment, Leah Hammond; He Did n't Think, Clyde Slater; acting charade, six girls; song, Sunny Land, three girls; tableau, Sewing School; The School Ma'am, Cathie Riker; song, And He Whistled Up a Tune, Jennie Smith; Baby Brother, Julia Grisly; The Leaves in the Wind, Grace Murphy; song, Helen Geider; dialogue, The Several Kinds of Girls; piano solo, Jennie Smith; Mary's Little Lamb, Mamie Filper; Little, Oh Dear, Annie Holder; song, Laura Anderson; Some Little Drops of Water, Mandeline MacIntyre; When Mamma Was a Little Girl, Gertrude Coddington; Why Pearlie Cried, Edna Kennedy and Lillie Conover; How Lulu Takes Care of Kitty, Daisy Bogart; The Inventor's Wife, Dottie Anderson; Wildwood Flowers, choir girls; The Queer Scholar, Marian Englehart; How Should Little Maidens Grow, Sadie Sweeney; piano solo, Laura Anderson; tableau, The Distant Star, Miss C. A. Dunlap.

Those present then went down stairs and examined the work of the past few months, and were highly pleased. After books had been presented to each class, the happy event came to an end until next fall.

Condition of the Crops.

The following crop reports from Union county were published in the Weekly Crop Bulletin of the New Jersey Weather Service this week:

CLARK TOWNSHIP—The early part of week gave excellent growing weather, the latter part has been most too cold for rapid growth; a splendid rain on the 5th; grass will be a good crop; strawberry growers are beginning to pick in large quantities.

ELIZABETH—A favorable week for all vegetation; all crops looking well; a fine rain on 5th was of great benefit; potato bugs plentiful; corn has come up well and is making a fine growth; clover will soon be fit to cut; oats making a heavy growth of straw. Rainfall 0.98 inch.

PLAINFIELD—The fine shower on the 5th helped crops very much, as it was needed; crops in general are fair; corn needs warmer weather; cherries will yield about half a crop; hay is very good in some parts and scant in others. Ave. temp., 70.5; rainfall, 1.10 inch.

Bucket Shop In Trouble.

The executors of the Babcock estate had a levy made yesterday on goods belonging to J. C. Woodruff, who rented an office in the Babcock building. Mr. Woodruff had moved out, and his goods were at the express office ready for shipment when Constable Mattox made the levy. It was served to satisfy a bill for rent.

It is expected that work on the Watchung avenue sewers will be concluded this week and that the street cars will be able to reach the Watchung avenue terminus.

ANENT THE GOVERNORSHIP.

GOSSIP ABOUT UNION COUNTY POLITICIANS AT TRENTON.

The Suave Foster Voorhees Is a Busy Man—John Kean, Jr., Is Dignified, But the Grass Don't Grow Under His Feet.

The following gossip concerning Union county men appeared in the Trenton correspondence of the Jersey City News yesterday:

Mr. Voorhees is, without doubt, the busiest man in the Legislature. His mail is larger than any one else's and hardly a citizen who visits the State House, no matter what his race, creed or previous condition of servitude, but must shake hands with Foster Voorhees and whisper something in his ear.

Every crank who thinks he has a reform machine takes it to the Union Senator and bores him with his idiotic ideas, while every man or woman who thinks he or she has a grievance rushes to the Elizabeth man for redress. He never loses his temper and listens to all with a semblance of rapt attention at least, and although three or four may be talking to him at once, each one is impressed with the idea that it was to him alone the Senator was listening. It is not to be wondered at that Foster Voorhees is the most popular man in the Republican party.

That other honored son of Union, Hon. John Kean, Jr., was also on hand. He had no legislative duties to claim any of his attention and he let no grass grow under his feet. He was here, there and everywhere, now talking to this member, now to that leader, shaking hands with every one and assuming that air of dignity and wisdom which has done as much as anything to cause many to declare most emphatically that he will be the next Governor of New Jersey.

COMMERCIAL PALACE TRADE.

Mr. Edsall's Business is Growing Steadily and He is Satisfied.

The first month in the second year of the Commercial Palace has just closed, which enables the proprietor to make a comparison throughout the entire establishment of the amount of business done this month corresponding with that of a year ago.

The result shows and increase of fully 75 per cent. Mr. Edsall has just put on a second delivery wagon, and will soon be obliged to add the third in order to meet the necessities of his increasing trade. Mr. Edsall says his expectations for the first year have more than been met, and he feels greatly encouraged to make still greater advances in the future. Plainfield people appreciate good things, and Mr. Edsall's remarkable enterprise is not an exception to this rule.

Homeward Bound.

Pierre Mali and family, who have been spending the past few months in Belguim, Mr. Mali's native home, sailed Saturday last from Antwerp, on the steamship Friesland and are expected to arrive in this city on Tuesday next. They will remain at their summer residence on East Front street until October.

West End Park Improvements.

W. J. Buttfield has commenced the erection of another house on the property recently purchased by him in West End Park, making three fine dwelling that Mr. Buttfield has erected at that point. Utzinger & Kline have the contract for the carpenter work.

To Address the Congress of Religion.

Rev. Dr. Henry K. Carroll, of North Plainfield, editor of the Independent, will deliver an address on "Religious Progress in the United States," at the Pan-American Congress of Religion and Education, which will be held at Toronto, Ont., July 18th to 25th.

Observe a Ridiculous Law.

Fred Huff and James Daley have opened a stand at the end of the trolley road on Somerset street for the sale of ice-cream and soft drinks. They close on Saturday and keep open on Sunday.

Consolidated Efforts.

The Catholic Young Men's Lyceum, T. A. B. society, and the Catholic Benevolent Legion have consolidated in their efforts towards the Fourth of July celebration, and have secured the Raritan brass band.

Hurt His Fingers.

Stricken With Scarlet Fever.

George Statts, Jr., of Columbia avenue, Netherwood, is stricken with a slight attack of scarlet fever. Dr. Boone is in attendance and the house is quarantined.

MARY WAS FINALLY JUGGED.

BUT SHE GAVE SERGEANT KIELY A TUSSLE.

The Disgraceful Actions of an Inebriated Woman on the Streets Last Night—Fined $10 This Morning.

One of the most disgraceful scenes ever witnessed on the streets of Plainfield occurred yesterday afternoon between five and six o'clock. Mrs. Mary Nolan, a servant employed by John Reed at Netherwood, came to Plainfield and before long was under the influence of the flowing bowl. Along Somerset street, Front street and Park avenue her vile and abusive language was poured into the ears of passers-by. When she reached Second street and Park avenue she met a crowd of men with whom she commenced to talk, and her English was more expressive than elegant. Sergeant Kiely was sent for and he at once went to the place and asked the woman what she was doing. She replied in surly tones and then began to swear at the officer. He found it necessary to arrest the woman and managed to get her as far as North avenue. All this time she was using the foulest sort of language, and owing to her condition, the officer found it a little difficult to take her along.

At North avenue she became unmanageable, and a wagon that was passing was called into service, and with the assistance of a citzen, the Sergeant got her on the wagon and she was taken to the rookery. Previous to this she was rolling around in the street and using all her strength resisting the officer. This morning she was given a hearing by Judge Coddington and the sentence of $10 or 30 days in the county jail was pronounced. Her husband will probably raise the money and secure her release.

A MAN ADVOCATE.

Sketch of Aaron M. Powell in the Woman's Suffrage Movement.

The Newark Daily Advertiser yesterday published the following sketch of Aaron M. Powell, of this city as one of the active and prominent advocates for the extension of school suffrage to the women of New Jersey:

It must not be supposed that the only advocates of suffrage in this State have been and are women. Henry B. Blackwell, in writing of those "who were among our most active coadjutors in New Jersey," at the time he and his wife, Lucy Stone, lived here, mentions with the names of the women, the names of the Rev. Arthur Clute, John Whitehead, John Gage and Rowland Johnson.

The State Association and its auxiliary societies have many men members, who in some instances attend the meetings and hold offices. An officer of the State Association is Aaron M. Powell, of Plainfield. Mr. Powell is one of nature's noblemen, and his entire life has been devoted to philanthropic work. The story of all his beneficences is a long one.

He was associated with William Lloyd Garrison, Wendell Phillips, Lucy Stone, and others in the anti-slavery movement. In his character may again be traced the result of Quaker influence, for Mr. Powell is of Quaker ancestry. He represented the Society of Friends, by an address at the World's Fair Parliament on Religions, and was also President of the World's Congress on Social Purity. He has five times crossed the ocean as American member of the executive committee of the International Federation for the Abolition of State Regulated Vice. He crossed the ocean once also to attend an International Prison Congress in London, as a delegate from the Society of Friends.

He is editor of The Philanthropist, a journal published in New York, devoted to the promotion of social purity. His wife, Anna Rice Powell, is associated with him in editorial work. She is the Secretary of the American Purity Alliance, and is President of the newly organized "Equal Rights Society," of Union county.

Sunday-School Workers Entertained.

Superintendent Benjamin R. Western, of the Sunday-school of the Church of the Holy Cross, entertained the officers and teachers at his residence in Washington Park last evening. Advantage was taken of the occasion to make arrangements for the annual Sunday-school ice cream and strawberry festival, which it was decided to hold in the parish rooms on Wednesday, June 19th. A special committee was appointed to prepare for the affair.

Be Careful, Boys.

David Adelmann, of Grant avenue, is confined to his home with inflammation of the lungs, caused by excessive swimming during the recent cool weather.

FLOWERS PORTRAYED.

Successful Presentation of the Flower Queen.

PRETTY WAY OF TELLING A STORY.

A Vision of Floral Beauty, Set Off By Pretty Costumes, Jovial Faces and Sweet Voices—Large Audience in Vincent Chapel Who Were Nicely Entertained—The Participants.

To speak of June, instinctively calls to mind a vision of flowers, and so it was most fitting that the cantata "The Flower Queen" should be given in Vincent chapel, last evening.

On entering the room, the platform called forth attention by its great change; instead of the blank walls, it looked a perfect bower. Evergreens were artistiely arranged at the back and along the sides, while ferns and daisies decorated the front. In the centre, a chair was placed, but was completely hidden by a covering of roses.

The programme opened with an instrumental trio by Mrs. F. A. Pollock, piano; F. A. Pollock, flute; and J. S. Petrie, violin. The selection, Treisluitz Overture, Weber, was rendered in a manner to bring forth hearty applause.

The cantata opened with a chorus, "We are the Flowers," and then as the singers retreated from the stage, L. S. Bond, as the Recluse, entered. After his solo, "Here Would I Rest," a semi-chorus sang in the distance "Rest Thee Here." In the duet, "We Are Nature's Artless Minstrels," by Misses Elizabeth D. Hooker and Lucie P. Davis, the Recluse obtained his first glimpse of the Flowers, and in his enchantment he sings, "Sing On, Sweet Flowers." Then all the Flowers appear and the question arises, who shall be the Queen? Miss Bessie Martin, as the Crocus, states her claim, but before it can be recognized, Miss Lucie P. Davis, as the Carnation, springs forward and denounces her as a pretender and declares she should be the Queen. Heliotrope and Mignonette, Misses Eleanor T. VanDeventer and Maud French, sing of their own beauties in a duet, and then Miss Philips, as the Geranium, and Miss E. D. Hooker, as the Sunflower, each claim the throne.

The Violet, Miss Cora Shepherd, and the Lily, Miss Gertrude Sharp, in a duet, add their claims. The Daisy, Miss Isabel Edwards, the Buttercup, Miss Emma Line, the Dandelion, Miss Helen Harned, the Rose, Miss Elizabeth Hooker, and the Tulip, Miss Carrie Mulford, each have their say, and then a chorus of Poppies soothe the rest of the Flowers to sleep. A good-night song and the first part is over.

In the interlude, another instrumental trio, Second Nocturne, Behr, was greatly enjoyed by all. The audience was also favored by listening to the rendering of that pathetic story, "Brier Rose," by Miss Mary A. Luckey. Miss Luckey is a pupil of Miss Addie Parker Jackson, whose efficient instruction added to Miss Luckey's talent, forms a most enjoyable combination, as was shown by the vigorous applause last evening.

The second part opened with a solo by Miss Hooker, with flute obligato by A. Pollock. After a good morning from all the Flowers, the question of the choice of queen was again brought forward. Miss Edna Harris, Miss Winnie Carroll, and Miss Hazel Martin told of the reasons why they should be made queen, but at last the question was put to the Recluse, and he was asked to decide. Then in the solo, "'Tis Hard to Choose, Mr. Bond finally decided in favor of the Rose. After grand preparations, the coronation takes place, and Miss Hooker, now queen, thanks her subjects in the solo "Filled With Thanks."

And now the Recluse decides to return again to usefulness and contentment, and all unite in a finale chorus.

The costumes of the Flowers were very pretty, being trimmed with the flower represented by the wearer.

The chorus of Flowers consisted of the following: Misses Gertie Sharp, Cora Shepherd, Elsie Horne, Eva Jenkins, Alice Jenkins, Eleanor T. VanDeventer, Lucie P. Davis, Mamie T. Steiner, Mildred Terrill, Maud French, Edna French, Edna Harris, Reta Pond, Isabelle Edwards, Cora Harris, Carrie Mulford, Bessie Martin, Hazel Martin, Emma Line, Louise Norry, Winnie Carroll, Helen Harned, Corrinne Mulford, Edna Moore, Florence Simonds, and Miss Philips.

After the entertainment was concluded many of the audience adjourned to the church parlors, where ice cream and cake furnished a pretext to completely bankrupt the audience. During the evening a little excitement was caused by a bat who presisted in circling about the room to the terror of many of the gentler sex and the delight of the boys.

The most essential part of a successful entertainment is an energetic committee, and the "Flower Queen" seemed specially favored in this direction. The committee, under whose management the cantata was given, consisted of Mrs. D. E. Davis, chairman; Mrs. L. M. French and Mrs. J. R. Joy. The stage was under the successful control of the following committee: Mrs. N. Y. Hull, chairman; Miss Laura Mulford, Miss Susie Jackson, John McNorton and David S. Dunavan.

The other important part of the entertainment, the refreshments, were under the care of the following committee: Mrs. Noah Pike, chairman; Mrs. L. M. French, Mrs. O. L. Jenkins, Mrs. S. C. Baker, Mrs. C. E. Horne, and Mrs. Charles Rugg.

The waitresses were the Misses Alice Jenkins, Eva Jenkins, Mamie Steiner, Edna French, Maud French, Elsie Horne and Edna Harris.

Mrs. Metta Horton Cook, of Brooklyn, acted as conductor in the cantata, and to her well directed efforts much credit is due.

Miss Elizabeth Dwight Hooker, of Elizabeth, the soprano soloist, is the possessor of a very fine voice, which added much pleasure to the entertainment.

After the ice cream had vanished and midnight approached the happy crowd wended their way home, well pleased with the entire entertainment.

STABBED A NEGRO TO DEATH.

Brought About by a Man Interfering in a Domestic Quarrel.

Another murder was added yesterday morning to the already long list of bloody tragedies that have been recorded in Middlesex county's criminal history during the past year.

Shortly after four o'clock, and just as day was breaking, Edward Dabney, a colored laborer, stabbed and killed William Epps, also colored, who had interfered in a quarrel between Dabney and his wife. The murderer is in custody and admits his guilt.

The tragedy occurred at Mutton Hollow, a small settlement near Menlo Park on the road to Iselin and about five miles from Rahway. Dabney and Epps, both of whom were farm laborers, lived here. Dabney is married, and he and his wife's sister lived in a little shanty near the railroad. Epps, who was single, was the lover of Dabney's sister-in-law. Last night he called upon her and the four spent the night drinking and carousing.

May Be Locked All Summer.

The New Brunswick Common Council has adjourned until next Monday night. The new bill in the Legislature affecting the deadlock in the Common Council may be passed over the Governor's veto and become a law. If this is so the Democrats threaten to contest. The Democrats of the Common Council will secure an order from the Supreme Court restraining the mayor from voting in Council. This will put the case over until next fall, and the Council will lie in deadlock all summer.

Plainfielder Hurt at New Brunswick.

John Force, of Plainfield, while riding a bicycle down Main street, Highland Park, yesterday afternoon, punctured the front wheel of his machine, and was thrown to the ground, sustaining severe injuries. Being unable to find a repair shop open, he was compelled to lug his broken wheel to the railroad station, where, after having his injuries dressed, he took a train for home.—New Brunswick Fredonian.

Mr. Egel's New Venture.

George Egel has opened a finely appointed meat market at the corner of Grandview avenue and Somerset street, which has long been needed in that section of the borough. His stock of meats will be of the best, and his accommodations for keeping them in good condition are splendid. Mr. Egel will sell at reasonable prices, and orders will be called for and promptly delivered.

Will Probably Come to Plainfield.

The State Christian Endeavor convention will be held at Atlantic City this year. Paterson has begun active operations for the convention in '96, but the Endeavorers of this city are making a strong effort to bring the gathering to Plainfield, and it is believed that the "Colorado of the East" will triumph. All Union county delegates are enthusiastic for Plainfield.

Worthy Workers.

Edna Smith and Aimee L. Emmons, two bright little misses, will hold an ice cream and strawberry festival for the benefit of the fresh air fund on the vacant lot at the corner of Craig place and Grove street, adjoining the residence of Dr. Adams, on Friday evening, June 28th.

DAYS OF STUDY ARE OVER.

FAREWELL RECEPTION OF GRADUATES AT THE CHESTNUTS.

The Class of '95 Handsomely Entertain Their Friends—The Rooms Tastefully Decorated With Flowers.

The Class of '95, for the last time, gathered with their friends at the Seminary last evening. The rooms were tastefully decorated with flowers, and the chandeliers were hung with roses and delicate greens. The guests were received in the drawing room by Miss Kenyon and Miss Arnold, assisted by the graduates, Misses Gertrude Haviland, Marion Henderson, Mary Whiton and Mabelle Phillips. The guests were again welcomed by Miss Clark and Miss F. E. Kenyon in the dancing hall, when, until past twelve o'clock, all enjoyed the friendly chat, good floor, and fine music furnished by Professor Conde. L. VanBuren was floor manager.

Among those present were: Mrs. A. W. Haviland, Mrs. J. J. Henderson, Mr. and Mrs. Phillips, Mrs. Henry Opdyke, Mr. Whiton, Mr. and Mrs. Lawson, Mrs. Chapman, Miss Butt, of Georgia, Miss Hurd, of Dover, Miss Bessie Titsworth, the Misses Haviland, Miss Middledith, the Misses Shreve, Miss Patterson, Miss Faber, the Misses Tracy, Miss Bousquet, of Iowa, the Misses MacCready, Miss Suffern, the Misses Bushnell, Miss Clapp, Messrs. Howard Foster, of New York, Henry Wallace Shreve, of Trenton, George Ryder, C. Faber, E. Patterson, M. Sykes, H. Turrell, E. Rushmore, C. Dupee, A. Beebe, J. Middledith, A. West, E. Field, Hubbard, and Fish.

THE CAP AND APRON.

A Laughable Sketch Given in the Park Avenue Church.

An enjoyable and meritorious entertainment was given in the Park Avenue church last evening, which was well attended. A short and laughable sketch, entitled "The Cap and Apron," was presented. It was preceded by a banjo solo by Robert Taylor, accompanied by Miss Alice Coard. The cast of the sketch was as follows: Arthur Richlugh, M. P., Celestino Ologage; Helen, his wife, Miss Daisy Hagan; Lucille VanCortlandt, Miss Lulu Hagan; Victor Henshaw, the Earl of Dorincourt, Harry Johnson.

At the conclusion of the entertainment refreshments were served.

Was Not a Rattler.

The snake which bit Harry Williams last Friday, and which was on exhibition at the Press office for a day or two, was taken to New York, where Charles Bullman, of this city, and Dr. Bashford Dean, of Columbia college, made an examination of the reptile. It was first thought that it was a rattlesnake, but the examination by these scientific experts proved it to be a Heterodon Plalyrhinos, commonly called a hognose adder. It has venomous fangs, but is harmless.

Park Club Enlargement Postponed.

At the meeting of the Board of Governors of the Park club last night the matter of enlarging the club house was postponed for future consideration. As was stated in The Press yesterday they decided to have their usual Fourth of July display of fireworks and reception.

Watch Out For These.

Chief of Police Grant received a telegram from Chief of Police C. H. M. Chesney of Trenton yesterday afternoon asking him to look out for a light sorrel horse with hind legs part white, white spot on face, heavy build, and top wagon with load of dishes, which had been stolen from Trenton.

Ordained Yesterday, Married Tomorrow.

Rev. Garrett Conover was ordained to the ministry of the Dutch Reformed church yesterday and installed at Hawthorne, a suburb of Paterson. His marriage to Miss Josephine VanArsdale, of Grove street, will take place tomorrow.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mrs. Thos. Eggers, 139 Florida St., San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result everything else, then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottle at Randolph's drug store. Regular size, 50c and $1.

DEBS BROKE HIS WORD

Failed To Return To Be Taken to Jail.

The Marshal Was Vexed When the A. R. U. Leader Was Not on Time. Reported That He Put in Appearance This Morning—Other Members Surrendered and Go to Jail.

Chicago, June 12.—Six of the American Railway union directors, without their famous leader, Eugene V. Debs, were taken to the county jail at Woodstock, Ill., last evening by three deputy United States marshals to serve the remainder of their sentences of three months each for contempt of the federal court's injunction during the great railroad strike.

Debs' Absence Caused Surprise.

The prisoners were Keliher, Rodgers, Elliott, Burns, Hogan and Goodwin. The absence of Debs caused much talk among his colleagues and the officers of the law, as it was confidently expected that he would keep his promise to Mr. Arnold to appear at his office at 4 o'clock in the afternoon and surrender his liberty. He not only did not appear at the marshal's office but he failed to be at the depot, although he knew what time the train started.

Vexed the Marshal.

The marshal, as the responsible officer, was vexed, but was not afraid that the A. R. U. would evade arrest. As the party was leaving for the depot the marshal said: "Debs told me he had some business to attend to and to see a few frends. If he does not turn up at once I will send him along on the next train."

Debs in a Jolly Mood.

Debs arrived in the city from his home at Terre Haute in the morning and went at once to the marshal's office, arriving there at 11:30. He was in a jolly frame of mind and carried a bulging valise, which he left in care of the marshal when he went away in company of a friend. He talked to the United Press reporter in a jocular mood about spending his "vacation" and said he was glad he would be taken back to the Woodstock jail.

Phelan To Be Acting President.

"As a matter of course," he added, "it's disagreeable, but I have become philosophical. By the authority vested in me I have deputized Frank V. Phelan, of St. Louis, formerly a conductor, to act as president of the railway union in my absence. The business which is usually transacted by the board of A. R. U. directors will be done by us from our place of confinement and there will be a quorum always."

Will Edit the Paper in Jail.

The editing of the official A. R. U. paper will be continued by Debs in jail, and the work of organizing throughout the country will be done by a new corps, which was appointed by the directors before they left for Woodstock.

Howard Taken to Joliet.

George Howard, vice-president of the A. R. U., preferred to spend the remainder of his three months' sentence apart from his former colleagues, on account of the strained relations due to his connection with the rival organization, the American Industrial union. He was taken to the county jail at Joliet this morning. All the men have served sixteen days, and their sentences are three months each, with the exception of Debs, which is six months.

Debs Still Absent This Morning.

Early this morning it was announced at the office of the United States marshal that Debs had not reported there, but that his whereabouts were known to deputies who had been sent to find him, and the marshal had no fear of any attempt to escape. Later it was said that Debs had reported to the marshal.

LEFT ON A BURNING VESSEL.

Passengers Abandoned by the Crew of a British Boat.

St. Malo, France, June 12.—News has been received here of the abandonment of the British vessel Why Not, bound for the Island of Jersey, and loaded with fodder. The vessel was on fire when abandoned.

Left to Their Fate.

The crew of the Why Not deserted the passengers when the vessel caught fire, and, taking to the boats, succeeded in landing at Erquy, department of the Cotes du Nord; not far from here. The fate of the passengers is not yet known.

To Sail for America.

Liverpool, June 12.—Among the passengers who will sail for New York today on board the White Star line steamship Germanic are Mr. and Mrs. Pierpont Morgan and Sir Frederick Pollock, corpus professor of jurisprudence in the University of Oxford, who has been invited to deliver the commemoration address on June 25 to the Harvard Law School association.

Consider Banquet a Flyer.

London, June 12.—Truth will say today that unless Mr. Dwyer's horse, Banquet II. wins a race within the next few weeks he will certainly be the summer favorite for the Czarewitch and Cambridgeshire, as a great legion of backers are firmly convinced that he is in reality a flyer of a high class.

Insulted King Leopold.

Brussels, June 12.—During the debate in the chamber of deputies yesterday afternoon a man in the public gallery suddenly shouted out insulting expressions concerning King Leopold and the ministry. He was expelled and afterwards arrested by the police.

Patti Reappears in Opera.

London, June 12.—An immense audience assembled in Convent garden last night to welcome Mme. Patti on her reapperance in opera. She appeared as Violetta in "Traviata".

Reject Silver as the Only Issue.

Des Moines, Ia., June 12.—The populist state convention has rejected all advances from those who would make silver the only issue in the next campaign.

To Raise China's Loan.

Paris, June 12.—Five French banks have signed an agreement to raise China's loan of $80,000,000 under a Russian guarantee.

NASH'S ENORMOUS STRENGTH.

The Tufts College Student Breaks the Record Made by Klein.

Boston, June 12.—At Tufts college yesterday Henry Ray Nash, of the class of '97, who already holds the college record for strength, broke the record made by Klein, of Harvard, last winter. At the time that Klein made his wonderful record he issued a challenge for an intercollegiate strength test to Lance, of Amherst, and Nash, of Tufts, but owing to some difficulty in the arrangement of details, the contest was declared off.

Total Strength of 3547.56.

Nash, however, feeling certain that he could break the record held by Harvard's strong man took a private examination under medical director of Godfried gymnasium yesterday with the startling result of securing a total strength of 3547.56 pounds. This is the best record that he had ever made in an examination lasting only fifteen minutes. This beats Klein's record about 400 pounds.

Broke the Machine.

Nash's enormous strength lies chiefly in the muscles of his back and his legs. In fact his total strength would probably have been greater if he had not broken the hickory handle of the lifting machine, making further tests impossible. The greatest leg lift that Nash made previously to breaking the machine was 570 kilos, and this total was used in making the average, although he undoubtedly lifted more than that sum.

SAVED BY RETURNING TIDE.

Three Men Clinging to Wreckage Washed Ashore.

Washington, June 12.—Consul Gorman, at Matamoras, Mexico, reports to the state department the wreck of the American sloop Buffalo Bill, of Port Lavaca, Tex., off Bagdad, Mexico, at the mouth of the Rio Grande. The consul writes that the owners of the sloop, C. Jones and W. Johnson, with a Mexican named Jose Duarte, attempted to cross the swift current of the river at its mouth and were capsized, the sloop going to pieces and the men clinging to the wreck were swept ten miles out to sea.

Saved by Returning Tide.

Captain Flynn, of the Brazos life saving station, nine miles north of the spot, went to the relief of the sloop, but could find no trace whatever of the wreck, darkness having intervened, though he pursued the search till midnight. The returning tide drove the wreck with the men clinging to it ten hours later to the shore of Padre island, nearly twenty miles north of the river, where the men were saved.

A DOZEN TRAMPS CREMATED.

The Freight Wreck at Sargent Probably Very Serious.

Erie, Pa., June 12.—John Mitchell, a boy tramp, who was taken from the wreck at Sargent yesterday morning says there were fifteen in his party on the freight train. There is every reason to believe that there were at least a dozen tramps cremated in the mass of cars and merchandise. An oil tank in the wreck made the fire very hot and rapid. The loss will foot up ten or fifteen thousand dollars in merchandise alone.

MR. HARMON IN CHARGE.

Introduced to Department of Justice Officials by Secretary Olney.

Washington, June 12.—After the cabinet meeting Judson Harmon, the new attorney general, accompanied by Secretary Olney, drove to the department of justice, where Mr. Olney introduced Mr. Harmon to Solicitor General Conrad and the other chief officials of the department. Mr. Harmon spent the afternoon in receiving the officials and newspaper men who called. He made a most favorable impression on all he met.

TEUTONIC'S NEW RECORD.

She Makes the Eastward Voyage in 5 Days, 23 Hours and 51 Minutes.

Queenstown, June 12.—The White Star line steamer Teutonic, Captain Cameron, from New York for Liverpool, passed Daunts rock at 10:18 o'clock last night, making the passage in 5 days, 23 hours and 51 minutes. This is her fastest long-route passage, she having covered 2,863 knots. On June 8, the Teutonic passed a large iceberg.

Degrees Confirmed.

WRECK OF MISSIONS

Reports from Chinese Provinces Confirmed.

Protection Was Refused the Missionaries Until the Mob Had Completed the Work of Destruction—Officials of the Province of Sechuen Openly Encouraged the Mob.

Shanghai June 12.—The report of the total destruction of the missions at Chentua, Kiating, and Yeching has been confirmed. The local officials refused protection to the missionaries until the mob had completed the work of demolishing the buildings. The mission stations at other places have been threatened. About twenty adults, besides a number of children, have taken refuge at Chengtu and Yamen. The viceroy is blamed for the affair.

Viceroy Encouraged the Mob.

London, June 12.—According to a dispatch from Shanghai, the loss of property as a result of the recent rioting at Chengtu, Kiating, and Yeching, amounts to several million dollars. The Chinese officials, headed by the viceroy of the province of Sechuen, openly encouraged the mob to all sorts of outrages, and the petitions of foreigners for protection were refused.

Missionaries Safe.

New York, June 12.—The following cable dispatch from the Rev. J. R. Hykes, at Shaghai, was received at the office of the Methodist Missionary society, No. 150 Fifth avenue, this morning: "Property at Chengtu destroyed. Missionaries all safe." "These advices," said Dr. Baldwin, the recording secretary of the society, "are official, and while confirming reports of property loss, should set at rest the rumors of the massacre of missionaries. There was no massacre."

THE CORNELL CREW PRAISED.

Good Points Observed in Their Work at Henley.

London, June 12.—The St. James' Gazette, in a long article written by an expert oarsman on the Cornell crew now training near Henley, commends the crew. The writer says that their style is uniform, far more so than usually seen in England, that they feather clean and have a good, lively recovery in which they set an example to many English crews. They do not attempt to row secretly, or to suppress inspection of their boat. They appear to be thorough sportsmen, try to do their best and have already created a favorable impression at Henley. In conclusion, the writer says that the weak feature of the crew is their want of reach.

MUST DISARM THE BEDOUINS.

Indemnity for the Attack on Consulates at Jiddah Also Made.

Constantinople, June 12.—The British, French and Russian ambassadors to Turkey have formally demanded that the port disarm the Bedouins at Jiddah and pay an indemnity for the attack on the foreign consulates at that place. It is understood that the port, in reply, urged the extreme difficulty that would be encountered in an attempt to disarm the Bedouins.

A BOSTON GIRL'S LIFE

Saved from Ruin and Despair by the Timely Aid of a Noted Woman.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

IS there anything more truly pathetic than the cry for help that springs from the anguished heart of a young girl—a beautiful girl who sees ahead only suffering and uncerainty?

But oh, what joy and gladness her young heart pours forth when she realizes that her dreaded enemy, the blasting influence, is gone,—banished forever.

This sunshine and joy is now the happy portion of Miss Florence ——— of Beacon Street, Boston.

She often tells of her suffering from the suppression of the menses. The pain was excruciating. The doctors, instead of removing the cause of her ailment, plied her each month with morphine to prevent convulsions; but the trouble was permitted to exist.

When she could endure no more,—prostration was imminent and future hopeless,—her family procured a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which, surprising to all, rapidly and permanently cured her.

In writing to Mrs. Pinkham, pouring forth her gratitude and happiness, she says: "Oh! that I could make every suffering woman try your valuable medicine! How they would bless you!"

$75,000 WERE STOLEN

Mr. Hutchins Discovers Another $25,000 Missing.

A Tin Box Containing $50,000 and Other Securities Valued at $25,000 Taken from His Safe at Lowell, Me.—Believes Some One Living in the Town Stole Them.

Boston, June 12.—A special from Lovell, Me., says: James E. Hutchins, who lost a tin box from the safe of his store Thursday night, containing $50,000 has made the discovery that other papers kept in the safe were stolen at the same time. These papers are valued at $25,000, and swells the grand total secured by the burglars to $75,000.

Will Offer a Large Reward.

There is a new theory concerning the robbery. Mr Hutchins thinks that some one in town who has a grudge against him may have learned the combination and stolen the bonds. He will offer a large reward for the return of the securities. The old gentleman is probably worth $150,000 and owns thousands and thousands of acres of valuable timber land in the state.

PRISONER IN A HEN HOUSE.

A Maddened Bull Prevents a Mother from Saving Her Drowning Child.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 12.—At Verbank, a few miles east of this city, yesterday, while Mrs. Eugene Ham was out in the yard, she was chased into a hen house by a mad young bull. While she was shut in, her young child, aged 3 years, who had followed the mother into the yard, fell into the basin of a fountain located in the yard, and, on account of the threatening attitude of the infuriated bull, the woman was unable to go to the rescue of the child, and it was drowned before its mother's eyes. Mrs. Ham's frantic cries brought her husband to the spot and the bull was driven away. The child was dead when taken from the water.

BICYCLE RACES.

Several Well Contested Events at the National Circuit Meeting.

Rochester, N. Y., June 12.—The National circuit bicycle races which were held here yesterday afternoon under the auspices of the Lake View wheelmen were attended by 8,000 people. All of the events were well contested, especially the mile open, which was won by E. C Bald. The state record for a paced mile was broken by F. J. Titus, his time being 2:30, three seconds faster than the former record. At the end of the afternoon's races an attempt was made by Mike Dirnberger to lower Titus' mark. The best Dirnberger could do was 2:04 3-5. A. A. Zimmerman rodean exhibition mile in 2-15 1-5.

REDWINE PUT TO WORK.

Atlanta's Bank Wrecker Discharged from the Prison Hospital.

Columbus, O., June 12.—Louis Redwine, the bank wrecker of Atlanta, Ga., who has been in the hospital since May 5, was discharged yesterday and returned to his position in the secretary's office in the Ohio penitentiary. When Redwine was admitted to the hospital it was thought he would never leave it alive, as he gave every evidence of being in the last stages of consumption. His case has attracted a great deal of attention and a strong effort is being made to secure his release.

AFTER TWO MONTHS ILLNESS.

Mrs. Bridemaugh Reduced from 160 to 35 Pounds When She Died.

Reading, Pa., June 12.—Mrs. Lena Bridemaugh, of Gibraltar, this county, who less than two months ago was in the enjoyment of excellent health died, Monday night. At the time she was taken ill she weighed 160 pounds. At her death her body was reduced to a mere skeleton, weighing not more than thirty-five pounds. Her disease puzzled the physicians, and she literally starved to death, being unable to take any nourishment for forty-eight days.

THE ATLANTA EXPOSITION.

The President and Cabinet Will Attend in October.

Washington, June 12.—The president will visit the Atlanta exposition during the coming autumn. He will not, however, attend on the opening day, but will make the trip to Georgia and attend the exposition during the last week in October. All the members of his cabinet will attend at about the same time.

Will Not Associate with Drunkards.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 12.—At the last monthly meeting of the sodality of the children of Mary of St. Peter's Catholic church in this city, a motion was unanimously carried that all members shall thereforth discountenance association with any young men addicted to the use of intoxicants. There are 167 members in the society.

To Form a New Cabinet.

Stockholm, June 12.—In accordance with the request telegraphed by the Stang ministry to King Oscar II, that he should come to Christiania and form a new cabinet, his majesty, accompanied by the queen and crown prince, has left for the Norwegian capital.

WRONGDOING MINISTERS.

Lutheran Ministerium Punishes Its Erring Members.

Philadelphia, June 12.—At the fifth day's session of the Evangelical Lutheran ministerium the report of the committee on discipline was presented. The report first recommended that Rev. J. J. Reitz, of Cherryville, Pa., be excluded from the ministerium This met with the approval of the delegates, although the matter was freely discussed.

Rev. Mr. Kuehner Pleaded Guilty.

The next item in the report told of the confession of Rev. M. J. Kuehner, of Stetlersville, Pa., to "imprudence and impropriety," but added that he denied the act of immorality. The preamble recommended that Rev. Kuehner be publicly reprimanded and requested to resign by Jan. 1, 1896. Rev. J. H. Fritz, of York, Pa., stated that the ministerium must recognize congregational rights, and he thought it wrong for the report to state when Rev. Kuehner should resign. Then a motion was made that the word "privately" instead of "publicly" reprimanded be inserted in the committee's recommendation. This was lost. Dr. Fry said if Rev. Kuehner was in the church he should at once be reprimanded.

Publicly Reprimanded.

The accused clergyman walked to the front of the church with clasped hands and bowed head, and faced President Seip, who addressed him thus: "It is my painful duty in accordance with the constitution of the ministerium to publicly reprimand you in consequence of your actions not in conformity with office. May God help you to resist the devil, so that you may endeavor to do your duty hereafter."

Expressed His Sorrow.

Rev. Kuehner, after President Seip had concluded, raised his head and said that it was with sorrow and regret that he had to be called to the front and reprimanded.

WAS M'KANE AT GRAVESEND?

A Resident Declares That the Convict Spent Sunday Night at Home.

Brooklyn, N. Y., June 12.—An evening paper prints a story to the effect that John Y. McKane, the ex-Gravesend boss now serving a term in Sing Sing, was in Gravesend Sunday and that he spent Sunday night at home with his wife. The paper gives as authority for the statement one C. H. Murray, a resident of Gravesend. He says he talked with McKane and that the ex-boss was thoroughly disguised.

BRIDGE PLANS APPROVED.

Secretary Lamont Adopts That of the New York Company.

Washington, June 12.—Secretary Lamont has approved the general plans for a suspension bridge over the Hudson river at New York, submitted by the New York and New Jersey Bridge company, of New York, in which the New York and New Jersey Bridge company, of New Jersey, joined. The judge advocate general advised him that all requirements of the law had been met, and the chief of engineers approved the general plans and recommended their acceptance. The precise location is yet to be determined, and detailed plans and drawings must be submitted and approved by the secretary of war before any construction can begin. The plans approved are said to have been drawn by the Union Bridge company, and call for a six-track suspension bridge with span from pier head to pier head.

MONK HEINRICH ARRESTED.

His Libel Suit Against an Editor Proves To Be a Boomerang.

Berlin, June 12.—The trial of the libel suit brought against Max Scharre, a journalist, and two others in the Aachen court, for accusing the monks of Mariaburg of ill-treating lunatics confined in their institution, has resulted in the arrest of Brother Heinrich, who was chiefly implicated by the evidence adduced at the trial.

Japan's Fourth Treaty.

Washington, June 11.—The new commercial treaty between Japan and Russia, which was signed at St. Petersburg yesterday, is the fourth which Japan has secured with the leading countries of the world. Great Britain was the first to make a treaty on the new lines proposed by Japan, the United States was second and Italy third.

Matched for Running Races.

Boston, June 12.—G. W. Orton, the University of Pennsylvania track-miler; Tommy Conneff, the holder of the world's record and Charley Beane, of Franklin Falls, Mass., the present five-mile champion, have been matched to run a two-mile scratch race at the Worcester-Suffolk games at the Oval, Worcester, Mass., on July 4.

Graduating Exercises at West Point.

West Point, N. Y., June 12.—There are more persons here to-day than at any time during the exercises in connection with the examination of the cadets. The graduating exercises began this morning at 10:30 o'clock. Many army officers of note are here and will remain until the conclusion of the exercises.

Novel Race in France.

Paris, June 12.—About thirty vehicles propelled by either petroleum or steam power, started at noon yesterday from the Place d'Armes, in Versailles, to race to Bordeaux and back, a total distance of 750 miles. The novel contest was organized by James Gordon Bennett, Baron de Neyfelt and others.

Detectives for Gray Gables.

Buzzards Bay, June 12.—Mrs. Henry L. Thurber and children reached Marion last night. Mr. Thurber will probably arrive with President Cleveland within a day or two. During the summer three officers from the secret service bureau will do police duty about the president's grounds.

Catholic Church Burned.

Haverstraw, N. Y., June 12.—Fire destroyed the interior of St. Joseph's Catholic church at Grassy Point yesterday. The altar and vestments were totally destroyed. The fire caught from the candles on the altar.

Resumed Work After Two Years.

Lebanon, Pa., June 12.—The Bird Coleman furnaces at Cornwall, which have been idle the past two years, were blown in this morning, giving employment to about 120 men.

All Quiet at Elkhorn.

Bluefield, W. Va., June 12.—The night passed without trouble in the Elkhorn mining district. The expected outbreak did not materialise.

LOSS OF THE BARK LONG

Struck by Lightning and Burned at Sea.

Captain and Three Seamen Burned To Death—One Man Swims Ten Miles Among Sharks to Shore—Other Members of Crew Rescued After Being in Water Seven Hours.

Quarantine, S. I., June 12.—The little British steamer Antilia, which trades between this port and the Bahamas arrived here last night from Nassau, N. P., with twenty passengers on board. Among these were six seamen, survivors of the crew of the bark Carrie E. Long, which was struck by lightning at 9 o'clock on the night of May 21, off Gun Cay, Bahamas.

Explosion Followed the Lightning.

When the bark was struck by lightning an explosion occurred in her cargo of petroleum and acids and the vessel was instantly enveloped in flames. Capt. Rolf and the mate, with two seamen, were burned to death. The other members of the crew jumped into the sea and swam for their lives, grasping spars and floating material and endeavored to keep afloat.

Swam Ten Miles Among Sharks.

Tip Stanley, a fine, robust looking seaman, about 25 years of age, swam to the shore, a distance of about ten miles. He had two small oars, or rather paddles, with him and used them to frighten off the sharks, with which those waters are infested. The exertion necessitated by the constant splashing of the oars nearly exhausted him several times, but the fear of the sharks prevented him from sinking.

Picked Up After Seven Hours.

In an exhausted condition, after being in the water seven hours, he landed at Gun Cay at 4 o'clock in the morning. A short time after daylight the other men, five in number, were picked up by native fishermen and brought ashore. Later they were taken to Nassau in a small schooner and there embarked on the Antilia for New York. None of the survivors were able to save a thing. Stanley was entirely naked when he landed.

Left Entirely Destitute.

The men were entirely destitute, but were supplied by the natives of Gun Cay. The names of the survivors are Tip Stanley, John Corcoran, James Corcoran, Joseph Jackson, Michael Namara and Larsen Iverson. The Carrie E. Long hails from New York. She was known as a tank bark, that is she carried petroleum in tanks.

BALTIC CANAL CELEBRATION.

Arrival of the Austrian Squadron. French Newspaper Comment.

Kiel, June 12.—The Austro-Hungarian squadron, consisting of four cruisers, commanded by the Archduke Charles Stephen, which is to take part in the ceremonies planned to celebrate the opening of the Baltic and North Sea canal, entered the roadstead last night. It was greeted with salutes and cheers.

Much Comment in Paris.

Paris, June 12.—The proposed visit of a French squadron to Kiel continues to create much comment in spite of the explanation made by M. Hanoteaux, the minister for foreign affairs, in the chamber of deputies. The radical and socialist newspapers persist in declaring that the visit to Kiel is not justified.

Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone Sail for Kiel.

London, June 12.—Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone have gone aboard a steamer which will sail for Hamburg and thence for Kiel, to enable its passengers to witness the opening of the Baltic and North Sea canal.

THE WOUNDED STUDENTS.

Ohl and Cochran Both Passed a Quiet Night and Are Improved.

Princeton, N. J., June 12.—Frederick Ohl and Garrett Cochran, the students who were shot by a negro on Saturday night, had a quiet night and the condition of both this morning is more favorable to recovery. Dr. Bull remains in attendance. After another twenty-four hours it is probable that a definite opinion can be expressed as to the prospect of Ohl's recovery. Cochran seems out of danger.

Ohl Was Accidentally Shot.

Later developments would go to show that Ohl was attempting to rescue or force away his classmate when he received the more serious injury. The examinations of the surgeons point to the fact that all three shots were intended for Cochran. The one that passed through Ohl's stomach grazed the side of Cochran, and the one that struck the former in the wrist grazed the latter's shoulder. This would seem to indicate that Ohl was behind his companion and attempting his rescue.

Reformed Church of America.

Grand Rapids, Mich., June 12.—At yesterday's session of the synod of Reformed church of America, Dr. J. W. Scudder of Arcot, Indiana, was elected professor of theology in the seminary at Arcot. The synod fixed upon Catskill, N. Y., as the place of meeting in 1896.

To Continue To Race at Roby.

Chicago, June 12.—Judge Horton has deposed Receiver Moore from the charge of the Roby racing affairs. He decided that racing may continue, and placed the business conduct of the organization in the hands of Michael McInerney.

Reapportionment at New York.

New York, June 12.—The board of aldermen adopted the minority plan (democratic) for the reapportionment of this city. There are thirty-five assembly districts. The democrats have twenty certain and have the best chances in five other districts.

The Floods in Southern France.

Pau, June 12.—The floods continue throughout Navarre and the lowlands of the Pyrenees. Severe suffering is reported from the Basque country. Roads, bridges and railroads have been swept away and crops have been destroyed.

Call It Gerrymander.

Buffalo, June 12.—The Erie county board of supervisors redistricted the county yesterday. The change favors the republicans and the democrats call it a gerrymander.

From present prospects Coney Island will soon be but a ghost of its former self.

Governor Werts yesterday vetoed the bill prohibiting justices' of the peace from holding court in a lawyer's office.

The present trolley road system in Plainfield is of no earthly benefit to the city or to the stockholders. Benefit both by making the proposed extension.

There is something radically wrong with Uncle Sam when its takes two nights and one day for New Brunswick papers to reach The Press office.

No better evidence of the culture of Plainfield is needed than the graduating exercises which are now being carried on in the admirable private and public schools of the city.

The State law which seeks to compel merchants and shop keepers to close their places of business any one day in the week out of the seven is one of the most ridiculous and inconsistent enactments ever placed upon the statute books.

The clamor for the impeachment of Secretary of State Kelsey existed principally in the minds of a few editorial writers. The Republican members of the Legislature caucused on the matter yesterday, and declined to take action towards impeachment.

Governor Werts yesterday sent to the Senate the nomination of ex-Governor George C. Ludlow, of New Brunswick, to fill the vacancy on the Supreme Court bench occasioned by the transfer of Judge Reed to the Court of Chancery. Mr. Ludlow is a life long Democrat, and a man who has by his own efforts and intelligence attained a prominent place in the public life of New Jersey.

Senator Daly, the Democratic member of the investigating committee, has presented a minority report of the work of the committee to the body of which he is a member. While, of course, the presentation of this minority report is merely perfunctory in so far as concerns the suggestions he offers having any effect on the action of the Legislature, yet many of the conclusions which he has formed from intimate asssociation with the work of the investigation are worthy of serious consideration by his fellow Legislators. Senator Daly says in his report that he agrees with the majority of the committee in the charge that unwarranted extravagance has existed in the purchase of supplies for certain branches of the State government, but adds that it "has not resulted from a criminal intent to defraud, but rather from a negligent performance of duty and a lack of scrutiny and care in the exercise of office." Continuing he says:

I am forcibly impressed with this one-sided investigation. I look upon it with fear and dread, for I am led to believe that many have been smirched by the mere suggestion of their names in connection therewith, but who, if afforded an opportunity to be fully heard, might easily prove their innocence. In these times of excitement let us be fair and just, and give vent to no utterances merely to create false public sentiment, or to advance personal and individual ambitions. When the injury is done we cannot recall it, and in our calm and cool moments many pangs of conscience will ensue, but no way is left for making reparation to the injured.

These are words of advice, that should be calmly and fairly considered by Legislators.

A JUST COMPLAINT.

Streets Can Be Sprinkled Too Much as Well as Too Little.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—

Having experienced a good deal of annoyance on account of the condition of our streets recently, I would like to call attention to the excessive flooding by the sprinkling carts. It is impossible to get through them at times on the wheel without getting well decorated with mud and occasionally a good dusting where there is no sprinkling at all. And it is hard to say which is the worst. Can there not be an improvement in the situation, by not having so much water put on at one time, or why could not the city, (which so much has been claimed for), be much improved if the streets could be sprinkled all over alike, and in such a way, we would not be obliged to wade through both mud and dust, and this expense to be met by a proportionate tax upon all the citizens, as it is a benefit to everyone who lives here, if properly done. A Subscriber.

A Runaway Horse.

A horse belonging to Frank Patience, the carpenter, ran away from where was standing on Mercer avenue yesterday afternoon, and received severe injury by colliding with an electric light pole. The wagon was wrecked. It was with difficulty that Mr. Patience captured the horse, but he was finally found on Duer street.

The Eye.

The human eye seldom fulfills all the requirements of a perfect optical instrument. When, however, the error is slight it may be disregarded; but when sufficient to produce headache, pain in the eyes, or poor vision it should be corrected at once by wearing properly adjusted glasses. If your eyes are causing you pain or anxiety call on Leech, Stiles & Co.'s specialist who will be at 107 East Front street, on Thursday from ten a. m. to five p. m.

Borough Police Business.

Richard Coriell, of the borough, was taken before Justice Crosley last night, for buying junk without a license, and pleaded not guilty. He will have a hearing tomorrow evening at eight o'clock. George Bilyeu, for being drunk and noisy, was arrested by Marshal Doud, last night. He was put under $50 bail to appear for a hearing tomorrow evening at eight o'clock.

McArdle Discharged.

The case of Day against McArdle, which was tried before Justice Mosher yesterday, was reopened this morning on the request of Lawyer DeMeza, who represents McArdle. After an argument of the case the judge finally dismissed it. The verdict yesterday was that McArdle be held for the Grand Jury.

Stop the Door From Slamming.

George W. Squiers has purchased a State agency for a valuable door check. It will hold any door wide open, half open, or in any position. He is taking orders for them as fast as he shows them and explains their worth. When he calls, allow him to show it and explain its simplicity, and you'll order one.

It Starts Tomorrow.

The special wash goods sale at White's, when the entire stock of fine wash goods will be sold at cut prices. They name some remarkably low prices on some of their newest and choicest lines.

Closing Exercises at the Manual School.

The closing exercises of the Plainfield Manual Training and Grammar school will take place on Friday afternoon, June 14th, at four o'clock, at 309 East Front street.

CYCLING COMMENT.

The Crescent Wheelmen hold a meeting this evening.

William Nicholson, of Grant avenue, rode to Long Branch and back on Sunday. He says the roads are in fine condition.

Herbert Bonny, of New Brunswick, rode his wheel to Plainfield yesterday. Robert Tingley, whose guest he was, met him at Metuchen and accompanied him to town.

Physical Director P. S. Page and Frank Brown, of the Orange Y. M. C. A., wheeled to Plainfield last night, and were entertained by the bicycle committee of the local association.

The Elizabeth Athletic Cyclers, the winners of the Union County ten-mile road championship, will hold their annual club handicap race on June 22d. The course will be the Morris avenue route to Springfield and return, ten miles.

Ernest T. Hand, of this city, will leave Friday evening for Coney Island, where he will enter in several bicycle races which are to take place there on Saturday. Mr. Hand is one of the Spalding team, and has won a number of races in this State and Connecticut.

The following is a timely and excellent piece of advice by an old and experienced wheelman as to the proper oiling of a bicycle: A common error in connection with the care of a bicycle is excessive oiling. The novice only thinks that if he empties his can on his bicycle promiscuously all is well. In oiling a bicycle there is a right and wrong way. Care should be taken to learn where to place the oil. It is better to put the oil in the oil-hole in a front-wheel axle than over the axle itself, first freeing the oil-hole from all accumulated dust. Do not fill the oil-hole too full, remembering that it is better to oil the wheel a little at a time and often.

The racing men of the League of American Wheelmen are greatly dissatisfied over the action of Chairman Gideon of the Racing Board in awarding the one-mile national championship to Denver. It has been customary to run all the championship events at the national meets of the L. A. W., and the change of programme this year will rob the Asbury Park meet of an attractive event. The one-mile championship is really the most important event by reason of the fact that it is a distance that all the leading Class B men enter. To decide the championships as the Racing Board has done this year has resulted in arousing severe criticism, and riders who now aspire for championship honors must travel all over the country instead of attending one special meet as heretofore.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destored forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflammed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh, that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

INS AND OUTS.

The Y. M. C. A. baseball team is about as evenly matched a team as we have here. Their new uniforms set them off handsomely and will undoubtedly do a great deal towards inspiring the boys with confidence in themselves when they face their formidable opponents, which has not occurred yet.—Der Somerset Bote.

Mr. Blimm Escapes a Fine.

The case of the city against Jacob Blimm, charged with selling beer to minors, was tried before Judge Coddington this afternoon at two o'clock, Lawyer Harry C. Runyon appearing for Blimm and Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh for the city. On account of this being Mr. Blimm's first offense and the fact of his bearing a good reputation sentence was suspended.

William L. Wann Steps Off.

The marriage of Miss Maude Barrett, daughter of George P. Barrett, of New York, to William Lawrence Wann, took place today at the home of the bride. Mr. Wann formerly lived in Plainfield and was well known.

PAID DEAR FOR HIS RIDE.

Trying to Elude the Conductor, a Man Beheaded By the Train.

A shocking accident occurred on the platform of the Central Railroad station in Cranford last night, when John Callahan was beheaded by the wheels of the 8:57 o'clock westbound train. The man, who was a laborer, boarded the train at Roselle. He was without money, and in his efforts to elude the conductor, jumped off before the train had fully stopped, and fell under the wheels. County Physician O'Reilly removed the body to the Elizabeth morgue, as the only relative of the dead man is a sister living in Boston.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—The annual meeting of the Board of Trade will be held tomorrow night.

—The canning season is near at hand, and Gavett has a large supply of the best quality fruit jars in stock.

—An aromatic fragrance is what Leggett's sprinkler top bottles of tooth wash imparts to the mouth. His ad tells all about them.

—J. F. Parker, of Grove street and Mercer avenue, has had the fence removed from the front of his property, thereby greatly improving the appearance of the place.

—Ira G. Hulbert, the contractor and builder, commenced today the erection of a building next to A. D. Thompson's office on North avenue, for J. P. Taylor. It will be used as an office.

—The Alumni Association, of the North Plainfield public school, will celebrate its eighth anniversary by a reception on Friday evening, June 21st, at eight o'clock, in the school building.

—The annual meeting of the Hillside Cemetery Association was held last night. The following directors were re-elected for the ensuing year: W. B. Wadsworth, John W. Murray and A. C. Baldwin.

The Misses Rocap School.

The Misses Rocap closed school at ten o'clock today. The scholars enjoyed refreshments, instead of an outing, as Miss Rocap leaves for Belmar this afternoon. Louise VanSickel took first prize for scholarship, and received Jean Ingelow's Birthday Book. Master James Beekman took the prize for best work among the boys, and was especially commended for his fine work in map drawing. The final examinations showed good work, and each child took home a remembrance from his teachers.

Suffering From Dissipation.

A man named Blair giving his residence as New York, was picked up this afternoon on Front street by some men and taken into Shaw's drug store. It was learned that the man was suffering from a period of dissipation, and needed attention immediately. He was treated by Mr. Shaw, as other medical treatment could not be secured.

METHODISM AND EPISCOPALIANISM.

The Anniversary of the Birthday of John Wesley.

John Wesley's anniversary brings to mind again the remarkable endurance of the break between the Methodist and Episcopal churches and at the same time the narrowness of the separation between them. John Wesley, first professor of the wonderfully vital and fertile creed of Methodism, had no quarrel with the dogmas of the church of which he, like his father and his younger brother, was a priest. He was simply and solely a revivalist, as so many of his faith have been, and called themselves since his time. His whole, strong soul went out against the spiritual deadness of the Church of England of his day. To be sure, he magnified and glorified the doctrine of salvation by faith and exalted the spiritual importance of the second member of the Trinity in a way that has left its impress on all theology since his time. But nothing he ever preached was incompatible with the doctrines of the church in which he was reared and of which his father was as "high and dry" a member as his famous contemporary, Dr. Sacheverell.

Muscle and Women's Skirts.

"My arm is nearly breaking off," said the pretty girl after walking home from church. "The new skirts that we have to wear if we want to be well dressed are about five times as wide as the old skirts, and that, with the heavy lining the dressmakers put around the bottom to make them stand out, weighs a ton. To lift the skirt out of the dust I have to bear the whole weight in my hand." As she spread out the copious folds she smiled, though in a reflective way.

"There's one good thing about it, though," she added; "it's developing the muscles of my arm for tennis this summer."

CHURCH CHIMES.

The annual meeting of the First Church of Christ will be held this evening.

A strawberry festival will be given in the Seventh-Day Baptist church this evening.

A reception will be given to Rev. G. Kennedy Newell and wife in Hope chapel on Friday evening.

The First Baptist church Sunday-school will enjoy their annual excursion to Asbury Park, Thursday, July 11th.

The anniversary of the German Reformed church will be held tomorrow evening, instead of last night as reported.

A meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary society of the Crescent Avenue church was held yesterday afternoon.

The young people of the New Market Baptist church will conduct a strawberry and ice cream festival at that place this evening.

The Young Ladies' Missionary society of the First Baptist church held their last meeting yesterday afternoon at two o'clock in the church till Oct. 1st.

Holy Cross Brotherhood, of the Church of the Holy Cross, meets this evening in the parish rooms. A business session will precede a social entertainment.

The scholars from the East Third Street mission went to the farm of Peter Johnson at South Plainfield yesterday afternoon and had a delightful time.

The Ladies Guild, of St. Stephen's church, will give a tea and cake sale at the home of Mrs. N. P. T. Finch, corner of Belvidere road and Watchung avenue, between the hours of 4:30 and 10:30 p. m., on Saturday.

The supply committee have again been successful in securing Rev. George H. Hepworth, D. D., of Newark, to occupy Rev. Mr. Schenck's pulpit in Trinity Reformed church next Sunday morning and evening.

The Christian Endeavor society of Trinity Reformed church will hold a sociable in the Sunday-school room Friday evening. The Junior society of the church and the Christian Endeavor society of the German Reformed church have been invited.

THE SECRET ORDERS.

The U. O. T. R. will give an entertainment in Reform hall this evening.

A strawberry and ice-cream festival will be held at the T. A. B. hall on June 19th and 20th.

The committee on anniversary from the Sons of Veterans met at the home of H. S. Thatcher last evening and made further arrangements for the celebration.

At the meeting of Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. and A. M., held last evening, the first degree was conferred on one candidate. R. W. District Deputy Anthony Schroeder made the lodge an official visit.

Capt. William Hand, Robert Walker and William Moore, were appointed a a committee at the meeting of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., last evening to arrange for their part of the Fourth of July celebration.

DUNELLEN.

Robert Hamilton returned today from Somerville, where he has been visiting friends.

Miss M. J. VanAitsdale, who has been visiting Mrs. Arthur Sutphen, left yesterday for Jersey City.

Miss G. Pierce, of Point Pleasant, is the guest of Mrs. Smith Watson.

Mrs. J. Apgar is at Junction and is very ill. Her husband and sons went there yesterday.

E. H. TenEyck is at the United States Hotel, Portland, Maine.

E. F. Slatner, of Pennsylvania, is stopping with Howard Giles.

Mrs. W. H. Terry has returned from Brooklyn, where she has been visiting friends.

Died While Attending a Wedding.

The death of Mrs. John P. Apgar, of Dunellen, occurred yesterday at Junction. She went to that place to attend a wedding and was taken sick and died at twelve o'clock yesterday at that place. The remains were brought to Dunellen today. The funeral will be held Friday afternoon at two o'clock at the Presbyterian church.

YOUR SCALP! During the heats of summer does it become irritated and invite an occasional friendly scratch? To wash it is well, but not too often, lest your hair become "brash" and stiff. But treat it twice or thrice a week with our Petroleum Hair Tonic—a little rubbed in with your finger ends, and you will find the feeling of comfort and coolness truly delightful. Positively nothing equals it as a balm for the woes of your scalp. Sprinkler bottles 50c. Only at

REYNOLDS'S PHARMACY, PARK AND NORTH AVENUES.

Old People.

Old people who require medicine to regulate the bowels and kidneys will find the true remedy in Electric Bitters. This medicine does not stimulate and contains no whiskey nor other intoxicant, but acts as a tonic and alterative. It acts mildly on the stomach and bowels, adding strength and giving tone to the organs, thereby aiding nature in the performance of the functions. Electric Bitters is an excellent appetizer and aids digestion. Old people find it just exactly what they need. Price 50c a bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

I have two little grandchildren who are teething this hot summer weather and are troubled with bowel complaint. I give them Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and it acts like a charm. I earnestly recommend it for children with bowel troubles. I was myself taken with a severe attack of bloody flux, with cramps and pains in my stomach, one-third of a bottle of this remedy cured me. Within twenty-four hours I was out of bed and doing my housework. Mrs. W. L. Dunagan, Bonaqua, Hickman Co., Tenn.

While at Peekskill, N. Y., Mr. J. A. Scriven, a prominent manufacturer of New York City, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Such good results were obtained from its use that he sent back to the druggist from whom he had obtained it for two more bottles of the same remedy. When you have a cough or cold give this preparation a trial and like Mr. Scriven you will want it when again in need of such a medicine. It is a remedy of great worth and merit. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

While in Topeka last March, E. T. Barber, a prominent newspaper man of La Cygne, Kansas, was taken with cholera morbus very severely. The night clerk at the hotel where he was stopping happened to have a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and gave him three doses which relieved him and he thinks saved his life. Every family should keep this remedy in their home at all times. No one can tell how soon it may be needed. It costs but a trifle and may be the means of saving much suffering and perhaps the life of some member of the family. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

Sometime ago I was troubled with an attack of rheumatism. I used Chamberlain's Pain Balm and was completely cured. I have since advised many of my friends and customers to try the remedy and all speak highly of it. Simon Goldbaum, San Luis Rey, Cal. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

SKETCHES OF LINCOLN.

Summing Up the Man and His Career.

STRENGTH OF REASON AND LOGIC.

His Love of Truth For Its Own Sake—The Second Great Quality In His Character. His Firm Hold on the Masses—A Colleague's Tribute.

[From "The Life of Lincoln" by William H. Herndon and Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1888, by Jesse W. Weik. Copyright, 1892, by D. Appleton & Co.]

XXIV.

The great predominating elements of Mr. Lincoln's peculiar character were, first, his great capacity and power of reason; second, his conscience and his excellent understanding; third, an exalted idea of the sense of right and equity; fourth, his intense veneration of the true and the good. His conscience, his heart and all the faculties and qualities of his mind bowed submissively to the despotism of his reason. He lived and acted from the standard of reason—that throne of logic, home of principle, the realm of deity in man. It is from this point Mr. Lincoln must be viewed. Not only was he cautious, patient and enduring, not only had he concentration and great continuity of thought, but he had profound analytical power. His vision was clear, and he was emphatically the master of statement. His pursuit of the truth, as before mentioned, was indefatigable. He reasoned from well chosen principles with such clearness, force and directness that the tallest intellects in the land bowed to him. He was the strongest man I ever saw, looking at him from the elevated standpoint of reason and logic. He came down from that height with irresistible and crashing force. His Cooper institute and other printed speeches will prove this, but his speeches before the courts, especially the supreme court of Illinois, if they had been preserved, would demonstrate it still more plainly. Here he demanded time to think and prepare. The office of reason is to determine the truth. Truth is the power of reason, and Lincoln loved truth for its own sake. It was to him reason's food.

Ruled by Conscience.

Conscience, the second great quality of Mr. Lincoln's character, is that faculty which induces in us love of the just. Its real office is justice; right and equity are its correlatives. As a court, it is in session continuously. It decides all acts at all times. Mr. Lincoln had a deep, broad, living conscience. His reason, however, was the real judge. It told him what was true or false, and therefore good or bad, right or wrong, just or unjust, and his conscience echoed back the decision. His conscience ruled his heart. He was always just before he was generous. It cannot be said of any mortal that he was always absolutely just. Neither was Lincoln always just, but his general life was. It follows that if Mr. Lincoln had great reason and great conscience he must have been an honest man, and so he was. He was rightfully entitled to the appellation "Honest Abe." Honesty was his polar star.

As illustrative of a combination in Mr. Lincoln's organization it may be said that his eloquence lay in the strength of his logical faculty, his supreme power of reasoning, his great understanding, and his love of principle; in his clear and accurate vision; in his cool and masterly statement of principles around which the issues gather, and in the statement of those issues and the grouping of the facts that are to carry conviction to the minds of men of every grade of intelligence. He was so clear that he could not be misunderstood or long misrepresented. He stood square and bolt upright to his convictions, and any one who listened to him would be convinced that he formed his thoughts and utterances by them. His mind was not exactly a wide, broad, generalizing and comprehensive mind, nor yet a versatile, quick and subtle one, bounding here and there as emergencies demanded, but it was deep, enduring, strong, like a majestic machine running in deep iron grooves, with heavy flanges on its wheels.

Mr. Lincoln himself was a very sensitive man, and hence in dealing with others he avoided wounding their hearts or puncturing their sensibility. He was unusually considerate of the feelings of other men, regardless of their rank, condition or station. At first sight he struck one with his plainness, simplicity of manner, sincerity, candor and truthfulness. He had no double interests and no overwhelming dignity with which to chill the air around his visitor. He was always easy of approach and thoroughly democratic. He seemed to throw a charm around every man who ever met him. To be in his presence was a pleasure, and no man ever left his company with injured feelings unless most richly deserved.

His Honesty.

The universal testimony, "He is an honest man," gave him a firm hold on the masses, and they trusted him with a blind religious faith. His sad, melancholy face excited their sympathy, and when the dark days came it was their heart strings that intwined and sustained him. Sympathy, we are told, is one of the strongest and noblest incentives to human action. With the sympathy and love of the people to sustain him, Lincoln had unlimited power over them. He threw an invisible and weightless harness over them and drove them through disaster and desperation to final victory. The trust and worship by the people of Lincoln were the result of his simple character. He held himself not aloof from the masses. He became one of them. They feared together, they struggled together, they hoped together. Thus, melted and molded into one, they became one in thought, one in will, one in action. If Lincoln cautiously awaited the full development of the last fact in the great drama before he acted, when longer waiting would be a crime, he knew that the people were determinedly at his back. Thus, when a blow was struck, it came with the unerring aim and power of a bolt from heaven. A natural king, not ruling men, but leading them along the drifts and trends of their own tendencies always keeping in mind the consent of the governed, he developed what the future historian will call the sublimest order of conservative statesmanship.

Whatever of life, vigor, force and power of eloquence his peculiar qualities gave him; whatever there was in a fair, manly, honest and impartial administration of justice under law to all men at all times; whatever there was in a strong will in the right governed by tenderness and mercy; whatever there was in toil and sublime patience; whatever there was in these things or a wise combination of them, Lincoln is justly entitled to in making up the impartial verdict of history. These limit and define him as a statesman, as an orator, as an executive of the nation and as a man. They developed in all the walks of his life; they were his law; they were his nature; they were Abraham Lincoln.

This long, bony, sad man floated down the Sangamon river in a frail canoe in the spring of 1831. Like a piece of driftwood, he lodged at last, without a history, strange, penniless and alone. In sight of the capital of Illinois, in the fatigue of daily toil he struggled for the necessaries of life. Thirty years later this same peculiar man left the Sangamon river, backed by friends, by power, by the patriotic prayers of millions of people, to be the ruler of the greatest nation in the world.

Had it not been for his conservative statesmanship, his supreme confidence in the wisdom of the people, his extreme care in groping his way among facts and before ideas, this nation might have been two governments today. The low and feeble circulation of his blood, his healthful irritability, which responded so slowly to the effects of stimuli, the strength of his herculean frame, his peculiar organism, conserving its force, his sublime patience, his wonderful endurance, his great hand and heart, saved this country from division when division meant its irreparable ruin.

The central figure of our national history, the sublime type of our civilization, posterity, with the record of his career and actions before it, will decree that, whether Providence so ordained it or not, Abraham Lincoln was the man for the hour.

Tribute by a Colleague at the Bar.

"The weird and melancholy association of eloquence and poetry had a strong fascination for Mr. Lincoln's mind. Tasteful composition, either of prose or poetry, which faithfully contrasted the realities of eternity with the unstable and fickle fortunes of time, made a strong impression on his mind. In the indulgence of this melancholy taste it is related of him that the poem, 'Immortality,' he knew by rote and appreciated very highly. He had a strange liking for the verses, and they bear a just resemblance to his fortune. Mr. Lincoln at the time of his assassination was encircled by a halo of immortal glory such as had never before graced the brow of mortal man. He had driven treason from its capital city, had slept in the palace of its once proud and defiant but now vanquished leader and had saved his country and its accrued glories of three-quarters of a century from destruction. He rode, not with the haughty and imperious brow of an ancient conqueror, but with the placid complacency of a pure patriot, through the streets of the political Babylon of modern times. He had ridden over battlefields immortal in history when, in power at least, he was the leader. Having assured the misguided citizens of the south that he meant them no harm beyond a determination to maintain the government, he returned buoyant with hope to the executive mansion where for four long years he had been held, as it were, a prisoner.

"Weary with the stories of state, he goes to seek the relaxation of amusement at the theater; sees the gay crowd as he passes in; is cheered and graciously smiled upon by fair women and brave men; beholds the gorgeous paraphernalia of the stage, the brilliantly lighted scene, the arched ceiling with its grotesque and inimitable figuring to heighten the effect and make the occasion one of unalloyed pleasure. The hearts of the people beat in unison with his over a redeemed and ransomed land. A pause in the play—a faint pistol shot is heard. No one knows its significance save the hellish few who are in the plot. A wild shriek, such as murder wrings from the heart of woman, follows. The proud form of Mr. Lincoln has sunk in death. The scene is changed to a wild confusion such as no poet can describe, no painter delineate. Well might the murdered have said and oft repeated:

"'Tis the wink of an eye, 'tis the draft of a breath,
From the blossom of health to the paleness of death,
From the gilded saloon to the bier and the shroud—
Oh, why should the spirit of mortal be proud?"

An Interrupted Opera.

Lincoln and a host of notables were present at the old National in Washington when "Norma" was given the greatest and most impressive presentation then or since known in America. Only one fussy little man had noted or cared about the hour. But in the very climax of the thundering passages of Oroveso's invocation this same fussy little man ambled in upon the stage, watch in hand. It was Manager Leonard Grover, who apologetically but determinedly piped out: "This performance must be immediately closed. It is now tomorrow morning!" and then wriggled himself out of sight. Every eye, already fixed upon Herman, seemed now transfixed upon him as if for solution of the tremendous faux pas, and Mr. Lincoln half arose from his chair as if to command the completion of "Norma." But Herman was the real master then. Clad in his flowing robes, he majestically strode to the footlights. With outstretched hands in posture of benediction he sang "Rock of Ages" as it will never be sung again. Then, still standing there, he lifted his arms with a suggestive movement, the audience obediently arose, and in a moment more the vast assemblage had silently passed out into the street.

Lincoln to a Friend.

"Douglas and I, for the first time this canvass, crossed swords here yesterday. The fire flew some, and I am glad to know I am yet alive."

IS IT THE END?

A Time of Great Mortality.

Especially Noticeable in Children.—Will Man Cease to Exist?—Can the "Omega" be Averted?

Why is it, with our improved sanitary appliances, our care to obtain fresh air, pure food, and plenty of exercise, the observance, in fact, of every hygienic law, that in spite of every care each succeeding generation seems to become weaker and shorter lived? Is it that we are now suffering for indiscretions of our ancestors, or is that terrible, unknown end of man at hand?

Whatever the cause, the existing condition of things is too apparent. Especially is this noticeable with he babies. Instead of the mother's life-giving milk, they are compelled to begin a struggle for existence with the bottle. The result in many cases is disastrous. The little one, failing to obtain necessary nourishment, grows weaker daily, until death ends the struggle. The end in these cases is Simply Starvation.

With this termination so often the case, the best physicians of the day have resorted to the use of Bovinine, that great and original raw food product, as a means to save the babies.

In this connection Dr. A. B. Robinson, 61 Dudley St., Boston, after commending Bovinine most highly for various complications where the waste of disease must be checked, and new blood, flesh, and strength created to effect a cure, says concerning this life-creating preparation, "With feeble, bottle-fed babies, a small mount added to the milk has in my practice saved many children."

Bovinine is not a medicine, but a life-maintaining, flesh, bone, and blood-making preparation that contains the greatest amount of nourishment in the least possible bulk.

Give it to the little ones while there is still hope. Your physician, if you ask him, will recommend it, and you will bless the results obtained forever.

MAGGIE'S ELOPEMENT

"You always did act queer, Jim."

So said Mrs. Wigfall one night to her husband, and she folded her arms across her breast and looked at him reproachfully.

Mr. Wigfall was a successful farmer. The school of experience, he said, had cost him a good deal, but he had gone through it and been profited in the end. He always claimed to have ideas of his own, which, somehow, he invariably contrived to carry out in a way to suit himself. This was the first time during 20 years of married life that his confiding spouse had ever questioned his methods, and it surprised him so very much that he could only look at her in dumb astonishment.

"Now, tell me what in the name of common sense has set you so desperately against Ted Minter?" she asked, with a good deal of asperity in her voice. "I always thought you had a very high opinion of him before, ever since he was a boy."

"He hasn't any spunk, and, what is worse, he isn't likely to have any as long as he lives," replied Mr. Wigfall.

"Pshaw, Jim! You know better than that. Ted has grit and you know it," cried Mrs. Wigfall. Then she added, as a clincher: "He always manages to come around and see Maggie when he wants to, in spite of your threat to shoot him on sight."

"Maybe he does manage to come. But he doesn't want to see her very bad except when I have my back turned or am away from home."

"But he always comes in at the front door," insisted Mrs. Wigfall.

"And always goes out of it, too, in a hurry, when I show myself. It is lucky for him that the cap snapped on my gun when I shot at him to-night."

"The gun was empty, Jim," laughed Mrs. Wigfall.

"How do you know?"

"We examined it this evening before you came home."

"I'll lock that gun up after this, so you women folks can't meddle with it. And next time I snap a cap at Ted Minter somebody is going to be hurt."

"Now, Jim," said Mrs. Wigfall, in persuasive tones, "don't make a fool of yourself. I never did set myself up against you before, but in this thing my whole heart is interested, and I will see that Maggie and Ted get one another if they feel that way inclined."

"And I have made up my mind that they shall be kept apart," said Mr. Wigfall.

"Well, then it is Ted, Maggie and myself that you will have to fight, and we will see who wins in the end."

"I've got an idea, and I'll bet on that," muttered Mr. Wigfall.

A couple of days later Mrs. Wigfall and her daughter Maggie were sitting on the porch in the warm spring sunshine, the former shelling the season's first mess of new peas, and the latter busily engaged with her crochet needle.

"Ted sent me a note this morning by Cousin Tom, saying he was coming here this evening," said Maggie. "Now, mamma, can't you manage to keep papa off the porch to-night, so he and Ted won't get into any trouble?"

"I don't know, Maggie, but I can try," replied Mrs. Wigfall. "I wish you and Ted would hurry up and come to an understanding before your father becomes plumb cantankerous and does something desperate," and there was a look of anxiety in the mother's eyes as she stopped her work for a moment and looked up at her daughter.

"Ted wants me to run away with him and marry him. He just begged me and begged me the other evening when he was here."

"It is a bad business at best, this running away," half mused Mrs. Wagfall. "There is no telling what father would do then. You can't count on him from one moment to the next."

"Ted said he wasn't afraid."

"No; he would risk almost anything, I suppose, to get you."

"If he asks me again to-night, mamma, what shall I tell him?"

"I really don't know, daughter." Then, looking up, smiling, she asked: "What would you like to tell him?"

Maggie blushed prettily. She sprang up from her chair, ran to where her mother was sitting, and put both arms around her neck.

"I would like to say yes," she whispered shyly. "I never would acknowledge to Ted how much I thought of him, but to you, mother dear, I can own up that I would do almost anything in the world to make him happy. I would go anywhere with him."

There was a happy gleam in the mother's eyes as she looked at her daughter's pretty face.

"I know how it feels, my dear," she said. "It comes to all of us, that feeling, sooner or later, and then it either makes or mars our lives."

"But what must I tell him, if he asks me again to-night?" Maggie whispered.

"Tell him what your heart bids you say."

"Then it will be 'yes.'"

After awhile mother and daughter left the porch and went into the house. As they did so Mr. Wigfall stepped out upon the porch, through an open window, and an amused smile played around his lips.

"It works like a charm," he murmured, as he went down the front steps and wended his way toward the barn.

II.

After supper that evening, when Mrs. Wigfall was trying to think of some scheme to keep her husband inside the house, he approached her.

"I thought I would go into town to the lodge to-night," he said. "I shall probably be away till midnight."

Mrs. Wigfall tried to look disappointed.

"You are always going away somewhere and leaving me at home to take care of myself," she said, with a little pout. "I was just planning how I could give you a pleasant evening at home when you came."

"Oh, well, if you have set your heart upon it, and wish me to spend the evening at home with you, I'll do so rather than make you feel disappointed," smiled Mr. Wigfall.

"No, no," she replied hurriedly. "I was only teasing. Maggie and I will find something to keep us employed and amused until bedtime."

Mr. Wigfall smiled knowingly and nodded toward the house as he rode away.

"I caught you fairly that time," he chuckled. "I won't have to snap any caps on an empty gun to-night, if I stay long enough."

And, somehow, Mr. Wigfall did stay long enough. Ted and Maggie occupied the front porch all by themselves, and before the former left that night the latter had consented to elope with him and be married on the following Wednesday night.

During the few days between that night and Wednesday, Maggie and her mother were in a flutter of excitement, and many were the whispered consultations between the two, when Mr. Wigfall was so near that they feared he could hear what they said if they spoke in their natural voices.

It must be admitted that a move had been made in the game of which Mr. Wigfall was not fully cognizant, but the smile which often played around his mouth, when he saw his wife and daughter together eyeing him suspiciously, was not very sinister.

The eventful Wednesday came at last. It was a clear, bright day, full of the perfume of new-blown flowers and sweet with the south wind coming in from the sea.

After dinner, when Maggie was ready to leave home, ostensibly to spend the night at a young friend's house, she went to where her father was sitting, put her arms around his neck and kissed him affectionately.

Mr. Wigfall eyed her questioningly, and somehow there seemed to be a blur on his sight as their glances met for a moment, which made him blink his eyes. Both appeared as if they wanted to say something, but for some reason they parted in silence.

Mother and daughter, on the other hand, whispered together for several minutes, and when Maggie rode away there were tears in the eyes of both of them.

That evening Mrs. Wigfall's heart became too heavy for her, and she went to her husband and imparted to him the secret which weighed upon it so heavily.

"Jim," she said in a choking voice, "Maggie and Ted have run away and got married."

She fully expected to see Mr. Wigfall fly into a terrible rage, but, instead, was very much surprised to see him smile, as if he were fully satisfied with the turn events had taken.

"I am glad of it," he said.

Mrs. Wigfall was doubly surprised now.

"Glad of it, Jim? Why, I thought you were opposed to the match, and doing all you could to break it up."

Mr. Wigfall laughed outright.

"Don't you remember, dear, what a hard time we had to keep up our engagement for two years before we were married?" he asked, chucking her playfully under the chin. "I didn't want Maggie and Ted to go through the same trying experience. So I took it into my head to oppose the match, knowing that was the only way to hurry them up, and you must acknowledge that I have succeeded."

"You always did act queer, Jim," cried Mrs. Wigfall. But there was not the slightest reproach in her voice as she said it.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Puff Balls Good to Eat.

Probably you have all noticed the little white puff balls in spring, and "shot off" the same in autumn, when they are dry and full of dark powder.

This is one of our choicest eatable mushrooms. One admirer says he cut a slice from a giant puff ball, which grew near his home, every day for a week, and had so many fresh fritters; whereas, if he had cut it all down the first day, it would not have made nearly so many delicious meals.

One giant puff ball, when young and creamy, if well cooked, satisfies the appetite of twelve people. In olden times slices of this mushroom were used to bind up cuts, and were said to insure their speedy healing.

In the days of flint and steel, before matches were invented, the powder of dried puff balls was often used to catch and hold the sparks. Another strange use to which it was put was to burn it before a bee hive. The fumes made the bees drowsy, and the honey could be removed without difficulty.—St. Nicholas.

Too Much For Great Minds.

All the good stories of Dr. McCosh were not told by his obituary biographers. He had a thoroughly characteristic, but an entirely amiable, egotism, which sometimes raised a smile among the Princeton students.

One day he had been discussing before the senior class Leibnitz's theory of evil, and especially the point that mankind was put upon the earth because there was less evil here than elsewhere. One of the young men replied:

"Well, doctor, why was evil introduced into the world, anyway?"

The doctor had a habit, when puzzled, of chewing his thumb knuckle, and as the argument was leading up to this he gnawed viciously. When the question came out, he threw up both hands and cried:

"Ah! ye have asked the hardest question in all pheelosophy! Sukkrates tried to answer it, and failed; Kahnt attempted it, and made bad work of it; Leibnitz tried it, and begged the whole question, as I have been tellin' ye, and —" he renewed his chewing—"I confess I do-o not know just what to make of it mesel'!"

GOLF IS GETTING POPULAR.

The Rougher the Links, the Better. Skill Required to Drive the Ball.

That so old a game as golf should have remained so long unknown in this country can only be explained by the fact that the English themselves allowed it to suffer comparative neglect for many years. In Scotland, the game has flourished for so many generations that its beginnings are quite lost in a haze of tradition. Mention is made of the game in chronicles dating back several centuries, and there are tales, credible enough, of kings and princes eminent for their prowess on the golfing green.

It was in 1888 that the St. Andrews Golf Club, namesake of the famous old Scotch links, was established near Yonkers—the first one in the United States.

For those who have never seen a golf links and have no idea of the way in which the game is played, a few remarks explaining it will not be out of place. The utmost knowledge that many still possess is a hazy sort of impression that golf is a species of croquet and "shinny" rolled into one. The game of golf consists in driving a ball from a starting point called the "tee," by successive strokes into a hole; then from a second tee to the next hole, continuing until a round of the links has been made. The number of holes on the Scotch courses is usually eighteen, but most of the American ones have only nine, a second round being generally played to make a match. A side may consist of one or more persons, and the object of each side is to "hole" its ball in as few strokes as possible. A game of two players, one on each side, is called in golfing parlance a "twosome"; and three are likewise "threesomes" and "foursomes" the last corresponding to "doubles" in tennis. In what is called match play, the score is kept by holes, each hole being counted for the side first making it. In medal play, the holes are not counted separately, and the competitor who covers the whole course with the fewest strokes is the winner. The links should be arranged so as to present a difficulty in the way of every stroke, if possible. The only exception to this is that of the "putting-green" or space of ground within fifteen or twenty yards of the hole, should be absolutely level and as smooth as velvet; even so, the player will find it hard enough to send the ball accurately into the hole, which is only 4 1-4 inches in diameter. If the country is naturally well suited for golf links with hills, stone walls, ditches, pools, ground and similar obstructions to the links which can be utilized as "hazards," but if such is not the case they must be created as artfully as possible. "Bunkers" of sand or earth are frequently made and hurdlelike fences erected.

Small gutta-percha balls are used, and a variety of clubs (don't call them sticks unless you wish to be considered densely ignorant) which have wooden shafts and either iron or wooden heads. There are several shapes of head, different in form and slant, and each is intended for a particular purpose. The driver is to be used in starting from the tee and occasionally thereafter; the putter performs the same office as a croquet mallet when the ball is on the green. The other clubs, with characteristic, odd sounding names—mashie, cleek, lofter and two or three more, are to be used as the golfer's judgment directs, according to the "lie" of the ball. The necessity of being continually supplied with such an array of implements has given rise to the occupation of the caddie. His business is to carry your clubs for you and keep ahead of you on the course to note where your ball drops.—New York Tribune.

NEGRO MELODY IS LOST.

It Has Never Been Written and the Conditions Are Past.

Whether or not, as has been proposed, an American school of music, founded on negro melodies, will ever find favor with the people, much can be said of the singular attractiveness of many of the old plantation tunes, some of which are almost as familiar as "Home, Sweet Home," or "The Star Spangled Banner." Comparatively few of them have been published—it would be the labor of years to collect and print them all. Some of them are quite worthless, most likely a species of mixed composition; the original and characteristic melody marred by a foreign hand. Genuine negro music, conceived and sung or played by negroes of the old school is almost a thing of the past. It has never been written down. Its authors could not do it, and few indeed are the white musicians who could transcribe intelligibly its peculiarly eccentric method. These tunes, once heard, as sung by plantation negroes in the good old days "befo' de wah," cling to one's memory with wonderful tenacity, and I am tempted to give an idea of one or two of them, which you still may hear in the Southern country.

One night, while passing along a country road in a very sparsely settled portion of Alabama, lighted by a glorious moon and harkening to a mocking bird's wonderful night carol and the chirrup of innumerable crickets, my ear was startled by a high tenor voice, whose owner was approaching, giving somewhat nasal utterance to these words of manly resolution, set to an air so plaintive in its minor effects, that my heart bled for the poor sufferers described:

"It's hard to love, it's mighty hard to love;
O, it's hard to change your mind;
You've done gone an' busted into many a fellow's heart,
But you ain't gwine to bust into mine!"

This verse was repeated over and over again with various degrees of feeling, from the deeply pathetic to the wildly passionate.—New York Tribune.

The Difference.

Beauty lies within ourselves,
After all, they say;
And, be sure, the happy heart
Makes the happy day.

The Point of View.

To err is human: to forgive, divine—
We'll all admit as true, of course.
But if the sin is yours, forgiveness mine,
I've noticed that it has unusual force.
—Dorothea Lummis in the Century.

THE EXPLOITS OF BRIGADIER GERARD.

How the Brigadier Slew the Brothers of Ajaccio.

BY A. CONAN DOYLE.

(Copyright, 1895.)

CHAPTER IV.

I put on my military overcoat, as I did not know how much of the night I might have to spend in the woods, and I fastened my sword on inside of it. I put off my hussar boots also, and wore a pair of shoes and gaiters, so that I might be lighter upon my feet. Then I stole out of my quarters and made for the forest, feeling very much easier in my mind, for I am always at my best when the time of thought has passed and the moment for action arrived.

I passed the barracks of the Chasseurs of the Guards and the line of cafes all filled with uniforms. I caught a glimpse as I went by of the blue and gold of some of my comrades amid the swarm of dark infantry coats and the light green of the guides. There they sat, sipping their wine and smoking their cigars, little dreaming what their comrade had on hand. One of them, the chief of my squadron, caught sight of me in the lamplight, and came shouting after me into the street. I hurried on, however, pretending not to hear him; so he, with a curse at my deafness, went back at last to his wine bottle.

It is not very hard to get into the forest at Fontainebleau. The scattered trees steal their way into the very streets like the tirailleurs in front of a column. I turned into a path which led into the edge of the woods and then I pushed rapidly forward toward the old fir tree. It was a place, which, as I have hinted, I had my own reasons for knowing well, and I could only thank the fates that it was not one of the nights upon which Leonie would be waiting for me. The poor child would have died of terror at the sight of the Emperor. He might have been too harsh with her—and, worse still, he might have been too kind.

There was a half moon shining, and as I came up to our trysting place I saw that I was not the first to arrive. The Emperor was passing up and down, his hands behind him and his face sunk somewhat forward upon his breast. He wore a gray great coat, with a capote over his head. I had seen him in such a dress in our Winter campaign in Poland, and it was said he used it because the hood was such an excellent disguise. He was always fond, whether in the camp or in Paris, of walking round at night and overhearing the talk in the cabarets or round the fires. His figure, however, and his way of carrying his head were so well known that he was always recognized, and then the talkers would just say whatever they thought would please him best.

I was afraid that he would be angry with me for having kept him waiting, but as I approached him we heard the big church clock of Fontainebleau clang out the hour of 10. It was evident, therefore, that it was he who was too soon, and not I too late. I remembered his injunction that I should make no remark, so I contented myself with halting within four paces of him, clicking my spurs together, grounding my sabre and saluting. He glanced at me, and then without a word he turned and walked slowly through the forest, I keeping always about the same distance behind him. Once or twice he seemed to me to look apprehensively to right and to left, as if he feared that some one were observing us. I looked also, but, although I have the keenest sight, it was quite impossible to see anything except the ragged patches of moonshine between the great black shadows of the trees. My ears are as quick as my eyes, and once or twice I thought that I heard a twig crack, but you know how many sounds there are in a forest at night, and how difficult it is to even say what direction they come from.

We walked for rather more than a mile, and I knew exactly what our destination was long before we got there. In the centre of one of the glades there is the scattered stump of what must at some time have been a most gigantic tree. It is called the Abbot's Beech, and there are so many ghostly stories about it that I know many a brave soldier who would not care about mounting sentinel over it. However, I cared as little for such folly as the Emperor did, so we crossed the glade and made straight for the old broken trunk. As we approached I saw that two men were waiting for us beneath it.

When I first caught sight of them they were standing rather behind it, as if they were not anxious to be seen, but as we came nearer they emerged from its shadow and walked forth to meet us. The Emperor glanced at me, and slackened his pace a little, so that I came within arms length of him. You may think that I had my hilt well to the front, and that I had a very good look at these two people who were approaching us. The one was tall, remarkably so, and of a very spare frame, while the other was rather below the usual height, and had a brisk, determined way of walking. They each wore black cloaks, which were slung right across their figures and hung down upon one side like the mantles of Murat's dragoons. They had flat black caps, like those which I have since seen in Spain, which threw their faces into darkness, though I could see the gleam of their eyes from beneath them. With the moon behind them and their long, black shadows walking in front, they were such figures as one might expect to meet at night near the Abbot's Beech. I can remember that they had a stealthy way of moving and that as they approached the moonshine formed two white diamonds between their legs and the legs of their shadows.

The Emperor had paused and these two strangers came to a stand also within a few paces of us. I had drawn up close to my companion's elbow, so that the four of us were facing each other without a word spoken. My eyes were particularly fixed upon the taller one, because he was slightly the nearer to me, and I became certain as I watched him that he was in the last state of nervousness. His lean figure was quivering all over, and I heard a quick, thin panting like that of a tired dog. Suddenly, one of them gave a short hissing signal. The tall man bent his back and his knees like a diver about to spring, but before he could move I had jumped with drawn sabre in front of him. At the same instant the smaller man bounded past me, and buried a long poinard in the Emperor's heart.

My God, the horror of that moment! It is a marvel that I did not drop dead myself. As in a dream I saw the gray coat whirl convulsively round and caught a glimpse in the moonlight of three inches of red point which jutted out from between the shoulders. Then down he fell with a dead man's gasp upon the grass, and the assassin, leaving his weapon buried in his victim, threw up both his hands and shrieked with joy. But I—I drove my sword through his midriff with such frantic force that the mere blow of the hilt against the end of his breastbone sent him six paces before he fell, and left my reeking blade ready for the other. I sprang upon him with such a lust for blood upon me as I had never felt, and never have felt in all my days. As I turned a dagger flashed before my eyes, and I felt the cold wind of it pass my neck and the villain's wrist jar upon my shoulder. I shortened my sword, but he winced away from me, and an instant afterward was in full flight, bounding like a deer across the glade in the moonlight.

But he was not to escape me thus. I knew that the murderer's poniard had done its work. Young as I was I had seen enough of war to know a mortal blow. I paused but for an instant to wrench the cold hand. "Sire! Sire!" I cried in an agony, and then, as no answer came back, and nothing moved upon the ever-widening dark circle in the moonlight, I knew that all was indeed over. I sprang madly to my feet, threw off my great coat and ran at the top of my speed after the remaining assassin.

Oh how I blessed the wisdom which had caused me to come in shoes and gaiters. And the happy thought which had thrown off my coat. He could not get rid of his mantle, this wretch, or else he was too frightened to think of it. So it was that I gained upon him from the beginning. He must have been out of his wits, for he never tried to bury himself in the darker parts of the woods, but he flew on from glade to glade until he came to the heath land which leads up to the great Fontainebleau quarry. Thus I had him in full sight, and knew that he could not escape me. He ran well, it is true—ran as a coward runs when his life is the stake. But I ran as Destiny runs when it gets behind a man's heels. Yard by yard I drew in upon him. He was rolling and staggering. I could hear the rasping and crackling of his breath. The great gulf of the quarry suddenly yawned in front of his path, and, glancing at me over his shoulders, he gave a shriek of despair. The next instant he had vanished from my sight.

Vanished utterly, you understand. I rushed to the spot and gazed down into the black abyss. Had he hurled himself over? I had about made up my mind that he had done so, when a gentle sound rising and falling came out of the darkness beneath me. It was his breathing once more, and it showed me where he must be. He was hiding in the toolhouse.

At the edge of the quarry and beneath the summit there is a small platform, upon which stands a wooden hut for the use of the laborers. It was into this, then, that he had darted. Perhaps he had thought, the fool, that in the darkness I would not venture to follow him. He little knew Etienne Gerard. With a spring I was on the platform, with another I was through the doorway, and then hearing him in the corner, I hurled myself down upon the top of him.

He fought like a wildcat, but he never had a chance with his shorter weapon. I think that I must have transfixed him with that first mad lunge, for though he struck and struck his blows had no power in them, and presently his dagger tinkled down upon the floor. When I was sure that he was dead I rose up, and passed out into the moonlight. I climbed up onto the heath again, and wandered across it as nearly out of my mind as a man could be. With the blood singing in my ears and my naked sword still clutched in my hand I walked aimlessly on, until, looking round me, I found that I had come as far as the glade of the Abbot's Beech, and saw in the distance that gnarled stump which must ever be associated with the most terrible moment of my life. I sat down upon a fallen trunk with my sword across my knees, and my head between my hands, and I tried to think about what had happened, and what would happen in the future.

WITH MONEY

Any one can rent a store, put up signs, blow trumpets, beat drums and babble, but it takes more than money to do the kind of storekeeping that is serviceable to a community. Money does not put people in possession of principle, artistic taste, genius of organization and the everlasting keeping-at-the-thing-to-have-it-right because nothing else than the right will do. Without a spoken word, this store will stand as an illustrated essay on commerce, good taste and comfortable shopping.

GOVERNOR'S SOUND WORDS.

REASONS FOR VETOING THE COURT OF PARDONS BILL.

Rules Sought to Establish Have Been Practically in Operation for Years—Other Measures.

The Governor sent yesterday to the Senate his veto of the bill which provides that petitions to the Court of Pardons must be filed thirty days before being acted upon. He says that under the Constitution the Board of Pardons is not a court. He says the Legislature has no power to limit the constitutional power of the board; that it cannot in any way interfere in the free exercise of its functions; that if the Legislature could regulate it it could also destroy it. The board is a law unto itself in the same sense as the Legislature. The rules sought to be established have practically been rules of the board for years. The Governor intimates that the bill was drawn by a person who does not understand the constitutional relation of the Board of Pardons to the Legislative department. He also says it is doubtful if the Board of Pardons was within the scope of the investigating committee's duties. He also says the executive department should have been apprised of the inquiry and given an opportunity to explain certain matters.

In his veto message the Governor says:

"I shall not notice that part of the committee's report which ascribes the political upheavals of the last two years to the race-track issue. That issue, while an issue, doubtless had its effect, and properly so, but in the fall of 1893 it had practically ceased to exist, and in the fall of 1894 was actually dead. No man is so visionary as now to hope or expect its revival. It would be impossible to enact in this State any such law as that recently enacted in New York legalizing horse-racing or race-tracks, where the usual attendants upon horse-racing are sure soon to follow. The political revolution in New Jersey is to be attributed to the same causes and influences which produced like effects elsewhere. It is not necessary in the hope or desire to advance partisan ends to ascribe it to dead issues or improper motives on the part of conscientious officials."

The Newark partisan bills went through the Senate over the Governor's veto under a raking fire from the Democrats yesterday morning. In the Republican caucus some of the Senators were in favor of dropping the bills and refusing to listen further to the demands of Major Lentz and the other Newark politicians who are anxious to make a dictator out of Mayor Lebkuecher. They claimed that the bills have done enough injury to the Republican party, and that it could not afford to pass upon measures which are plainly unconstitutional as well as undemocratic.

Flim Flammers at Westfield.

A bold flim flam game was worked on Mrs. Schmitt, wife of the Westfield baker, on Saturday. Two young men in a buggy stopped in front of the store and, leaving their horse, stepped inside. One purchased 20 cents worth of cakes, offering in payment a $10 bill. Mrs. Schmitt counted out the change and was about to give it to the man, when the purchaser found he had 20 cents and asked for his $10 bill. The obliging saleswoman took it from the drawer. At that moment one of the men grabbed it. Both bolted outside, leaped into the buggy and drove off. Although six men were working on the new sidewalk by the door, none noticed the robbery. Mrs. Schmitt did not recover from her consternation or give the alarm till the rogues had disappeared.

Blair in a Critical Condition.

Sergeant Kiely succeeded in securing a room at Mrs. Boice's residence on Central avenue, yesterday afternoon, for the man named Blair who was taken in Shaw's drug store. Dr. Simpson called to see the man, and found that he was seriously ill. His condition gives evidence of a loss of food and sleep, and this, together with his dissipation, leaves him in a critical condition. He will receive good treatment, however, and an effort will be made to bring him through all right.

Religious Visitation.

The surpliced choir of the Church of the Holy Cross, Plainfield, will give a full choral service at All Saints church in Scotch Plains, on next Sunday evening, at eight o'clock. Rev. T. Logan Murphy will preach, and the choirmaster, George Hosking, expects to take twenty-five singers with him on the visit.

—An interesting programme has been arranged for this evening at the meeting of the Reform Club.

TRUE REFORMERS ENTERTAIN.

Musical and Literary Programme Rendered at Their Hall.

It was half past nine o'clock last evening before North Star Fountain, No. 717 and East End Fountain, No. 725, United Order of True Reformers, commenced their entertainment, but there was a good-natured audience present, who had no difficulty in passing the time in genuine sociability.

The affair was held in True Reformers Hall on West Front street and the room was filled with the members and their friends.

The programme opened with the singing of "Blest be the Tie that Binds," after which State Organizer Burgess, of Roselle, who was master of ceremonies, made a few remarks and introduced Mrs. Josephine Hunt, New York State Secretary of the True Reformers. Mrs. Hunt has an excellent education and talked intelligently on the principles and objects of the order. Her remarks were interesting as well as entertaining.

Mr. Burgess then followed, giving a history of the order in detail. He quoted facts and figures that strengthened the faith of each member and won many new ones.

During the evening a musical programme was rendered by Mrs. Mayhew and Fred White, pianists, Israel Jones, cornetist, Miss Anna Hampton, vocalist, and Samuel Fields, violinist. Each number was fully appreciated and enjoyed. After the above was concluded all were given an opportunity of helping the Fountains to furnish their hall by purchasing refreshments.

Those in charge as committees were as follows:

Committee of faithful and earnest workers—Mrs. S. M. Fields, Mrs. J. A. Saunders, Mrs. E. E. Smith, Mrs. P. Gordon, Mrs. Wm. Manning, Mrs. M. J. Carthom, Mrs. Francis Scott, Mrs. Bettie Teter, Mrs. C. Langford, Mrs. H. Jones, Mrs. M. Johnson, Miss Sarah Hegeman, Miss Sophia Woolson, Miss L. Saunders, Mrs. B. Gibson, Mrs. Ed Saunders.

Committee of arrangements—J. A. Saunders, L. L. Croom, W. H. Cheek, J. H. Saunders.

Don't Want the Fountain.

A difference of opinion exists between the trustees of the First Presbyterian church and the members of the Town Council of Montclair, in regard to the location for a drinking fountain. The trustees don't want the new fountain in front of the church. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union are urging that the fountain be erected at once, because of its need by man and beast. Charles W. Sandford a member of the council and a member of the church also has effected a postponement until an opportunity can be given to the trustees to give their reasons for not wanting it in front of the church property.

Wants an Accounting.

A trunkful of books was in evidence in the Chancery chambers in Newark yesterday, when the case of Mrs. Caroline C. Pratt, of Rahway, against David A. Boody and others was called by Vice-Chancellor Emery. The books were not offered in evidence yesterday, but were sent to Newark in order to avoid delay in case the Vice-Chancellor called for them. The suit is an interesting one, and is along the same lines as the famous Doolittle case in Chancery several months ago.

More Macadamized Roads Needed.

The Somerset county Board of Freeholders met in Somerville on Wednesday, at which time Nelson Y. Dungan spoke on a petition which had been presented by citizens of North Plainfield township, asking that the road leading from Somerset street to Greenbrook be macadamized under the new stone-road act. Mr. Dungan said that the citizens had complied with the law and the board has no other recourse than to grant the petition. The petition was referred.

The board will meet in North Plainfield next Wednesday.

School Suffrage Women Meet.

The women representing the School Suffrage Amendment were in Trenton Tuesday with a petition of from three to four thousand names, which, it is said, could be almost illimitably increased if there was time to reach all parts of the State. They met Mrs. Campfield and Dr. Graves, of Newark; Mrs. Florence Howe Hall and Mrs. Krom, of Plainfield; Mrs. Jennie D. DeWitt, of Belleville; and Dr. Mary D. Husband, of Orange.

White House Improvemants.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT.

Ladies of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church Conduct a Festival.

The annual strawberry and ice cream festival of the Women's Society for Christian work of the Seventh-Day Baptist church was held in the church parlors last evening. The tables, on each of which was a bouquet of roses, were set around the room in a very pretty manner, and in one corner was a bower decorated with greens and flowers, in the midst of which was a well of rocks full of lemonade, which was served by Miss Maud Mosher and Miss Ernestine Smith.

The waitresses, prettily attired in white, were Miss Anna Wooden, Miss Ida Spicer, Miss Bessie Titsworth, Miss Lena Tomlinson, Miss Grace Lewis, Miss Lizzie Allis, Miss Mabel Michel, Miss Lou Clawson and Miss Ida Randolph. W. A. Mosher acted as cashier. The kitchen was in charge of Mrs. W. A. Mosher, Mrs J. Mitter and Frank Smith. There was a large attendance, and about thirty dollars was realized.

Wedded Thirty-one Years.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel F. Randolph, at South Plainfield Tuesday evening, celebrated the thirty-first anniversary of their wedding. The house was beautifully decorated with potted plants and flags. Vocal and instrumental solos were given, and dancing was a feature of the evening. Games were played. J. A. Braint gave a speech, impersonating a negro minister. Isaac F. Randolph kept the audience in laughter with his funny sayings. Miss Amanda Randolph sang a solo. At midnight a repast was served to about fifty couples. Guests from Elizabeth, Rahway, Newark and Plainfield were present. Many handsome presents were received.

Generous Mr. French.

John H. French desires to state through the columns of The Daily Press that he has made a few improvements on Johnston's Drive, not far from the Somerset street terminus of the street railway, and that he extends an invitation to parties wishing to enjoy a picnic the free use of the grounds. Seats have been provided, and it is the intention to erect tables. A prominent Plainfield minister and his wife happened one day recently to find the place spoken of, and he immediately wanted to know if Plainfielders knew there was such a beautiful spot within easy reach. It is safe to say, however, that a very large majority of them do not know of it.

Will Move to Waverly.

A large tract of land lying between the Waverly fair grounds and the Pennsylvania Railroad depot at Elizabeth has been purchased by the Western Electric Instrument Company of Newark. This company now has an extensive plant at the corner of William and Shipman streets, Newark, but finds its present quarters much too cramped for the volume of business done. The land just purchased is a plot of about forty-eight acres and on this property it is intended to erect not only the factory building, but a number of cottages for the employes.

State Normal Schools.

The seventh annual meeting of the Alumni Association of the New Jersey State Normal and Model Schools will be held on the annual Commencement Day, Wednesday, June 19th at twelve m., in the study-room at Trenton. An interesting programme has been prepared, including the name of Hon. Robert S. Woodruff and others prominent in the histor p of the Alumni.

Better Come to Plainfield.

The American Mechanics are trying to get up a big demonstration in Rahway for July 4th, and have sent invitations to a number of lodges and societies inviting delegates to attend a meeting to arrange for the event. The firemen, however, will not take part, as they intend to have a parade in October.

To Disseminate the News.

The news stand of the Union News Company, arrived yesterday at the Netherwood station, where it will open on June 15th to supply all the daily and weekly papers to the guests of the Hotel Netherwood, and summer boarders at surrounding cottages. The stand will remain there until the end of the season.

Are You Going?

The Northfield Y. M. C. A. encampment will be held from July 9th to September 3d. The Plainfield Association has been represented at the camp every season since 1886.

Likes Plainfield.

John Hagen, of Hazelton, Pa., who is visiting friends on Greenbrook road, contemplates purchasing a piece of property on Steiner place.

TO CHASE A GREASED PIG.

WHAT FUN THE CRESCENTS WILL HAVE ON THE FOURTH.

The Wheelmen Will Have Old-Fashioned Pastimes on the Oval the Afternoon of the Fourth—What They Are.

The Crescent Wheelmen had a lively and interesting meeting last evening that was largely attended by the members.

The house committee made a report and the committee was continued.

The committee on Decoration Day meet reported that the receipts were $1,400 and the expenses $750, leaving a balance of $650 for the club.

It was decided to arrange for a float for the Fourth of July parade, and also to have games in the afternoon on the oval.

The following were appointed a committee on games: F. R. Stevens, W. J. Stephenson, Louis G. Timpson, S. P. T. Wilbur, Charles Runyon.

The committee on float were: H. S. Thomas, Charles Lister, Harry Vail, Frank Vail, Wm. VanSickel.

The list of events for the games are as follows:

Tug of war, four men teams, opened to the fire department members.
One hundred yards run.
Two-mile bicycle lap race.
Potato, sack and greased pig race.
Five-mile bicycle race.
Running high jump.
Three-legged race.

The entrance fee will be 25 cents, and all entries are to be sent to F. R. Stevens. They will close Monday, July 1st. A suitable list of prizes will be offered for the events.

After the meeting the Board of Governors met and elected three new members.

An admission fee of 25 cents will be charged to all parts of the grounds for the Fourth of July games.

The wheelmen adjourned to meet June 19th, at eight o'clock.

DUNELLEN'S SHARE.

The Borough Gets a Percentage of the Township's Resources.

The committee appointed to adjust a division of Piscataway's resources with Dunellen, which has recently been made a borough, has filed its report with the County Clerk. The report shows the condition of the township to be as follows:

Gross resources, $14,735.99; gross liabilities, $3,329,04; net resources, $11,406,95.

Of this sum Dunellen is to receive a share proportionate to her assessed valuation.

The assessed valuation of the township is $1,878,585; valuation of the borough of Dunellen, $514,215; showing the Borough of Dunellen's percentage to be 22.05 per cent and the amount due the Borough $2,515,23.

The committee consisted of S. R. Dayton, J. V. D. Field and Warren L. Smalley, on behalf of the township and H. C. Gaskill, Adam Dealman and S. C. Staples for the borough.

JUDGE NASH ENTHUSIASTIC.

He Makes a Hustling Fourth of July Director.

Vincent W. Nash, chairman of the Fourth of July committee, is doing excellent work in arousing enthusiasm for the celebration.

Since his election to the position he has been visiting the various lodges at their meetings and has given to each a general outline of the work to be accomplished.

There are many societies who have not as yet been heard from, and he desires that all send representatives to the meeting to be held next Monday evening.

If the different committees catch the spirit of enthusiasm which their chairman has, they will certainly accomplish much in making July Fourth one long to be remembered in Plainfield.

Transmission Company Elect.

The Bi-Metallic Electric Transmission company, held their annual meeting yesterday afternoon at their New Jersey office, 428 East Sixth street, and re-elected the following officers:

President — Colonel William H. Eckert; Vice-President — Willard M. Miner of Plainfield; Secretary and Treasurer—William Stanley Eckert.

How Is This Cranford?

Cranford has a dogcatcher and a dogpound. The later is located under the enginehouse. In fact it is Cranford's famous lockup, in which a prisoner was nearly drowned last winter. When there is no human being to occupy the lockup, the dogcatcher confines the disorderly dogs who run without a muzzle in its damp depths.

—A gang of men were put to work on Grant avenue yesterday laying sewer pipes.

THE LONG NAMED TRIBE.

They Entertain and Get Ready for the Fourth.

A large attendance turned out to the meeting of Paugh-Caugh-Naugh-Sinque Tribe of Red Men last night, and furthered their plan for the Fourth of July celebration. A number of visitors from Miantanomoh Tribe were present, several of whom gave very interesting talks.

The Big Chief then announced that there was a spread of corn and venison in the banquet hall, and invited all present to partake. The success of the supper was due to William J. Allen, Thomas Osment, and William Young.

The entertainment which followed was opened with a ringing address by V. W. Nash. He urged that the tribe put forth every effort to help the citizens of Plainfield make the coming celebration one that will be remembered. He was glad to see that the spirit of patriotism shown in seventy-six was inspired in the hearts of every citizen of our glorious little city. George C. Bedford recited, and Past Sachem Ulrich told a story in his usual catchy style. The Prophet of the Tribe gave a select reading, and Harry Runyon sang a Chinese song. Asa Pope sang a comic song, and was followed by Charles Holstein who sang a solo. He was in excellent voice, and the boys wanted more. D. C. Allen Sachem of Mintanomoh, made a neat address. The evening's entertainment closed with a song by the Senior Sagamore, George Bedford.

DIOCESAN UNION FIELD DAY.

To Be Held at Caledonian Park, Newark, on August 10th.

The Catholic Young Men's Diocesan Union, of the Newark Diocese, of which the C. Y. M. L., of Plainfield, is a prominent member, will hold their annual field day and reception on Saturday, August 10th, at Caledonian Park, Newark. Professor Nichol's orchestra, of Newark, has been engaged for this affair.

The following events will be contested for among the associations connected with the Union: 100 yards dash, 300 yards run, 880 yards run, 440 yards novice race, one mile run, throwing 16-pound shot, broad jump, high jump, one mile bicycle race, two-mile bicyle race. Prizes will be given to the winners of each event. The club scoring the highest number of points will be awarded a handsome silk banner.

Entries will close on Sunday, August 4th, with the secretary, John T. O'Hara, 48 Commerce street, Newark. Entrance fee is fifty cents for each event.

AFRICA TALKED ABOUT.

And at the Conclusion Business Matters Are Discussed.

An interesting missionary meeting was held at the Crescent Avenue church last evening. The subject was Africa, and George Beebe presided. Papers were read by G. L. Schoonmaker, George Frost, Wm. D. Murray and Rev. Dr. Richards. Following this meeting a business session was held which was presided over by Charles Place. The trustees were authorized to go ahead and make the alterations to the gallery. A committee of twelve was appointed to readjust the pew rents. They were: H. B. Newhall, chairman, C. F. Abbott, J.T. Baker, J. B. Coward, H. P. Reynolds, S. A. Ginna, S. C. Cahoone, T. Rushmore, S. Yerkes, W. M. Stout, F. Bushnell, E. B. Clark.

Mr. Pargiter's Opening.

Alexander Pargiter will open his new fancy dry goods store on the corner of Park avenue and West Second street on Saturday. The interior of the store has been remodeled and redecorated, and is filled with an entirely new and well selected stock of goods. The location which Mr. Pargiter has chosen for the establishment of this business is a convenient one, and there is but little question but what he will build up a substantial business.

Last of the Season.

Tomorrow evening the Christian Endeavor society of Trinity Reformed church will hold their last sociable of the season in the lecture room of the church. An invitation has been extended to the society of the German Reformed church, and also to the Junior society of Trinity church to be present and enjoy an evening of sociability.

Finished At Last.

The sewer work on Watchung avenue was completed today and the street cars were able to reach the terminus on that thoroughfare. A few men were left there to clean up the street and put it in the condition it was before the work was commenced.

MARRIAGES AT TWILIGHT.

THE MORTON-BOHL NUPTIALS CELEBRATED.

A Pretty Borough Wedding Last Night—The Bride, Handsomely Gowned, Given Away By Her Uncle.

The marriage of William Henry Bohl to Miss Mary Wilhelmina Morton took place at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Martha Morton, No. 8 Stone street, last evening at half-past seven o'clock. The house was prettily decorated with daisies. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Herbert F. Randolph of Grace M. E. church. The bride was given away by her uncle, James P. Homan. The bride wore a traveling fawn color cloth suit, trimmed with white satin, pearl buttons, and ribbon. She carried a bouquet of white roses. The bridemaid was Miss Etta VanBuskert, who wore a gray crepon trimmed with green. She carried a bouquet of pink roses. The best man was Augustus Bahr, of New York, cousin of the groom. The wedding march was played by Thomas Hughes of this city. The presents were handsome and useful. After the ceremony was performed a bountiful supper was served and an hour of social time was spent. There was about one hundred relatives and friends present, many from New York, Newark, Elizabeth and Somerville. The young couple left under a shower of rice and good wishes for Philadelphia, where they will leave today for Washington. On their return they will reside on Stone street in the house lately built and furnished by Mr. Bohl.

Randolph—Randolph.

In the Church of Heavenly Rest in New York last night the wedding of Miss Byrdee Randolph, of LaGrande avenue, this city, to George Randolph, of Memphis, Tenn., was solemnized. The pretty service of the Episcopal church prevailed, which was witnessed by a number from this city.

Marriage at Mt. Bethel.

The marriage of Mary Casonore, of Mt. Bethel, to Henry Williams, of Warrenville, took place last night at the home of the bride. A number of Plainfield guests were present at the ceremony.

Cleaning Up Rahway.

The Rahway city authorities are making a vigorous war on all tin signs and placards nailed upon fences and walls. Street Commissioner Stelle and his men will go the rounds of the city and remove all such advertising not on the billboards. There is a prohibiting ordinance on the city books, but it has been a dead letter many years. Arrests will be made for nailing up signs. An effort will be made to prevent people from sweeping dirt into the streets.

To Be Tried Out of Jersey.

The case of the alleged post office thieves, Killoran, Allen and Russell, who were thought to have been the First National bank thieves, which has been up before Commissioner Shields in New York several times, was up again yesterday. The finding of an indictment in Illinois induced the Government yesterday to abandon the case against them in New Jersey, and to commence an examination of the Illinois witnesses, it being their purpose to take them to the latter place for trial instead of to New Jersey.

Justice Nash's Court.

The following cases are set down in Justice Nash's court: Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company against Huff, returnable June 21st; Herlich against Williams, returnable June 19th; Roberts against Terrill, returnable June 19; Knip against Frucht, returnable June 19; Boyle against Walpole, returnable June 21st; Day against Kriney, returnable June 17th.

—The Adams will case, in which Judge Coddington, of this city, is counsel for the caveators, will be opened again in Somerset county orphans court on June 21st.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mrs. Thos. Eggers, 139 Florida St., San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result everything else, then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottle at Randolph's drug store. Regular size, 50c and $1.

HER DYING CONFESSION

After Years Mrs. Good Reveals Two Murders.

Tells Her Former Lover That She Killed Her Baby, and Then Sends for a Preacher and Tells Him That She Poisoned Her Grandmother Years Ago.

Lancester, Pa., June 13.—After bearing the burden in silence for forty years of a double murder, Mrs. Hetty Good, an old woman, when confronted with the terrors of death confessed to the crimes committed in her youth. Mrs. Good lived in Bowmansville, a place near here, and was 65 years of age. No shadow of suspicion of an awful crime had ever rested upon her, and in the eyes of her neighbors she was an unsuspected woman.

Tried To End Her Life.

For several years past Mrs. Good has been slowly dying of consumption, and knowing that her end was drawing near, and probably harassed by the agonies of remorse, on Monday of last week she cut her throat. Her attempt at suicide, however, was a failure, and several days more of life were given her in which to suffer. After her abortive attempt at suicide Mrs. Good asked that William Griffiths, who formerly lived at Bowmansville, but is now a resident of Mohansville, Berks county, this state, be sent for.

Her Lover of Forty Years Ago.

Griffiths is said to have been Mrs. Good's lover of forty years ago, when she was a fair young woman. Griffiths obeyed the summons of his old sweetheart and to him Mrs. Good confessed that she had beaten out her baby's brains and buried it in the yard of her house.

Killed Her Grandmother Also.

The unnatural crime of infanticide was not the only one that rested upon Mrs. Good's conscience. On Tuesday she sent for the Rev. John Horning, a Mennonite preacher of Bowmansville, and to him Mrs. Good confessed that she had killed her grandmother.

Sanctioned by Her Grandfather.

She said she killed Mrs. Hutchinson, her grandmother, by the cowardly and secret means of poison. Mrs. Good said that the crime had been committed with the full knowledge and consent of her grandfather, Mrs. Hutchinson's husband, as the woman was old and decrepit and in the way.

Startling Developments Expected.

After making her confession of her grandmother's murder, Mrs. Good grew rapidly worse and died. It is rumored that there will be other startling developments. The woman's grandfather, whom she accused of being a partner with her in the death of his wife, died several years ago.

FOR A COLONY IN CANADA.

Salvation Army Preparing To Buy Land in the Dominion.

London, June 13.—The Canadian Gazette is authorized to deny the story that Gen. Booth, the head of the Salvation army, would send 10,000 emigrants to Canada in the autumn. An official of the army will go to Canada to look for a location for an army colony and to negotiate with the government for procuring the land, but the further plans are as yet incomplete.

WAS THE GINITA LOST?

Feared that Mr Sloan's Yacht Has Been Wrecked.

Syracuse, N. Y., June 13.—A Cape Vincent dispatch to the Standard says that a small yacht answering the description of George B. Sloan's Ginita was seen last Thursday off O'Neil's point on a shoal heading into the heavy sea. She finally disappeared. Wreckage is washing ashore and parties are searching for the bodies of the crew.

WELCH DIES IN A HOSPITAL.

The Old Man Who Walked from Detroit to Newark with His Wife.

Newark, N. J., June 13.—John E. Welch, 73 years old, who walked to this city from Michigan with his wife, died at the city hospital yesterday afternoon. He was without relatives or friends and there is no one to claim the body, or see that it is given decent burial. Welch had an interesting history.

Senator Quay's Son Married.

Pittsburg, June 13.—Hon. Richard R. Quay, son of United States Senator Quay, was married last night to Miss Elizabeth Loring Waters, at the home of the bride's parents, at Sewickley, Pa. The young couple will leave for the White mountains to-day, where they will spend their honeymoon.

Covington Declared Insane.

London, June 13.—It has been certified by physicians that the American, Lorenzo Covington, who was arrested for threateniug to murder Cardinal Vaughn, is insane. The magistrate ordered that Covington be confined in an asylum during her majesty's pleasure.

Damages Against a Newspaper.

New Haven Conn., June 13.—Judge Prentice, of the superior court in the libel suits of Thomas H. Sullivan and W. J. Atwater, of this city, against the New Haven News, has awarded Sullivan $100 and Atwater $500, both with costs.

Vetoed by Gov. Werts.

Trenton, N. J., June 13.—The bill requiring applicants for pardon, parole or remission of fine to file their petitions at least thirty days before final action thereon, has been vetoed by Gov. Werts.

A Sequel to Trilby.

London, June 13.—The Daily News will say to-day that Du Maurier has finished a new novel that is virtually a sequel to "Trilby." The scenes are laid in Antwerp, Paris and London.

Big Shoe Factory Burned.

Bath, N. Y., June 13.—The Gregson-Dolson shoe factory was totally destroyed by fire last night. The loss is $36,000; insurance, $27,000. About 100 persons are thrown out of employment.

Hornpipe Will Not Start.

New York, June 13.—James R. Keene says that his horse Hornpipe, the winner of the Brooklyn handicap will not start in the suburban.

MADE A POOR SHOWING.

Cornell Men Row a Series of Races with a Scratch Crew.

Henley-on-Thames, June 13.—Last evening the Cornell crew rowed a series of races against an untrained scratch crew made up of members of the Henley club. In the Cornell boat were Matthews, Bentley, Roe, Freeborn, Shape, Hall, Louis and Hamilton, stroke. On the way down the Americans had the lead, but at the start the two boats were even.

Scratch Crew in the Lead.

The Henley crew then immediately began to draw away and were a quarter of a length ahead by the time they pulled sixteen strokes, when they stopped rowing, having broken a rowlock string. A second start was made after the damage had been repaired, and the Henley boat again secured a lead.

An Even Race.

Cornell, however, soon showed in front, but Henley again drew up about level, and both crews ceased rowing, having covered a distance of a quarter of a mile. The boats were put about and the crews rowed from Bushey Gate to Henley bridge against the stream. The Henley crew took a length's start, rowing thirty-six strokes a minute. Cornell, pulling forty-six, overtook them in about 200 yards, when Henley again began to draw away.

Surprised at Cornell's Bad Showing.

The rowing of the Americans became ragged, but they soon steadied themselves, passing Henley, and were a length ahead upon reaching the bridge. The distance covered was over half a mile. Much surprise was expressed among the spectators that Cornell was unable to leave the scratch crew with greater ease.

A LAWYER'S FORGERY.

Large Amounts Involved in Mortgages of the Suicide Woolley.

London, June 13.—It is learned that E. A. Woolley, a prominent lawyer who committed suicide in March last, was involved in extensive forgeries extending over a period of several years. It is estimated that they amount to between £50,000 and £140,000. He effected mortgages on the property of others, in some instances mortgaging the property two or three times. His frauds were discovered by accident when he was ill. Many well-known lawyers have been victimized through his fraudulent transactions, and through these lawyers hundreds of families throughout the country have suffered.

ONLY LACKS BACKING.

It Is Believed That Johnson Is Willing To Meet Zimmerman.

Asbury Park, N. J., June 13.—It was rumored around town yesterday that Johnson had finally decided to accept Zimmerman's proposition to race for $5,000 a side, and that his new employers had agreed to post the money at once. Inquiry at the club house failed to confirm the report, but the opinion was freely ventured among the clubmen that Johnson was willing to race, provided he could secure the necessary backing. It would not be a matter of surprise if the prospects for a race in Asbury Park would take a sudden turn this way within a week.

MORE COLIMA SURVIVORS.

Three Americans, Two of Them Women, Saved.

San Francisco, June 13.—An Examiner dispatch from Manzanillo says that a letter received by the agents of the Pacific mail here states that two women and one man, American passengers from the lost Colima, landed at Naraganastilla, fifty miles southeast of Manzanillo, on May 29, and have been taken care of by the Indians. The story is corroborated by A. Daana Martina, the customs collector at Manzanillo.

William O'Brien's Bankruptcy.

London, June 13.—In the bankruptcy court, on the motion of Patrick Alexander Chance, who was recently accorded a verdict of £407 against William O'Brien, member of parliament for the city division of Cork, a receiving order was registered against Mr. O'Brien. This compels the latter to retire from parliament.

For the Ingham Prize.

Washington, June 13.—Surgeon-General Tryon, of the navy, and Rev. Dr. Hamlin, of Washington, have been designated by the department of English language and literature at Union college, New York, to act as members of a committee to examine the essays submitted in competition for the Ingham prizes.

Dismissed from the Navy.

Washington, June 13.—The president has directed that Paymaster H. R. Smith of the navy be dismissed from the service, approving the record, findings and sentence of a court-martial which two months ago tried Smith on charges of drunkenness, absence without leave and scandalous conduct.

Grand Recorder Knights Templars.

Courruna, Mich., June 13.—Sir William Bryan Isaacs, jr., of Richmond, Va., has been appointed grand recorder of the grand encampment, Knights Templars of the United States, in place of very eminent William Bryan Isaacs, deceased, by most eminent grand master Hugh McCurdy.

Will Be a Cripple for Life.

Richmond, Va., June 13.—Morganfield, one of the Aquia Creek train robbers, who was brought to the penitentiary a short while ago, is able to walk about on crutches. He will be a cripple for life though, as he will never be able to bear the weight of his body on his injured limb.

Gen. Schofield's Tour of the West.

Washington, June 13.—A telegram was received at army headquarters yesterday from General Schofield, stating that he would leave Fort D. A. Russell to-day for Fort Douglas, Utah. From there he will go to San Francisco by the way of Ogden.

MUST NOT AID REBELS

President Cleveland Issues a Proclamation.

Citizens and Other Persons in This Country Admonished To Take No Part in the Cuban Rebellion—Olney Issues Orders—Gomez Eludes His Foes—Insurrection Spreading.

Washington, June 13.—The secretary of state has sent formal communications to the attorney general and secretaries of the treasury and the navy directing them to take all necessary steps to enforce the neutrality laws, in view of the increased activity of the insurrectionists' in Cuba and their sympathizers in this country.

The President Takes a Hand.

The president has issued a proclamation stating that "as Cuba is now the seat of serious civil disturbances, accompanied by armed resistance to the authority of the established government of Spain, a power with which the United States desires to remain on terms of peace and amity, therefore, I Grover Cleveland, president of the United States of America, do hereby admonish all such citizens and other persons to abstain from taking part in such disturbances. GROVER CLEVELAND."

Gomez Eludes His Foes.

Santiago de Cuba, June 13.—Maximo Gomez has reached Puerto Principe and crossed the frontier. He has about 2,000 men with him, and has succeeded in evading the government troops sent to head him off. The invasion of Puerto Principe means that the insurrection, which has so far been confined to the Santiago province, is extending westward. In Puerto Principe province hundreds of Cubans are joining Gomez. The Marquis de Santa Lucia has again taken up arms, and with him several deputies and young men of good families. Gen. Campos has asked for additional troops to suppress this new uprising.

More Troops for Cuba.

Madrid, June 13.—Preparations are under way to have 40,000 troops ready to sail for Cuba in August, besides the 10,000 men who will start for the island next month. The senate passed a bill authorizing the government to raise 600,000 pesetas, should that amount be necessary to put down the insurrection.

Insurgents in Camaguey.

An official despatch from Havana states that insurgents are appearing in the Camaguey district of the central province. This is regarded as inportant.

THE SURRENDER OF DEBS.

Says He Did Not Awake in Time To Be on Hand Tuesday.

Chicago, June 13.—E. V. Debs, the American Railway union leader, presented himself at the United States marshal's office at noon to surrender himself and undergo imprisonment. He had been lost to the authorities since noon Tuesday. Debs said that he had gone to sleep at a friend's house and had not awakened until yesterday morning.

Elliott Arrives Also.

Martin J. Elliott, the A. R. U. director, who was late in arriving from his home in Mahoning, Pa., accompanied the labor leader to serve the rest of his three months sentence. Debs was mirthful and passed all inquisitive remarks with a laugh. "It was a case of necessity," said the A. R. U. president and prisoner as he bade good-by to a group of admires at the depot. "I never broke my word before." Lester C. Hubbard, who is held by the marshal responsible for Debs' moral lapses, was conspicuous by his absence.

SNIVELY DIVORCE SUIT.

A Settlement of the Proceeding Said To Have Been Made.

Troy, N. Y., June 13.—It is stated by counsel for Mrs. Snively in the divorce suit brought by her against the Rev. Thaddeus A. Snively, of Chicago, that Mr. Snively had withdrawn the charges made by him against his wife, both in his answer and in the cross complaint filed in the Santa Barbara suit. It is understood that amicable arrangements have been made between the interested parties. This is practically a settlement of the divorce proceedings.

RUMOR ABOUT MISS WILLARD.

It Is Reported Once More That She Is About To Be Married.

London June 13.—The Mascot says it is rumored that Miss Frances E. Willard, president of the Women's Christian Temperance union, who is now in England, is about to be married to an Englishman of wealth and position of prominence in reform work. This is a revival of a rumor which was in circulation about a month ago.

Demand Food for Their Families.

Midland, Mich., June 13.—Twenty-four men, heads of families at Hubbard, marched into Midland yesterday and besieged the court house, demanding something to eat from the county officials. They claim that thirty families are destitute and that the women and children are crying for bread. Action will immediately be taken to relieve their familes.

Ontario Officials May Accept Passes.

Ottawa, Ont., June 13.—The bill to prohibit members of parliament and senators accepting railway passes was defeated in the house last night by a vote of 46 ayes to 100 nays. Mr. Laurier and all the prominent liberal members voted for the bill, while all the cabinet ministers and leading conservatives voted against the measure.

STUDENT OHL'S DEATH

His Remains Taken Home by His Father.

Garret Cochran Not Yet Out of Danger, But His Physicians Are Hopeful—The Murderer of Young Ohl To Be Brought to a Speedy Trial.

Princeton, N. J., June 13.—When it became known that Frederick Ohl, the Princeton student, who was shot Saturday night by the negro Collins, was dead the feeling among the Princeton students was very bitter. The members of the faculty expressed deep sympathy for the father of the murdered student President Patton and Dean Murray had the college take action on the death of Ohl. The student was in a comatose condition for several hours before the end came. His father and Dr. Denton were at his bedside at the last.

The Body Taken Home.

As soon as the necessary papers were obtained from the county physician the body of the dead student was taken to his father's home, Mr. Ohl accompanying the body with a committee of Princeton students. Student Cochran, who was also shot by the same negro is not out of danger, but the attending physician are hopeful of his recovery.

The Case of the Murderer.

In the case of the murderer, County Prosecutor Stockton will act promptly. The case will be presented to the Mercer county grand jury, which is in session at Trenton, and Collins will undoubtedly be indicted for murder in the first degree. Collins has quite a number of friends among his own race who, it is claimed will see that he has able counsel. They believe in his statement that he shot in self-defense. It is admitted by Princeton college people that the shooting would not have occurred if Ohl and Cochran had not followed Collins and Downes to Anderson's saloon.

Denounced As Wilful Murder.

Senator Cochran says he has investigated the story that his son and young Ohl first attacked Collins and Downes with fence rails and failed to find any evidence to support this story. He denounces the shooting of Ohl as a wilful murder. Mr. Thompson, the only eyewitness of the shooting, says the attack was unprovoked and cold-blooded. The negro Collins remarked in his hearing, five minutes before the occurrence, he says, that he would shoot some one before he got through the night. Mr. Thompson's statement is corroborated by Downes, Collins's friend, who was with him all Saturday night.

FITZ UNDER THE TAPE.

Physical Measurements of the Man Who Is To Meet Corbett.

New York, June 13.—"Bob" Fitzsimmons decided to have his physical measurements taken previous to training for his battle with Corbett, and he therefore went to the office of Dr. Gibbs, last evening. When Fitz was ready for the tape, the onlookers were astonished at his magnificent development of chest and arms. He is now much heavier than for some time past. He weighs 185 pounds in his street clothes, and is in robust health. The present figures are:

Fitz's Make Up.

Height, 5 feet, 11 3-4 inches; Neck, 15 inches, a gain of 1-4 of an inch. Right bicep, 11 1-2 inches; right forearm, 10 1-2 inches; right forearm, expanded, 12 inches; left forearm, 10 1-2 inches; wrist, 6 1-2 inches; waist, 29 inches; a decrease of 3-4 of an inch; right thigh, 20 1-2 inches; left thigh, 20 1-2 inches; right calf, 13 3-4 inches; across shoulders, 20 3-4 inches; length of both arms extended, 75 inches; right fist, 10 inches; chest, normal, 39 inches; chest, expanded, 44 1-4 inches.

Corbett's Last Measurements.

The last measurements of Corbett were as follows: Weight, 188 pounds; height, 6 feet, 1 1-2 inches; reach, 29 3-4 inches; chest, 38 inches; waist, 33 inches; thigh, 21 inches; calf, 14 inches; biceps, 14 1-2 inches; forearm 11 1-2 inches.

THE BERING SEA BILL.

Further Details of the Measure Introduced by Sir Edward Grey.

London, June 13.—The Bering Sea bill, which was introduced into the house of commons on Monday by Sir Edward Grey, parliamentary secretary for the foreign office, and which passed its first reading then, replaces the act of 1893, which expires in July, and will enable the government to carry out its agreement with Russia. It empowers the government, by order in council, to prohibit seal catching. The act remains in force until January, 1898. In addition to the Bering sea award in regard to seizures, it empowers the officers of foreign states which are parties to the agreement to seize British ships and equipment when they violate the order. British officers have the same powers in regard to foreign ships. An impression prevails here that Canada will vigorously oppose the passage of the measure.

Receives the Diplomatic Corps.

Washington, June 13.—Secretary Olney yesterday announced to the diplomatic corps his appointment as secretary of state, and informed the members that he will receive them at 11 o'clock this morning, following the invariable custom of assigning Thursday as diplomatic reception day.

Bulkley-Kidder Wedding.

Plymouth, N. H., June 13.—Edwin Bulkley and Lucy W. Kidder were married last evening. The groom is a member of the banking firm of Spencer Trask & Co., of New York and the bride is a daughter of Amos M. Kidder, a member of the banking firm of Kidder & Co., New York.

Fast on the Rocks.

New London, Conn., June 13.—Captain Scott has returned from the wreck of the steamer Olinda, off Goose Neck, Fisher's island. The Olinda is fast on the rocks. Scott believes that with good weather he can save the vessel.

Dr. Verneuil Dead.

Paris, June 13.—Dr. Aristide Auguste Stanislas Verneuil, a distinguished French physician and surgeon, is dead. He was born in 1823.

ABANDONED PASSENGERS SAFE.

The Burning Why Not Beached After the Crew's Desertion.

St. Malo, June 13.—Particulars have been received here of the desertion of the passengers of the British vessel Why Not by the crew after fire broke out on board of her while on her way to the island of Jersey. It appears that fire was discovered in the Why Not's hold on Saturday, and while the sailors were attempting to quench the flames a bucket was dropped overboard. A boat was lowered to recover it, and the captain jumped into this boat and was followed by the crew. One passenger sprang overboard and swam after the boat, into which he was reluctantly taken.

Passengers Manned the Vessel.

The deserted passengers were greatly alarmed, and the excitement among them increased when the small boat was seen to be pulling for Erquy, where the crew eventually landed. Taking advantage of a breeze, the passengers handled the Why Not as best they could, and succeeded in beaching her near Erquy. The incident has caused intense excitement at St. Brieux, the nearest town to Erquy, and the matter is being thoroughly investigated by the local authorities. The captain of the Why Not, although not under arrest, is closely watched by the police. It is understood that the British consul here will take the matter up, and upon his report will depend further action.

HARLEM SHIP CANAL.

President Cleveland Will Not Be Present at the Ceremonies.

New York, June 13.—General Egbert L. Viele has received a letter from President Cleveland's private secretary announcing that the president would be unable to take part in the Harlem Ship canal celebration on Monday next. Governor Morton has promised to be in attendance, and among others who will be present are Governor Werts, of New Jersey, and Mayor Yard, of Trenton, N. J. Dr. Emil Henel, who will have charge of the medical arrangements during the celebration, has formed a volunteer marine ambulance corps, with ten stations, all in charge of competent surgeons.

PENNSYLVANIA CIGARMAKERS.

Resolutions Calling on the President To Pardon Debs Passed.

Scranton, Pa., June 13.—The cigarmakers state union convention in session here passed resolutions claiming that Debs and his associates had been denied the privileges guaranteed by the constitution of the United States, namely that of a trial by jury, and recommending that the convention petition President Cleveland to pardon Debs and his companions. The membership of the union in the state is now 5,000. It was decided to hold the next convention at Reading in May of next year.

League Games Yesterday.

At New York—New York, 3; Cleveland, 8. At Brooklyn—Brooklyn, 13; St. Louis, 8. At Boston—Boston, 5; Chicago, 2. At Baltimore—Baltimore, 1; Pittsburg, 5. At Washington—Washington, 1; Cincinnati, 5; game called at end of third inning on account of wet grounds. At Philadelphia — Philadelphia vs. Louisville game postponed on account of wet grounds.

Clinchy Must Answer.

Albany, June 11.—Governor Morton has ordered Anthony Clinchy, of New York city, the state gas inspector, to answer within eight days the charges made in the report of the special legislative committee which has been investigating state departments. The charges are that Mr. Clinchy has used his office for personal advantage, and also charges mismanagement.

Inquiries About American Paper.

Washington, June 13.—United States Consul Meeker, at Bradford, informs the department of state that he has received inquiries from persons at Leicester, England, who desire to open negotiations with American manufacturers relative to supplying paper to be used for moulds in making stockings, in place of the wooden moulds now used.

Boston Custom House Inquiry Ended

Boston, June 13.—The United States treasury agents, who have been at the custom house for several days past, have finished their labors and left for Washington. It is understood that no reductions in the force at Boston nor any reduction in salaries will be recommended.

Hopes for Gail Hamilton's Recovery.

Washington, June 13.—Miss Dodge (Gail Hamilton) passed a good night and is much better this morning. Her improvement to-day is so marked that her friends, the Blaines, now have hopes of her recovery.

Ambassador MacVeagh in London.

London, June 13. — Ambassador Bayard, accompanied by the Hon. Wayne MacVeagh, American ambassador to Italy, visited the Earl of Kimberlay at the foreign office yesterday afternoon.

Oil Fire at Buffalo.

Buffalo, June 13.—A fire in the Atlas Oil works, corner of Elk and Babcock streets, at midnight, destroyed a paint shop and eight tank cars.

ARRIVAL OF ST. LOUIS

Crowds Greet the Steamer at Southampton.

She Reaches Port on Her Initial Voyage Across the Atlantic at 4.30 O'clock This Morning—Seven Days and About Five Hours in Making the Trip.

Southampton, June 13.—At 4:20 o'clock this morning, in broad daylight, the American line steamship St. Louis slowly entered her dock, looming tall and majestic on the high water, and dwarfing all the vessels near her. She had a tug at her bow and another at her stern, and they slowly swung her head seaward. Gangs of workingmen were lying about waiting for the steamer to come in. The customs officers were in readiness near the usual long temporary tables.

Hundreds Greeted Her.

Despite the earliness of the hour hundreds of passengers were on the deck of the St. Louis as she came in sight, and hundreds of people were on the wharf to greet the steamer. The special train to convey the passengers to London was drawn inside the sheds, and, as soon as the custom house requirements were complied with, it started.

Pleased with Her Performance.

The officials of the company here are agreeably surprised at the performance of the steamer on her first voyage. Edmund Taylor, the managing director of the company in England, who was among those who awaited the arrival of the St. Louis, expresses himself as greatly pleased. Mr. Taylor hardly hopes that the vessel will show speed until her second or third voyage, and then only what is safe. The St. Louis, he adds, was not built so much for speed as for comfort and safety. Her record from the Scilly Islands to the Lizard was beyond the average. This has awakened some admiration and pique curiosity here.

Britons May Inspect Her.

The vessel will be open while in port. A small charge will be made for admission, and the proceeds will be given to a local infirmary. The railway and town officials will give a lunch on the steamer, and the representatives of the London and local press will, on Saturday, accompany the vessel in Southampton water.

She Did Some Fast Work.

The St. Louis' time from the lightship to Scilly islands was 6 day, 17 hours and 13 minutes, and allowing 12 hours and 30 minutes for the run from Scilly to the Needles, her time would be 7 days, 5 hours and 43 minutes. The present eastward Southampton record is held by the steamer Furst Bismarck, made in September, 1893, and is 6 days, 10 hours and 55 minutes. As the St. Louis made only about 16.40 knots for the first 250 miles out, it can be seen that she did some very fast work later in the trip.

MAJOR HOULAHAN DEAD.

His Fight for Irish Freedom and His Service in the Civil War.

Washington, June 13.—Major Richard Hulahan, one of the leading participants in the Stevens Fenian movement, died in this city yesterday afternoon. During the "Young Ireland" movement of 1848, he was associated with John Mitchell and made many contributions, chiefly in poetic form, to the Dublin Nation. He left Dublin in 1849 and came to the United States and during the civil war served as a first lieutenant in the 164th regiment, New York volunteers, and also as aide de camp on the staff of General Corcoran. On account of disabilities incurred in the line of duty, he was mustered out of service, and later was breveted major for gallant conduct in action at Suffolk, Va. Through Horace Greeley, he secured a clerical position in the treasury department, which he held up to the time of his death. As an advocate of the home rule cause, he carried on a correspondence with Charles Stewart Parnell, whom he knew personally, and the letters written to him by Mr. Parnell were used as evidence in proving that the "Parnellism and crime" papers published in the London Times were forgeries.

NOORLAND IN COLLISION.

She Badly Damages the Oil Tank Steamer Deutschland.

New York, June 13.—The oil tank steamer Deutschland, which arrived last evening, while coming into the harbor, through Gedney's channel, came in collision with the outgoing Red Star line steamship Noorland. The oil steamer was badly damaged, but the Noorland evidently was not much the worse for her experience, for she proceeded on her passage. She had 156 saloon passengers.

POOL-SELLING IN CONNECTICUT.

Defeat of the Local-Option Amendment to the Racing Bill.

New Haven, June 13.—The lower house at Hartford yesterday rejected the "local option" amendment of the pool law by a vote of 128 to 22, which undobtedly kills it. The amendment opened race tracks to pools for twelve days in the year, with the consent of the town authorities. The senate had passed the bill by a vote of 12 to 7

Confirmation in Chinatown.

New York, June 13.—Archbishop Corrigan paid a visit to Chinatown yesterday to administer the sacrament of confirmation in the church of the Transfiguration. Among those presented for confirmation were several children whose parents on one side were Chinese and on the other Irish.

Tomorrow is flag day. Don't forget that.

The latest thing in trusts is a syndicate formed for the control of ice in the big cities. Next!

The editor of the Newark Advertiser must feel like dropping into a hole and then drawing the hole in after him.

The socalled amateur bicycle riding at the National circuit meets of the L. A. W. is, in the main, a farce, and an injustice to the genuine amateur rider.

The Democratic party are in need of no better campaign material for the fall elections than some of the editorials published in the Courier-News the past few days.

The death rate in Plainfield is not as large as some may imagine when they read the heading, "A Prosperous Cemetery," printed over the report of the meeting of the Hillside Cemetery Association in the Courier-News of last night.

The cold water advocates, albeit the Prohibitionists, are in session in Newark, and are 600 strong. They deserve credit, at least, for the tenacious devotion to a gathering who, like the humpback man, never seems to grow or dwindle.

The financial outlook in Clapp & Company's weekly market letter is summed up as follows:

The motto on the silver dollar is being emphasized by the courageous men of field, factory and finance. Political and commercial pessimists offer their stock of woes and difficulties to a people too busy making money to hear or heed. The ripening harvest begins to call for the few who still stand idle in the market place.

Elizabeth, Rahway and some of the smaller towns are now talking about celebrating the glorious Fourth. Plainfield was the first town in this section of New Jersey to broach the matter of observing this natal day, and her celebration will outthunder all the others. The advice of The Press to the other towns is to shut up shop and come to the Colorado of the East.

There is but little question but what the fire department of the borough needs an assistant chief, since it has been decided to establish a company at Bull Frog city, the work devolving upon Chief Fairchild will be at times too much. The Borough Council in recognizing this fact could make no better selection than to name Julius J. Stahl as Mr. Fairchild's assistant.

Elizabeth councilmen are apparently built on the economic basis. They have prepared a dog pound in the rear of the city hall, where they propose to gasocute the mongrel curs. But the property owners who reside near the place where it is calculated to assassinate the canines have entered a vigorous protest against the consummation of such plans, on the grounds, no doubt, that the ki yis of terriers will be more than they can stand and preserve a clear conscience.

Reports from the seacoast give promise of a very profitable season. From Ocean Grove we learn that more houses had been rented up to the 18th of June, and at better prices, than last year at the same period, and that the demand has been for the better class of houses. From Long Branch it is reported that the arrivals of cottage residents during last week, at that place and in the vicinity, far outnumbered any previous year for the first week in June. The greater part of the city people who own cottages along the ocean front are said to be occupying them two weeks earlier than usual.—True American.

New Brunswick with 20,000 population has eighty-one applicants for liquor licenses, the most of which will be granted. Plainfield and North Plainfield, with an equal number of people, have eighteen licensed places. There is some little difference.—Plainfield Daily Press.

Yes, there is a big difference. And this may account for the fact that, in New Brunswick, they assault editors for telling the truth; that they deadlock their City Council after the people declared against partisan politics of the old, corrupt school; that about the hardest place in all New Jersey to work reform is this same city of New Brunswick. But the facts are that the old regime is about ended, and though its death throes are violent and its struggles painful to witness, the final collapse is near at hand, and with this collapse there may come a revision of the number of licenses, say on the Plainfield basis.—Elizabeth Daily Journal.

SCOTCH PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

All Is Not Smooth Sailing With the Borough Commission.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Collins are in our village on a visit to Mr. Collins's parents.

Dr. Wescott has changed his residence to Fanwood, retaining an office in Scotch Plains.

Frederick Happel, who recently fractured his kneecap, is getting along very satisfactorily.

Mrs. Braker, the wife of the pastor of the Baptist church, has left for a few weeks on a visit to her parents in Pennsylvania.

The Young People's Junior Christian Endeavor Society will be given a reception on Saturday afternoon in the lecture room of the Baptist church.

By an arrangement with Myron Young, the Scotch Plains ball club have secured a new ball ground on Park avenue, for which they pay $25 for the season.

The quarterly meeting of the Exempt Fireman's Association of Fanwood was held in the truck house on Monday evening. No business other than the collection of fines and dues was transacted.

The genial Wm. Gibbs withdraws from us his presence and that of his family for the summer to take a tour north. His place will be occupied during his absence by a Mr. Miller from New York.

On Sunday evening last Mr. Taylor, of Plainfield, led the meeting of the young people in the Baptist church. His topic was the "Good Samaritan." He proved a very pleasant speaker, and his remarks were highly appreciated.

Improvements in our immediate vicinity are "few and far between." Nevertheless they are sometimes made. Benjamin Elliott has built a new blacksmith shop on the property recently purchased by him on the corner of Park and Mountain avenues and removed there from his old stand.

The improvements in Fanwood go steadily forward. John Stevens has contracted with John Boorman, for the erection of a dwelling, and from the care with which it is reported the materials are selected, it may be expeted that that edifice will prove an additional attraction to the place. Messrs. Westphal and Coward are erecting a barn for Benjamin Urner on his place.

All is not smooth sailing on the new Fanwood Borough Commission so it appears. The two factions may be designated as the pros and cons. The former are elated by their victory; the latter are breathing out threatenings and slaughter. An application was made by the latter to the Township Committee on Monday evening, requesting them to instruct their counsel to investigate the matter and institute proceedings to have the recent election declared illegal. The application was refused the committee deeming it best that the beligrents should fight out their own battles in their own way.

Old People.

Old people who require medicine to regulate the bowels and kidneys will find the true remedy in Electric Bitters. This medicine does not stimulate and contains no whiskey nor other intoxicant, but acts as a tonic and alterative. It acts mildly on the stomach and bowels, adding strength and giving tone to the organs, thereby aiding nature in the performance of the functions. Electric Bitters is an excellent appetizer and aids digestion. Old people find it just exactly what they need. Price 50c a bottle at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

HEAVY ARMOR WAS SMASHED.

One Shot Like These Could Sink Our Greatest Battleship.

That our new man-of-war Oregon could be sunk by a single shot has been proved by a most remarkable series of armor tests which the Navy Department recently made. And this single shot, moreover, need not be in the bow or stern of the mighty ship, where her armor is comparatively thin.

Right on the side, where her armor is heaviest, protecting the vital parts of the vessel near the water line with immense plates of Harveyized nickel steel, the impact of a single shot, it has now been shown, could crush in the side of the ship, probably sending her to the bottom. This mighty ship of 10,231 tons displacement, the largest war vessel ever constructed on this continent, a veritable colossus of the sea, which cost the Government millions of dollars and was supposed to be impregnable, is now known to be at the mercy of newly improved projectiles which can crush in her sides and rip off her armor like so much tin.

As a result of these tests important modifications will be made in the armament and construction of the new battle-ships and men-of-war. For once the armor men have got the worst of it. There has long been pending in the Navy Department a contest between the Construction Bureau and the Ordnance Bureau regarding the main batteries of the two new battle-ships.

The Construction Bureau is composed of the chiefs of the various naval bureaus, and hitherto they have favored 12-inch guns, while the Ordnance Bureau has been decidedly in favor of 13-inch guns. An inch is a small matter for two dignified bodies of men of this kind to quarrel about, but it means that in the present case the only way to settle the matter was by a practical test of armor versus guns.

And it would seem from the tests that have just taken place that the 13-inch gun has immeasurably shown its superiority to the gun that is only one inch smaller in the bore. The side armor of the Oregon could fairly well resist any 12-inch gun afloat, but an additional inch in caliber gives the victory to the gun and robs the Oregon of any claim to being able to resist the largest cannon on men-of-war.

GIANT ICEBERGS AT SEA.

They Are Made Picturesqe by the Destructive Action of Ocean Currents.

Otto Nielsen, the Westernland's chief officer, as hearty an old salt as ever trod a quarter deck, declares that he never saw larger or finer bergs during the whole course of his experience than upon his last trip to New York.

"We were approaching the ice circle off Newfoundland," he said. "Passing steamers had signalled us that lots of icebergs were drifting about, and we kept a sharp lookout. The day was foggy, and smashing into an iceberg in the dark is no joke, let me tell you.

"Finally the fog lifted, and the sun shone out bright and clear. As we were speeding along I noticed a white speck off the starboard bow in the distance. 'There she is!' I exclaimed.

"'What!' queried a timid passenger; 'do you call that little speck an iceberg?'

"'That's just what it is,' said I, 'and it's fully twenty miles away. It will be big enough when we get near enough to take it all in.'

"We approached the berg rapidly. It appeared to grow right out from the sea. What a sight it was! It had the shape of a pyramid 100 feet high and 600 feet at least at the base.

"The sun shone on it from the south, causing it to send forth dazzling rays, like some huge diamond resting in a bed of azure blue.

"Now, about icebergs in general. Few persons have any conception of their actual size. Only one-ninth part of their bulk is above water. A berg, then, showing up one hundred feet high would really be nine hundred feet were it all above the surface.

"What a sight some of those ice monsters would be could we see them just as they are when they leave their frozen cradles of the Arctic! All the refrigerators in the world could not produce such a sight.

"You see," the nautical man continued, "or rather you do not see, an iceberg as it was when it first slipped into the water. The warm currents melt the softer particles of ice away below the surface. Soon the center of gravity is upset, so to speak. It becomes top heavy. Then, with a mighty upheaval, it turns over on its side, or, perhaps, completely round. We then view the work of the currents in the fantastic shapes we see before us.

"I once witnessed one of these interesting somersaults. It was a mighty sight. The water splashed hundreds of feet in the air. There was a low, rumbling sound, as of distant thunder, and great tidal waves swept by us as the monster settled in its new position.

"We saw many other icebergs during the trip. One was 200 feet high and 800 feet in length. It was slowly careening over to one side, even as we watched it. There was a chip of the old block, its top covered with snow just as it left its native home."

HOSPITAL TO RECEIVE ATTENTION.

City Officials Will Endeavor to Have City Cases Admitted.

The matter of taking care of persons who are ill, at the hospital, when they have no money or friends, will no doubt receive the attention it deserves at an early date. The city of Plainfield directly and indirectly pays into the hospital treasury a sufficient amount of money each year to meet the few cases, a sample of which was seen yesterday. Every year the several churches in the city have a special day set aside at which time an offering is made for the hospital, and the benefits derived directly by the city are very small in comparison.

WENTWORTH APPOINTED.

He Will Take the Magistracy Declined by Fanning.

New York, June 13.—Mayor Strong this morning offered to Lawyer Thomas F. Wentworth the vacant police magistracy declined by W. J. Fanning, and Mr. Wentworth has accepted. He will be sworn in this afternoon. Mr. Wentworth is a Republican of independent tendencies, and is a lawyer, with an office in Cedar street.

I have two little grandchildren who are teething this hot summer weather and are troubled with bowel complaint. I give them Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and it acts like a charm. I earnestly recommend it for children with bowel troubles. I was myself taken with a severe attack of bloody flux, with cramps and pains in my stomach, one-third of a bottle of this remedy cured me. Within twenty-four hours I was out of bed and doing my housework. Mrs. W. L. Dunagan, Bonaqua, Hickman Co., Tenn.

Tours to the North via Pennsylvania Railroad.

To provide the most attractive method of spending a summer holiday, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company has arranged to run two delightful tours to the north. The points included in the itinerary and the country traversed abound in nature's beauties. Magnificent scenery begins with the journey and ends only with its completion.

The names of the places to be visited are familiar to all and suggestive of wonderland. No matter how much may be expected, one cannot be disappointed in Watkin's Glen, Niagara Falls, Thousand Islands, Quebec, Montreal, Au Sable Chasm, Lakes Champlain and George, Saratoga or the Highlands of the Hudson. The dates fixed for the departure of these two tours are July 16th and August 20th, and the round-trip rate of $100 for New York, Brooklyn, Newark, Trenton, Philadelphia, Harrisburg, Baltimore, and Washington will cover all necessary expenses during the time absent. A beautiful descriptive itinerary can be procured from the tourist department of the Pennsylvania Railroad, 1196 Broadway, New York, or Room 411 Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destored forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflammed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness, caused by catarrh, that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

CYCLING COMMENT.

The Y. M. C. A. bicycle club will enjoy a run to New Brunswick this evening.

The membership of the League of American Wheelmen is receiving additions from all parts of the country, and as a result the division officers seem confident that the membsrship in the fall will reach 50,000. The renewals from this State thus far this season number 484.

It is expected that at the meeting of the Victor Wheelmen this evening, Israel Jones and Charles Vanderveer will be delegated to represent the club in the great bicycle run from Newark to Newburg next Sunday. There will probably be 100 cyclers in the run and they leave Newark about five o'clock in the morning. They will return on Monday by boat to New York.

The following letter from Charman Gideon of the L. A. W. Racing Board has just been received by James Willis, who rode for the Elizabeth Wheelmen last season:

You are hereby suspended from all amateur track racing, pending investigation into charges which have been made againt your amateur status. You are charged with having sold, or traded a wheel which you had taken in exchange for another won by you, accepting a loans in cash in making the transfer. You have thirty days in which to reply.

Mr. Willis, while riding is regarded by all his friends as being thoroughly honest in all dealings, and the charge can be attributed only to spite work. Mr. Willis feels very indignant, and is willing to spend considerable money to know the orignator of such a damaging charge to his character.

The prospects for a match race taking place between A. A. Zimmerman and John S. Johnson, the professional racing men, at the L. A. W. National meet are not encouraging. The Asbury Park Wheelmen, under whose auspices the meet will be held, are arranging some attractive amateur events for the meeting. The championship races will bring together all the crack racing men from all sections of the country, and as the athletic club track is being prepared for the meet, there is every reason to believe that new records will be created. The earliness of the National meet this season is inducing the managers of the various racing teams to arrange their dates so that the crack riders will not come together until the meeting at Asbury Park. There is a vast difference of opinion among the racing men this year as to what rider is entitled to the championship, and the dispute for it will be settled at the National meet.

THE SECRET ORDERS.

Friday, June 28th, has been set as the date for holding the first anniversary exercises of John Hand Camp, No. 28, Sons of Veterans.

Business of importance in regard to the Fourth of July celebration will be considered at the meeting of Franklin Council, No. 41, J. O. U. A. M., this evening, and every member is urged to be present.

Somerset Council, No. 109, Jr. O. U. A. M., will celebrate their anniversary tomorrow evening in their rooms in the Babcock building. It is hoped that State Councilor P. Hall Packer and State Secretary William H. Miers will be present.

Committees from Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., and Crescent Division, Uniformed Rank, met the committee from Unity Lodge, No. 102, K. of P., at the meeting of the latter last evening, and decided to consolidate for the Fourth of July celebration.

Court Plainfield, Independent Order of Foresters, meets tomorrow night, when two candidates will be initiated in Forestry, and definite action taken on the Fourth of July celebration. Other important matters will come up for consideration and every member is requested to be present at this meeting.

Through the courtesy of Joseph Bird, Court Deputy of Court Plain-Plainfield, The Press has received the following interesting facts concerning the Independent Order of Foresters: During the month of May the number of applications for membership received by the medical board was 4,022, of whom 3,611 were accepted, showing an advance of over 500 on the highest number of applications ever received in any one month. The surplus fund of the order on the 1st of June showed the high total of $1,317,000. On the 30th of May the corner stone of the Foresters' Temple was laid by His Excellency, the Earl of Aberdeen, Governor-General of Canada, in the presence of an immense concourse of Foresters and their friends. The Temple will be eight stories high, and will be the finest fraternal headquarters on the continent. The Forestic year closes on the 30th of June, and is every particular it will be the most prosperous year in the history of the order. The increase in the surplus has been $360,000, and in the membership about 18,000. For the month of June it is expected that at least 5,000 applications will be received. During the year new Courts have averaged 35 per month. The Supreme Court will meet at St. Martin's Town Hall, Trafalgar Square, London, England, on the 1st day of August. The High Court of Ontario will meet at London, Ontario, on the 8th of October.

Theodore B. Munn, well known in this city, died at his home in Newark early this morning. He was a brother of Mrs. J. D. Hedden and Mrs. Samuel D. Frazee of this city.

—The waiters of the Revere House will give a ball and prize cake walk in Central hall this afternoon and evening. Prof. Guttman furnishes the music.

While in Topeka last March, E. T. Barber, a prominent newspaper man of La Cygne, Kansas, was taken with cholera morbus very severely. The night clerk at the hotel where he was stopping happened to have a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and gave him three doses which relieved him and he thinks saved his life. Every family should keep this remedy in their home at all times. No one can tell how soon it may be needed. It costs but a trifle and may be the means of saving much suffering and perhaps the life of some member of the family. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

Sometime ago I was troubled with an attack of rheumatism. I used Chamberlain's Pain Balm and was completely cured. I have since advised many of my friends and customers to try the remedy and all speak highly of it. Simon Goldbaum, San Luis Rey, Cal. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves, T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

Use it in Time.

Catarrh starts in the nasal passages, affecting eyes, ears and throat, and is in fact, the great enemy of the mucous membrane. Neglected colds in the head almost invariably precede catarrh, causing an excessive flow of of mucous, and if the mucous discharge becomes interrupted the disagreeable results of catarra will follow, such as bad breath, severe pain across forehead and about the eyes, a roaring and buzzing sound in the ears and oftentimes a very offensive discharge. Ely's Cream Balm is the acknowledged cure for these troubles.

A NEGRO'S FIDELITY.

He Still Watches Over His Old Master's Grave, Waiting to Join Him.

The attitude of the Southern slaves during the civil war was extraordinary. Thousands of white women and children, whose fathers and husbands had joined the Confederate army, were left in charge of family servants and were dependent upon their fidelity and service for protection and daily bread. Rarely indeed did one of these negroes betray his trust. Hundreds of body servants accompanied their masters to the army, nursed them when sick or wounded and "toted" them home to recover health or to be buried. A pathetic illustration of a body servant's fidelity was seen by Mr. W. L. Williams, a traveling salesman.

I saw a pathetic instance at Greensboro of a negro's fidelity, said Mr. Williams. About ten miles from the town I saw a grave with a marble slab at its head. Seated near it was an old negro with a bunch of flowers, which he was placing upon the mound. I stopped my horse and spoke to him.

"Whose grave is that, uncle?" I asked.

"Marse Tom's, boss. I'm his nigga."

"Oh, no, you are no man's nigger now. Didn't you ever know that you were free?"

"Dunno nuffin' 'bout dat, sir. I'se Marse Tom's nigga, sah, an' he's waitin' foh me suah up dar. Dese han's done tote him frum dat place dey call Shiloh, an' he died while I wah totin 'im; jest closed his eyes an' went to sleep, an' when I comes to cross the ribber ob Jordan he jes' hol' out his han's an' he tells de angel at de gate who I be, an' he lets me in. I dreamed 'bout it las' night, boss."

I was interested in the old fellow and wanted to hear his story. The slab at the grave told me that it was that of "Col. Tom Winn, killed at the battle of Shiloh," and I questioned the faithful negro further:

"How old are you, uncle?"

"'Mos' a hundred, I reckon, sah."

"Were you in the war?"

"Went wif Marse Tom, sah. I'se his nigga, an' he's in heaben. I'se jest awaitin' til dese old bones, weary wid trabellin' ober de road, 'll take me to de ribber, when Marse Tom'll help his ole nigga ober."

"Were you with him when he was killed?"

"I was right dar, boss. Done pick 'im up an' toted 'im to dat place dey call Corinth; den I foun' a train, got to de place dey call Chattanooga; de nex' day we wah in Atlanta. Marse Tom den in glory. Dis heah niggah lef' to ten' his body. Dey buried 'im when I got 'im heah, an' dis nigga jes' lef' to ten' his grave an' keep de flowers heah."

I found upon inquiry that the story was true. For a quarter of a century the faithful negro had done nothing but attend the grave of his young master, whose body he brought from northern Mississippi to central Georgia.—Cincinnati Inquirer.

AN IMPRISONED BIRD.

How a Little Humming Bird Was Held in the Petal of a Flower All Night.

Nature is a very loving and careful mother, and it is seldom, within a civilized community, that any accident befalls her little ones for which her higher creation, man, is not directly responsible. In view of this fact, the following little incident seems interesting:

A lady of New Orleans relates that some days since the first humming bird of the season made its appearance in her garden, sipping indiscriminately from the wealth of sweets. Late in the afternoon she observed the little fellow hovering around a spike of Annunciation lillies, which had shot up perfectly laden with bells. The next morning early when she went out for a matitudinal stroll through the garden she heard a fluttering and faint cheeping from the neighborhood of the lily bed. For some time she could see nothing to account for the faint sounds, but at last was astonished to discover that one of the lily beds had closed its petals, imprisoning the humming bird within. It is probable thal the bird had buried its beak too far in and extracted so much honey as to cause the already fading flower to collapse suddenly, thus holding him close bound all night long.—Philadelphia Times.

TO REDUCE BICYCLE RECORDS.

An Electric Pace Maker, with Three Horse Power, to Shelter Wheelmen.

Charles R. Culver, a well known bicycle trainer, of Springfield, Mass., has invented and patented an electric carriage for pacing wheelmen, which is expected to bring the record for a mile down to a minute. It has three wheels, is eleven feet long over all, pointed at the front end, and from four to five feet high. To avoid air resistance as far as possible the contrivance is shaped like half of a torpedo boat. The curved roof or top extends back beyond the body of the machine, affording a shelter from the wind to the flying record breaker.

The carriage is mounted on ordinary bicycle wheels, with pneumatic tires, somewhat heavier than usual. The motive power is derived from a storage battery, applied to the rear axle. The operator sits well forward and controls the motor which steers the machine by means of a lever. Three horse power is required to run the machine, which weighs 700 pounds. It is designated for a straightaway track.

So great is the competition among bicycle manufacturers for the records that special pacing engines are being built to aid in producing them.

The widow's cap is as old as the edict of Tiberius, commanding all widows to wear the cap under penalty of a heavy fine and imprisonment.—Notes and Queries.

FUN FOR THE BLIND.

TAG AND SHINNY PLAYED WITH ALL THE ENERGY OF YOUTH.

A Specially Invented Typewriter Used in a New York Institution. Foot Ball, Leap Frog and an Occasional Rough-and Tumble Enjoyed By Blind Children.

It is a little uncanny to a man with eyes to receive attention from the blind.

To be met at the threshold by a polite, attentive little woman, with a sightless face, who hands you a chair, takes a sympathetic interest in you errand, and then sits down at the tinest typewriter ever made to send your message in the mysterious raised letters of the blind to a sightless man upstairs; to have this man receive you with as much ease and courtesy as though he could see you and reap the benefit of the proverbial "first impression;" to see a couple of fresh faced little girls literally shining with cleanliness, and who have never seen the light of the sun, come bounding into the reception room at the touch of a bell; to follow these girls through long corridors past rooms where other blind girls and boys were taking music lessons, learning useful trades and plodding with marvelous patience over tasks that are tiresome even to people with sight; to receive courteous bows of recognition from men and women who know a stranger only by the touch of his foot upon the polished floors, and who have no idea of what a man or woman looks like; to see those girls march steadily ahead without grouping their path like blind beggars on the street, but sauntering along with all the confidence in the world, and finding the person you wish to see particularly in a room filled with people makes one devoutedly thankful that God had given him sight.

A reporter of the New York Herald was led to this conclusion after visiting the New York Institution for the Blind.

At the time the reporter called, Mr. Babcock was in charge. Mr. Babcock is a hale and hearty old gentleman with the physique of a giant and the rosy complexion of an English school girl. After he has shaken hands with you the chief regret of your life seems to be that he cannot look in the glass and find out what a nice looking, amiable old gentleman he is.

"I am busy just at present," said Mr. Babcock, "and I must ask you to excuse me. But I'll send for one of our instructors in calisthenics, and he will give you an opportunity to observe for yourself."

He touched a bell, and almost on the moment a blind girl appeared and stood patiently awaiting instructions.

"Tell Mr. Rice that I would like to speak to him for a moment."

The girl was off in a jiffy, threading her way through corridors, up stairs, until she finally knocked at the door of a room where Mr. Rice was putting a class of girls through a course of muscular training. It appeared, upon inquiry, that blind children must be made proficient in a system of indoor training before they are permitted to indulge in outdoor games. It gives them confidence and self reliance. Educating the blind is very much like training acrobats for the circus. After the first feeling is overcome, feats that once inspired them with dread are accomplished with ease.

It was a wonderful sight to see the blind children at play on the beautiful lawn that is walled in from the street—to see them, romping around at leap frog, tag, shinny, playing horse, doing the broad jump, skipping rope, and even spinning tops with a skill that was simply astonishing.

It was difficult to believe that these little creatures could not see the sunshine or the faces of the merry companions in their games. In playing leap frog distances were judged by chips placed on the grass.

There are some children in the institution who can see a little—but a very little—and in making up games that involve a certain element of risk the instructors aim to utilize them to the best advantage in assisting others who are totally blind.

Tug of war is a game that blind boys especially enjoy. Five on a side is selected, and the struggle is watched—if such a word may be used in connection with the blind—with the keenest interest. The lads seem to know intuitively every point of the contest, and to follow each movement as closely as though they were in full possession of their sight.

In football the blind boys kick only for height and distance, following the ball by the sound it makes in its fall—and they seldom miss it. Like all other children they get into quarrels over their games, and if it comes to a fight a blind boy knows where to find his adversary and to plant a blow where it is calculated to do the most good.

Made Them All Yawn.

"Facial movements in utter strangers may often be influenced by those who are looking at them," one of three men who were going uptown in a Fourth avenue car the other night was heard to say.

"I do not believe it," rejoined one of his companions.

"You do not? Well, I think I can prove it to you," the first speaker said. "I believe I can make all of those opposite to us yawn quite easily. I will yawn once or twice and then you both yawn, and see what the effect will be." He thereupon yawned, making a slight noise to attract attention, and then his companions yawned. This they repeated and before the car had gone 200 feet every one opposite them had yawned, although prior to the first speaker's yawning no one had given any indication of being tired or sleepy.—New York Times.

CASEY AT THE BAT.

There was ease in Casey's manner as he stepped into his place,
There was pride in Casey's bearing and a smile on Casey's face;
And when responding to the cheers he lightly doffed his hat,
No stranger in the crowd could doubt 'twas Casey at the bat.

Ten thousand eyes were on him as he rubbed his hands with dirt,
Five thousand tongues applauded when he wiped them on his shirt:
Then when the writhing pitcher ground the ball into his hip
Defiance glanced in Casey's eye, a sneer curled Casey's lip.

And now the leather covered sphere came hurtling through the air,
An' Casey stood a-watching it in haughty grandeur there;
Close by the stury batsman the ball unheeded sped:
"That ain't my style," said Casey. "Strike one," the umpire said.

From the benches, black with people, there went up a muffled roar,
Like the beating of storm waves on the stern and distant shore;
"Kill him! kill the umpire!" shouted some one on the stand,
And it's likely they'd have killed him had not Casey raised his hand.

With a smile of Christian charity great Casey's visage shone;
He stilled the rising tumult, he made the game go on;
He signaled to the pitcher, and once more the spheroid flew,
But Casey still ignored it, and the umpire said "Strike two;"

"Fraud!" cried the maddened thousands, and the echo answered "Fraud!"
But one scornful look from Casey and the audience was awed;
They saw his face grow stern and cold, they saw his muscles strain,
And they knew that Casey wouldn't let the ball go by again.

The sneer is gone from Casey's lips, his teeth are clinched in hate,
He pounds with cruel vengeance his bat upon the plate;
And now the pitcher holds the ball and now he lets it go,
And now the air is shattered by the force of Casey's blow.

Oh, somewhere in this favored land the sun is shining bright,
The band is playing somewhere and somewhere hearts are light;
And somewhere men are laughing, and somewhere children shout,
But there is no joy in Boston; mighty Casey has struck out.

PLUCKY DOUGLASS CLARKE.

Only 14 Years Old, Yet He Tried to Trap Burglars Without Waking His Father.

Douglass Clarke, 14 years old, the son of Arthur M. Clarke, of 111 Church lane, Flatbush, did his best at 3 o'clock one morning recently to capture two burglars who had entered the dining room of his father's house and were packing away the silverware.

The burglars gained an entrance by prying open a rear window in the basement. They had reached the dining room on the floor above when the noise startled the dog and he began barking. The barking aroused Douglass. He did not disturb the rest of the family, but with a lighted lamp he started down stairs. He caught a glimpse of two men in the dining room and he softly ascended the stairs again. His mother and sister were awake by this time.

"There are thieves in the house, mamma," he said, "but don't be frightened. They won't come up here. I'll just run out and get a policeman in three minutes."

As he went off on his errand his father awoke. Mr. Clarke armed himself with his revolver and went down stairs, but the burglars too had been startled by the dog and had disappeared. They took all the small silverware with them. When Douglass returned on schedule time with two policemen all that remained to be done was to give a list of the stolen property.—New York Sun.

The Dandelion.

The dandelion belongs to the largest, oldest and most widely diffused order of plants. While other orders of plants have died out and become mere fossil remains in the rocks, this order has survived the geological changes of many different periods, on account of its power of adapting itself to those changes. And these changes in their turn have only made it better suited for all the varied soils and climates of the earth at the present day.

We find members of this order in every part of the globe, in places as far apart from each other as they can be. It is the prevailing and dominant order of vegetable life, the most highly finished and the most successful family of plants. And the dandelion is one of the most perfect forms belonging to it.

It is the head and crown of the vegetable kingdom, as man is the head and crown of the animal creation; and it is curious how this highest type of plant always is found only where man, the highest type of animal life, is found, and where he dwells or cultivates the soil. It is never found apart from him; it follows him wherever he goes—to America, Australia and New Zealand; and there in the new home it becomes a silent but eloquent reminder of the dear old land he may never see again.—Good Words.

What Papa Said.

Trembling with excitement, Luise stood in the parlor and waited for her lover. It seemed an age since he had gone to see her father in his office. The young man was so impulsive, so easily betrayed into a hasty action, and papa was so grave and stern. At length the door opened and Luise's sweetheart stood before her. He was unharmed, his cheeks glowed, a strange expression gleamed in his eyes.

"Have you spoken to papa?" she asked, in quivering tones.

"Yes, my dearest."

"And what did he say, Hans? Quick, tell me what he said. He said 'No' to thee; oh! I see it written in thine eyes. But I will be thine—I am thine! His cruel harshness has no terror for me. I—I will fly with thee."

Hans Muller took a deep breath and then softly replied:

"He only said: 'Thank goodness!' and went on with his writing."—Staatsanzeiger.

HOW SUSAN WAS WON

Susan Stebbens was by all odds the best looking girl on Grassy Lick, without being remarkably beautiful, for beauty is not a noticeable characteristic of mountain women, old or young, and how she had ever come to marry Lem Skaggs was a wonder to me, for Lem was by all odds the homeliest man on the Lick, and homeliness is a characteristic of mountain men.

I knew Lem quite well and had befriended him on many occasions, even loaning him money enough to get married on, as his crops were not in and he was scant of funds, and when they had been married about a month I asked him one day how it happened. He was a good man all over, was Lem, as guileless as a baby and as honest as the sunlight, and when I asked my question he blushed and grinned.

"She was tuck by my good lucks," he laughed.

"Didn't you court her pretty hard?"

"Did I?" and he drew a long breath as of relief at the though of its being over. "Well, I should say I did. Why, I come mighty nigh mortgidgin' the farm to git her things she didn't seem to care for when I give 'em to her."

"What did you give her?"

"Everything, Colonel. It got so bad to'rds the last the folks at the store told me ef I'd lump my dealin's they reckoned they could let me have 'em at wholesale prices."

"She couldn't stand your liberality, Lem. That's what got her."

"Not a bit uv it," he contended. "All the time I was takin' her all sorts uv things, she wuz makin' eyes at every feller that come along, and sorter expectin' me to keep up my end uv the swingle tree, jist caze I kinder seemed to hanker atter doin' it that a-way."

"But you kept at it?"

"I reckon not," he laughed. "All uv a sudden I sot in fer Mary Finnel, and gave the store folks a rest on buyin' things."

"Then what happened?" I inquired, with a hope of gaining some more information.

He laughed a low, gurgling laugh, such as a boy would give vent to when caught in some of his natural depredations.

"Well, he said, "she kinder swapped eends on t'other fellers, and swung around my way, but I wuzn't givin' a inch, and I didn't have no talk with her fer mighty nigh two weeks, and then one evenin' as I was passin' her house on my way to Mary's and she knowed it, I seen her hangin' on the gate lookin' out into the future er somethin' uv that sort that I seen a picter uv onc't an agent wuz sellin'."

"'Good evenin',' says I, not offering to stop.

"'Good evenin',' says she. "Pears to me you're in a terrible hurry.'

"'Kinder,' says I, slakin' up some. 'I promised to be down to Mary's 'bout this time.'

"She kinder looked down at the ground when I told her that, and kicked a little rock out of the path that wuz layin' thar and I felt like a sheep stealin' dog fer sayin' what I had."

"'I reckon you'd better be hurrin' along then, fer Mary ain't the kind that likes to be kept waitin',' said she.

"'I s'pose,' said I, 'that you don't keer ef I stop and talk to you fer a minute, do you?'

"'I ain't keerin' what you do,' said she, kinder sullen.

"'You look like you wuz expectin' somebody yerself,' says I, feelin' ez ef I'd like to choke whoever the feller wuz.

"'That's what,' said she, and I felt more'n ever like chokin somebody.

"'Who is it?' says I, watchin' the streaks uv a laugh 'round her mouth and eyes.

"'That's fer me to know and you to find out,' said she laughin' right out.

"'I reckon I'll be goin' on down to Mary's,' says I, thinkin' that I wuzn't makin' nothin' hangin' around Susan.

"'Mebbe you wouldn't ef you know'd who wuz comin',' said she, kinder reachin' over the gate.

"'Well, tell me,' says I, 'and see ef I stay.'

"'I reckon not,' said she, still a-naggin me, 'mebbee they wouldn't like it!'

"'Who's they,' says I.

"She gave a little chuckle, and I come up to the gate and rested my hands on it to one side uv her's.

"'Pap and mother,' says she. 'They've gone down to the schoolhouse to preachin' and won't be back till about eight o'clock.'

"'Ain't you kinder lonesome waitin' hyer by yerself, Susan?' says I, half way tryin' to pull the gate open, but she held it shet.

"'I reckon I wuz,' says she. 'That's why I came out and hung on the gate. It's mighty still like in the house.'

"'You reckon you wuz?' says I. 'Ain't you, now?' and I chuckled myself fer ketchin' her.

"'P'r'aps I am and p'r'aps I ain't,' she sniggered, and tossed her head.

"I tried to open the gate but she held it shet."

"Ef you don't want me to stay, why don't you say so,' gettin' ugly.

"'I reckon you kin, ef you want to,' says she, mighty pesky.

"'Susan,' says I, 'what's the use uv foolin'?'

"'Foolin' about what?' says she.

"'About me and you,' says I.

"'I ain't a-foolin' says she.

"'You air,' says I, 'and you know it.'

"'Ef you don't like me, Lem Skaggs,' says she, brindlin' up all over, 'you kin go along. I didn't ax you to stop, did I?'

"'But I do like you, Susan,' says I, gittin' skeert, and trying to pull the gate open so's I could git clos't enough to her to coax her.

"'I reckon you like Mary Finnel a sight better,' says she, holdin' the gate ag'in me.

"'I reckon I don't,' says I, and I could [illegible] give a little.

"'You wouldn't talk that a-way ef she wuz in hearin' distance,' says she.

"'Wouldn't I?' says I, and I heaved and sot on the gate, but it didn't move a peg. 'You jist fetch her up here and see ef I wouldn't.'

"'No, you jist go down thar,' says she, 'that's whar you started fer.'

"'I didn't do nothin' uv the sort,' says I, gittin' despriter every minute.

"'You told me you did,' says she, and I could feel the gate give some and then shet up ag'in.

"'You oughter know, Susan,' says I serious, 'that I wuz jist a-foolin', and I could feel the gate a-givin' way and shettin' and then giving way ag'in.

"'An' you ain't lyin' now, Lem?' says she, a heap sight softer than any time in her life.

"Course I ain't, Susan,' says I, and the gate came open about six inches.

"'Ef I only thought you wuzn't, Lem,' says she, lettin' the gate slip my way a lettle more every minute.

"'You know I ain't, Susan,' says I, givin' the gate the strongest pull yit. 'You know it, and you know I never give a snap uv my finger fer any other gal in these parts and that all the time I've been a hankerin' atter you and wantin' you fer my wife, but you kep' foolin' with me all along and bustin' my heart mighty nigh, and makin' me want to go off and chop a tree down on myself. You know it Susan, you know it,' and she h'isten her hands and the gate swung wide open.

"'What about Mary?' says she, standthar before me lookin' sweeter'n peaches and rosies.

"'Dern Mary,' says I, clean forgittin' my manners, and I retch out both my hands fer Susan.

"'Oh, Lem!' said she, and—well Colonel," he laughed as his honest face reddened beneath its saffron hue. "I reckon you're old enough to know the balance."

"I wouldn't be surprised, Lem," I replied, blushing just a shade myself as a memory or two came slowly back from the rosy past.

He looked up smiling.

"And say, Colonel," he said, "I wuzn't any prettier that night than I wuz before."

"Come off, Lemuel," said I slapping him on the back, "it was so dark Susan couldn't see you."—New York Sun.

BIGGEST LENS IN THE WORLD.

The Great Glass of the Yerkes Telescope Is Larger than the Lick.

We are likely during the coming summer to learn more about Mars than astronomers during the history of their science have discovered up to the present time about that planet and its people.

It required the 26-inch telescope of the United States Naval Observatory to discover the satellites of Mars. Then the Lick telescope, with its 36 inch glass, was built, and immediately the three strange signal lights on Mars was discovered.

Now the great 40-inch lens—the hugest telescope glass ever made—which Alvan E. Clark has been working on for more than a year at Cambridge, Mass., for the Yerkes telescope, is completed and will soon be shipped to its destination.

The big telescope at the Naval Observatory had been unable to bring out the signal light of Mars, as the telescopes before that time had failed to note the satellities, and the Yerkes telescope will be so much bigger than the Lick, now the largest in the world, that astronomers are confident astonishing discoveries may be made as soon as it is set up.

Who knows but that looking through the great 40-inch glass of this huge instrument, astonomers will be enabled to make out definitely the system of signals which the Martians are believed to be using in an effort to communicate with the inhabitants of Earth? Even the great canal system of Mars, as is suspected by more than one, may turn out to be a gigantic semaphore.

How She Keeps Her Freshness.

Until the physiological principles which account for the phenomenon are understood, it must remain a puzzling fact that an actress's life should be more favorable to the preservation of good looks, and even of girlish freshness, than the life led by women who occupy their natural sphere, and who cultivate—as they think—all the physical and moral virtues.

A successful actress must work extremely hard, generally by artificial light and in a gas-befouled atmosphere. Her hours for work, meals, and sleep are all utterly bad from the hygienic point of view, and not infrequently she makes bad worse by falling into those bohemian habits which are an immemorial tradition of her class. Her secret, apart from the laws regulating the expression and nutrition of the face, consists chiefly of avoidance of monotony and petty worries—those arch-enemies of feminine good looks and good temper. Her work, if arduous, is generally performed both with earnestness and lightness of heart; and, above all, she gets a sufficiency of bodily exercise of the kind—although not under the conditions—most conducive to health, viz., exercise involving quick and general movements of the muscles, combined with a certain amount of mental excitement.—Blackwood's Magazine.

Killed His Man.

I once asked a friend who had fought all through the war if he had ever killed a man that he positively knew of.

"Yes," said he, remorsefully, "at Bull Run I ran at the first fire. A rebel chased me for ten miles and was then so exhausted that he dropped dead."

Gladstone now finds the theater—his constant solace for many years—too much for him except as a rare indulgence. He says he detects in himself a growing tendency toward a pair of slippers and a game of backgammon, and is under the impression that he is growing old.

JUST TO PLEASE HER

INCIDENTALLY TO ADD TO THE ATTRACTIVENESS OF HER BEAUSY.

Dress Does It If Cut in the Proper Manner and From Becoming Fabrics. Some Fetching Ideas that May Help Out in the Hot Weather.

"I want," said the summer girl to herself, "a gown that I can wear upon a variety of occasions—one not to elaborate for the street and yet appropriate for house wear." And fashion straightaway devised the costume.

The illustrated costume is decidedly chic both in color and cut, and is designed for out of door service. It is of a soft wool material of an odd shade of light blue, and is relieved by black and white. The godet skirt is banded about the lower edge with three narrow folds of the blue material. The corsage has a narrow vest of white cloth, ornamented with four big gilt buttons, the turnover collar being also of the white. The puffs forming the upper part of the sleeves have on the under side an inserted piece of cloth laid in folds corresponding with the bands on the skirt. The entire sleeve is of the blue, and the [illegible] cuff fastens at the wris[illegible] four small gilt buttons. The bl[illegible] pears in broad satin ribbon, a tw[illegible] breadth of which is drawn acro[illegible] bodice front at the waist line, bel[illegible] ion, ending on either side in a [illegible] wise bow. In the back the bodice [illegible] out in an abbreviated skirt, edge[illegible] about with the black satin. The li[illegible] yellow straw bonnet worn with this gown is of the popular sharp pointed, brimless species, and has pink roses and a black aigrette by way of trimming.

The inevitable crepon appears in the second costume. This time it is brown in color, and the pattern confines itself to the simple wave. Except for the large scallops about the lower edge formed by the godet plaits the skirts is entirely plain. At the waist line there is a graceful zone, double pointed in the front and having big loops in the back that extend, earwise, at the sides. The zone is of bright blue miroir velvet edged with bronze passementerie over paler blue satin. Velvet also forms the bodice yoke, which is deeply slashed along the lower edge. Lengthwise bands of the passementerie extend from the yoke slashes to the zone, and in between is finely plaited brown chiffon. The sleeves hang in big balloons of the crepon from shoulder to elbow, the upper point of a deep buff of the velvet indenting the puffs at the elbow. The cuffs are finished off with the illuminated passementerie. The collar is of the velvet with loops at the back. The broad brimmed peaked crown hat is of brown straw faced with the velvet. It is is ornamented with pale blue plumes.

From the present indications, orchids and irises are the coming flowers in millinery. One thing may be said in their favor, that cheap imitations will not interfere with their popularity. An orchid, particularly one of the small, rare varieties, is not an easy flower to imitate, and to do so in cheap material and by unskilled hands is simply impossible.

THE EXPLOITS OF BRIGADIER GERARD

How the Brigadier Slew the Brothers of Ajaccio

By A. CONAN DOYLE.

(Copyright, 1895.)

CHAPTER V.

The Emperor had committed himself to my care. The Emperor was dead. Those were the two thoughts which clanged in my head until I had no room for any other ones. He had come with me, and he was dead. I had done what he had ordered when living. I had revenged him when dead. But what of all that? The world would look upon me as responsible. They might even look upon me as the assassin. What could I prove? What witnesses had I? Might I not have been the accomplice of these wretches! Yes, yes, I was eternally dishonored—the lowest, most despicable creature in all France. This, then, was the end of my fine military ambitions of the hopes of my mother. I laughed bitterly at the thought. And what was I to do now? Was I to go into Fontainebleau, to wake up the palace, and to inform them that the great Emperor had been murdered within a pace of me. I could not do it—no, I could not do it! There was but one course for an honorable gentleman whom Fate had placed in so cruel a position. I would fall upon my dishonored sword and so share, since I could not avert, the Emperor's fate. I rose with my nerves strung to this last piteous deed, and as I did so my eyes fell upon something which struck the breath from my lips. The Emperor was standing before me.

He was not more than ten yards off, with the moon shining straight upon his cold pale face. He wore his gray overcoat, but the hood was turned back and the front open, so that I could see the green coat of the Guides, and the white breeches. His hands were clasped behind his back, and his chin sunk forward upon his breast in the way that was usual with him.

"Well," said he, in his hardest and most abrupt voice, "what account do you give of yourself?"

I believe that if he had stood in silence for another minute my brain would have given way. But those sharp, military accents were exactly what I needed to bring me to myself. Living or dead, here was the Emperor standing before me, and asking me questions. I sprang to the salute.

"You have killed one, I see," said he, jerking his head toward the beech.

"Yes, sire."

"And the other escaped?"

"No, sire; I killed him, also."

"What!" he cried. "Do I understand that you have killed them both?" He approached me as he spoke, with a smile, which set his eyes and teeth gleaming in the moonlight.

"One body lies there, sire," I answered; "the other is in the toolhouse at the quarry."

"Then the brothers of Ajaccio are no more," he cried, and, after a pause: "The shadow has passed me forever." Then he bent forward and laid his hand upon my shoulder.

"You have done very well, my young friend," said he. "You have lived up to your reputation."

He was flesh and blood, then, this Emperor. I could feel the little plump palm that rested upon me. And yet I could not get over what I had seen with my own eyes, and so I stared at him in such bewilderment that he broke once more into one of his smiles.

"No, no, Monsieur Gerard," said he. "I am not a ghost, and you have not seen me killed. You will come here and all will be clear to you."

He turned as he spoke, and led the way toward the great beech stump. The bodies were still lying upon the ground, and two men were standing beside them. As we approached, I saw from the turbans that they were Roustem and Mustafa, the two Mameluke body servants. The Emperor paused when he came to the gray figure upon the ground, and turning back the hood which shrouded the features, he showed a face which was very different from his own.

THE EMPEROR WAS STANDING BEFORE ME.

"Here lies a faithful servant, who has given up his life for his master," said he. "Monsieur de Gondin resembles me in figure, and in manner, as you must admit."

What a delirium of joy came upon me when these few words made everything clear to me. He smiled again as he saw the delight which urged me almost to throw my arms round him and to embrace him, but he moved a step away as if he had divined my impulse.

"You are unhurt?" he asked.

"I am unhurt, sire. But in another minute I should in my despair"——

"Tut, tut!" he interrupted. "You did very well. He should himself have been more on his guard. I saw everything which passed."

"You saw it, sire!"

"You did not hear me follow you through the wood, then? I hardly lost sight of you from the moment that you left your quarters until poor de Gondin fell. The counterfeit emperor was in front of you, and the real one behind. You will now escort me back to the house."

He whispered an order to his Mamelukes, who saluted in silence and remained where they were standing. For my part, I followed the Emperor with my pelisse bursting with pride. My word, I have always carried myself as a hussar should, but Lasalle himself never strutted and swung his dolman as I did that night! Who should clink his spurs and clatter his sabre if it were not I—I, Etienne Gerard—the confidant of the Emperor, the chosen swordsman of the light cavalry, the man who slew the would-be assassins of Napoleon. But he noticed my bearing, and turned upon me like a blight.

"Is that the way to carry yourself on a secret mission," he hissed, with that cold glare in his eyes; "is it thus that you will make your comrades believe that nothing remarkable has occurred. Have done with this nonsense, monsieur, or you will find yourself transferred to the sappers, where you would have harder work and duller plumage."

That was the way with the Emperor. If ever he thought that any one might have a claim upon him, he took the first opportunity to show him the gulf that lay between. I saluted and was silent, but I must confess to you that it hurt me after all that had passed between us. He led on to the palace, where we passed through the side door and up into his own cabinet. There were a couple of grenadiers at the staircase, and their eyes started out from under their fur caps, I promise you, when they saw a young lieutenant of hussars going up to the Emperor's room at midnight. I stood by the door, as I had done in the afternoon, while he flung himself down in an armchair, and remained silent so long that it seemed to me that he had forgotten all about me. I ventured at last upon a slight cough to remind him.

"Ah, Monsieur Gerard," said he. "You are very curious, no doubt, as to the meaning of all this."

"I am quite content, sire, if it is your pleasure not to tell me," I answered.

"Ta, ta, ta," said he, impatiently. "These are only words. The moment that you were outside that door you would begin making inquiries about what it all means. In two days your brother officers would know about it. In three days it would be all over Fontainebleau, and it would be in Paris on the fourth. Now, if I tell you enough to appease your curiosity, there is some reasonable hope that you may be able to keep the matter to yourself."

He did not understand me, this Emperor, and yet I could only bow and be silent.

"A few words will make it clear to you," said he, speaking very swiftly and pacing up and down the room. "They were Corsicans, these two men. I had known them in my youth. We had belonged to the same society—Brothers of Ajaccio, as we called ourselves. It was founded in the old Paoli days, you understand, and we had some strict rules of our own which were not infringed with impunity." A very grim look came over his face as he spoke, and it seemed to me that all that was French had gone out of him and that it was the pure Corsican, the man of strong passions and of strange revenges, who stood before me. His memory had gone back to those early days of his, and for five minutes, wrapped in thought, he paced up and down the room with his quick little tiger steps. Then with an impatient wave of his hands he came back to his palace and to me.

"The rules of such a society," he continued, "are all very well for a private citizen. In the old days there was no more loyal brother than I. But circumstances change, and it would be neither for my welfare nor for that of France that I should now submit myself to them. They wanted to hold me to it, and so brought their fate upon their own heads.

"These were the two chiefs of the order, and they had come from Corsica to summon me to meet them at the spot which they named. I knew what such a summons meant. No man had ever returned from obeying one. On the other hand, if I did not go, I was sure that disaster would follow. I am a brother myself, you remember, and I know their ways." Again there came that hardening of his mouth and cold glitter of his eyes.

"You perceive my dilemma, Monsieur Gerard," said he. "How would you have acted yourself under such circumstances?"

"Given the word to the Tenth Hussars, sire," I cried. "Patrols could have swept the woods from end to end and brought these two rascals to your feet."

He smiled, but he shook his head.

"I had very excellent reasons why I did not wish them taken alive," said he. "You can understand that an assassin's tongue might be as dangerous a weapon as an assassin's dagger. I will not disguise from you that I wished to avoid scandal at all cost. That was why I ordered you to take no pistols with you. That also is why my Mamelukes will remove all traces of the affair, and nothing more will be heard about it.

"I thought of all possible plans, and I am convinced that I selected the best one. Had I sent more than one guard with De Gondin into the woods, then the brothers would not have appeared. They would not change their plans or miss their chance for the sake of a single man. It was Col. Lasalle's accidental presence at the moment when I received the summons which led to my choosing one of his hussars for the mission. I selected you, Monsieur Gerard, because I wanted a man who could handle a sword, and who would not pry more deeply into the affair than I desired. I trust that in this respect you will gratify my choice as well as you have done in your bravery and skill."

"Sire," I answered, "you may rely upon it."

"As long as I live," said he, "you will never open your lips upon this subject."

"I dismiss it entirely from my mind, sire. I will efface it from my recollection as if it had never been. I will promise you to go out of your cabinet at this moment exactly as I was when I entered it at 4 o'clock."

"You cannot do that," said the Emperor, smiling. "You were a lieutenant at that time. You will permit me, captain, to wish you a very good night."

WEDDED MID JUNE BLOSSOMS.

THE MARRIAGE BELL CLAPPER AN ELECTRIC LIGHT.

Dainty Wedding in North Plainfield—Miss Josie Elliott VanArsdale Becomes Mrs. Garrett Conover.

"Clear shining after rain" marked the time of the marriage of Rev. Garrett Conover to Josie Elliott VanArsdale, late yesterday afternoon, at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. John K. VanArsdale of Grove street. Lohengrin's wedding march was played by Willard Case previous to the ceremony.

Miss Bessie VanArsdale, the little sister of the bride, carrying pink roses, preceded the bride and groom to the corner of the parlor, where, surrounded by blossoms and ferns, they took the solemn marriage vows. Over them hung a marriage bell of white daisies, the clapper of which was a flashing electric light. This ingenious device was the work of the young electrician, Clarence Brokaw. The brilliant clapper made a most effective marriage bell, serving the double purpose of illumination and decoration. Rev. Dr. Richards performed the ceremony.

The bride's gown was white silk, trimmed with point lace, an heirloom. The veil was of tulle and the bridal bouquet of white roses. Ferns, daisies and roses were everywhere, fit accompaniments of the bride in her flowerlike loveliness. Only the immediate relatives of the bride and groom were present. A delicious supper was served by Max Wiertz.

Mr. and Mrs. Conover left town at eight o'clock, amid the conventional shower of rice. A large number of beautiful and useful presents had preceded the happy couple to their new home at Hawthorne, near Paterson, where Mr. Conover has accepted a pastorate. The newly married couple are followed by the congratulations and heartfelt wishes of many friends for their happiness, prosperity and usefulness.

GASHED HIS HAND.

George Macintyre Suffers a Severe Accident and Loses Blood.

George Macintyre, foreman of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company, met with a serious accident last night which might have proved fatal. He was working at the store and was preparing to go home. A window in the repair shop was open and in attempting to close it by taking hold of the upper part, his left hand slipped and went through the glass. The hand was severely gashed and two arteries in the wrist cut. He went at once to Dr. Fritts' house. The doctor took the broken glass out of the hand and wrist and bandaged the wounds. After Mr. Macintyre went home the fingers on his hand lost all feeling and he moved them a little, causing the cuts to bleed. This morning he went to the hospital to be treated and is now getting along nicely.

Book For Admission Fee.

All members of the Girls Club, and those wishing to become members, also the ladies who are interested, are cordially invited to attend a book sociable to be held tomorrow evening at the club rooms, 309 West Second street. An interesting programme has been arranged, after which refreshments will be served. The admission will be a book, by any of the best authors, for the formation of the club's library.

Westfield Bound to Kick.

Already the complaints of Westfield people are emphatic and loud over the blocking of the streets by sewer excavations. The streets are torn up in half a dozen places, and one of the most traveled thoroughfares in town, Prospect street, from North avenue to Broad, has been closed for over a week.

Again at Boehm's.

Every day in the week, month or year Boehm offers you great inducements. His list of bargains this week cannot be duplicated. Pay him a visit and it will be to your advantage.

This Is Right.

An excellent plan decided upon by the committee having in charge the bicycle races on Fourth of July afternoon, is that those who ride will have a time limit and thus avert any dissatisfaction on the part of the spectators.

Lots of Combinations.

Several West Front street merchants are making arrangements to combine their efforts in celebrating Fourth of July. It will probably result in a very handsome display.

—There is some talk of having a concert Fourth of July afternoon by one of the best bands in the State.

THE CITY IS A DEBTOR.

RECEIVES MORE THAN IT GIVES TO THE HOSPITAL.

A Plain Statement of Facts By a Member of the Board of Governors—City Only Contributed $5.71 Last Year.

In reference to the item in The Daily Press last evening on the care of the poor and friendless sick of the city in Muhlenberg Hospital, the following facts have been furnished by a member of the Board of Governors:

The hospital has no facilities for the care of and does not receive persons having contagious diseases, nor insane persons, nor cases of drunkenness or of delirium tremens, but never has a sick or injured person been refused admittance because he had no money nor friends. Last year, besides the dispensary patients, there were in the hospital 177 patients. Of these, 112 were cared for free, only sixty-five paid or were paid for. For one patient, who was in the hospital eight days, the city paid out of its poor fund $5.71. That was the only amount received from the city.

The contributions to the support of the hospital in the city are not general. The estimated population of Plainfield and North Plainfield is 18,000. Only about 100 persons contributed directly to the treasury of the hospital during the year. Those contributing through the Woman's Auxiliary Board are to a great extent members of the same families as the one hundred mentioned. From the thirty or forty churches in the city and borough the hospital Sunday collections amount to $450 only.

The cash expenditure in maintaining the hospital last year, exclusive of building and furnishing the new operating room, was about $6,250. Of this $1,000 came from the county, $2,000 from individual contributors, $900 from the Woman's Auxiliary Board, $450 from hospital Sunday collections, $1,300 from patients, and $600 from the balance on hand at the beginning of the year.

It may be seen from the above facts that the hospital is a charitable institution, supported in very large degree by a comparatively few citizens, and that the city instead of being an unrecompensed benefactor, is a receiver of gratuitous benefit from the hospital; and the amount of that benefit is increasing every year.

THE HELPFUL LOOKOUTS.

Profitable Conference of Christian Endeavor Workers.

The attendance at the Union Lookout Committee Conference of the Y. P. S. C. E., held last night in the Park Avenue Baptist church, was not large, owing to the threatening weather; but those who were present enjoyed a pleasant and profitable hour, discussing methods of work. E. E. Anthony, president of the local union, presided, and the meeting was opened with prayer by Mr. Bonnell, of the Crescent Avenue society.

"Ways in which the Lookout Committee may be helpful," and "The Christian Endeavorer on his summer vacation," were freely discussed, and many helpful suggestions were offered. At nine o'clock the conference was closed with prayer by President Anthony.

This Committee conference is the first of a series, which will doubtless be of great benefit to the Plainfield Endeavor societies.

Little One Will Remember Him.

A kindly act was noticed one morning recently, when a man got on a street car. He saw a little girl poorly dressed and having every appearance of being one of those whose circumstances are not the best.

Upon inquiry he learned that she had had no breakfast, and taking a silver piece out of his pocket gave it to her, telling her to get something to eat. A gentleman who saw it remarked that if there were more men like the above, much pain and suffering would be alleviated.

Mr. Bender's Benefit.

A benefit entertainment and dance will be tendered Henry Bender on Monday evening, June 17th, by the Gesang and Turn Verein at their hall on Somerset street. The best vocal and instrumental talent in the city has been secured and a good time is assured all who attend. Tickets can be had from the committee.

Commencement to Be Resumed.

After several years without commencement exercises, Leal's School will again continue the custom, and Friday evening special exercises will be held in Y. M. C. A. hall. There will be an address and the announcing of the honorable mentions in the various studies.

THEY WERE FANCY DANCERS.

GORGEOUS GOWNS OF DUSKY DAMSELS MAKE A SHOW.

First Grand Ball and Prize Cake Walk of the Revere House Waiters—Who Won the Cakes.

"Don't forget the first grand ball given by the waiters of the Revere House" was the announcement that greeted those entering Central hall last night, and it is safe to say that anyone present will never forget it, for it was one of the greatest events of the season among the colored elite. They all came out in the latest spring and summer styles, and especially attractive were the women.

There was one dress of the most delicate fabric that was very neatly trimmed with ivy vine, and the soft shade of green set the gown off to good advantage. Another one of white, with pink background, was admired greatly, and there was a profusion of pink bows that gave the wearer a most majestic appearance. One particularly gorgeous was the gown of red and black with a dainty mixture of baby blue.

There was an equal division of high and low corsage, and the large and graceful corsage bouquets were simply immense in quality and quantity. Every one had a good time, and as the catchy music, played by Guttman's orchestra, caught the ears of the dancers there was a genuine rivalry to outdo each other.

The principal feature of the evening was the prize waltz, the first prize for which was received by Lewis Peterson and Miss Agnes Perkins, and the way in which they went through the various evolutions was the envy of all.

Then came the double lanciers, and the grace and skill of the dancers increased considerably. In this, also, Lewis Peterson and Miss Agnes Perkins captured first prize, and Howard Grobes and Miss Anderson second.

The next was a cake walk and it was one of the greatest exhibition ever witnessed. Gilbert Thompson and Miss Mattie Johnson walked completely "out of sight" and distanced every one in the race. James Potter and Miss Reeves, of New York, came in second, while William Stevens and Miss Johnson received honorable mention.

The last number was the two-step, the prize for which was won hands down by Burrill Gibson and lady. All the prizes except the last one were handsome cakes and the last was a choice box of candy.

Dancing was kept up till an early hour this morning.

Those who managed the affair were Howard Grobes, William Lee and J. Betts. The floor manager was Lewis Peterson, and his assistant, William Gibson.

A JOKING ACCIDENT.

George O. Stevens Makes Light of His Wagon Breaking Down.

Geo. O. Stevens, the West Front street coal merchant, is doing a smashing business. One of his coal wagons broke down in front of the Baptist church this morning. He said, when seen by a Daily Press reporter this morning:

"The wheel was tired and coal has come down, but the wheel was not lonesome because it had some fellows with it. I am glad the wagon wasn't knocked speechless; it didn't lose its tongue. The wheel spoke. The axle reached for the body and felt glad that that part was stouter. It really all happened because the wagon was tired of riding on a rail."

Postal Telegraph Changes.

W. E. Martin today assumed charge of the Postal Telegraph office in this city. Mr. Martin is an expert telegrapher, and will give the Postal patrons good service. D. J. Shea, who has had charge of the office for some time, has resigned to accept a better place in the local postoffice.

A. B. Clemens, formerly of Plainfield and now of Newark, will speak and Mr. Lewis, the new bass soloist of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, will sing at the Y. M. C. A. on Sunday at 4:15 p. m.

No Canine Legislation This Time.

An adjourned meeting of the Borough Council will be held this evening, when the Watchung avenue extension subject will come up for consideration.

The Sergeant Spoke Kindly.

A native of sunny Italy, accompanied by a hand organ and monkey, was giving exhibitions about town yesterday when Sergeant Kiely kindly asked him to move out of town.

PELTERING RAIN DROPS FELL.

VIVID LIGHTNING AND RUMBLING THUNDER FILLED THE AIR.

Franklin School Flag Staff Shattered—Y. M. C. A. Locker Room Flooded—Sewer Work Hindered.

Peltering rain vivid flashes of lightning and rumbling thunder, that at times broke into deafening cracks, filled the atmospheric space around about Plainfield yesterday afternoon, and incidentally raised havoc in several directions. The volume of water which fell during the shower was the greatest that this section has experienced in some time. For fully a half hour the rain fell in huge drops which soon converted the street gutters into small rivers, whose torrentous like streams carried every movable obstacle on to the sewer openings. The amount of water was too great for the pipes to carry off as fast as it flowed, the result of which was that it backed up in the streets and formed miniature lakes of murky colored water. Especially so was this the case between North avenue and Fourth street on Park avenue, where under the railroad bridge horses were obliged to splash through water up to their knees.

On Grant avenue the sewer contractors were occasioned no end of trouble. Only by hustling work on the part of the employes was the sheathing boards and other wooden tools prevented from being carried down to Greenbrook and swept out of their reach. In other sections of the city the open trenches were partly filled with water, necessitating their being decided to build a representative float baled out before work could be resumed.

The excessive flow of water from the roof of the electric light station slightly disarranged the valve of the fire gong, so that the five o'clock test-blow was a little irregular. It was soon remedied, however.

Scarcely any damage was done to the local telephone system, and Manager Runyon had it perfect running order by seven o'clock.

Yesterday's thunder storm caused a little excitement in the Y. M. C. A. building. The windows to the locker room are below the surface, and the downpour filled up the openings in front of them until the water began to pour into the room itself. The contents of a number of the lockers were completely soaked, while there were several inches of water on the floor.

During the severe thunder storm yesterday afternoon, the fuse of the electric motor, which runs the elevator in the Babcock building, was burned out, thus disabling it for the balance of the evening. The damage was repaired this morning.

During the heavy thunder storm yesterday afternoon lightning struck the large flag-pole on the Franklin school and shattered it into many pieces. A portion of the pole remains intact, but many large pieces fell in the yard and on the sidewalk.

A REPRESENTATIVE FLOAT.

Executive Committee Decide to Place One in the Parade.

The executive committee of the general Fourth of July celebration committee did some effective work at their weeting in the rooms of Alert Hose Company last night.

The committee on grounds reported that they had the option of three places. They are the city park, Boice's orchard, and Martine's grove. It is probable that the latter will be used for the evening display of fireworks.

Sub-committees on music and coaches were appointed, and it was decided to build a representative float for the parade. Other minor committees were appointed. An informal report from the subscription committee showed that about $500 of the $1,000 necessary to be raised had been contributed.

Was An Exemplary Young Man.

In the death of John H. Klemser at Scotch Plains the community loses an exemplary young man, whose promise of a successful business career was exceedingly bright. Mr. Klemser had long been in the employ of Ernest Ackerman in the office of his cement works in New York, who valued his services very highly. The young man was a great favorite among the Jr. O. U. A. M., and Excelsior Hook and Ladder Company of which he was a member. His father has charge of the Warren Ackerman estate. The funeral will be held at Scotch Plains, Sunday afternoon at half past two o'clock, in the Baptist church.

—The North Plainfield public school reception will be held Friday evening of next week in the school hall.

THE EDITOR TOOK A LOOK,

AND THEN WRITES HORRIBLY OF SUMMIT SEWAGE BEDS.

Editor Day First Says the Farm Is Excellent, Then Says That It Is Like a Swill Barrel—An Awful Trip.

Editor George W. Day of the Dunellen Call accompanied a party to the Summit sewage beds last Sunday, and in his paper of yesterday tells of his trip. He starts off this way:

The farm is at least two miles from the town on an unused road and is admirably situated and suited for the purpose. It is a sand hill from which all the building sand used to be obtained and is entirely surrounded by woods. The farm is laid out in fifty-two beds which are kept in an excellent condition by the two men constantly employed.

Then this is given as an illustration of the smell:

Having heard so much about drinking the effluent which comes from the underdrains the committee thought they would investigate and found the stream which was clear but had the smell of a sour swill barrel and concluded that it was utterly unfit to even wash in.

After this he tells of what the man in charge said:

The man in charge was asked if there was much solid matter flowed out upon the beds and he said he thought if we looked sharp we could see it—we saw it before. He said in reply to the question that the sewer was flushed twice a week and for the first hour at flushing time it was "pretty rotten." Every once in a while some member of the committee would call from a distant bed to "come and smell this," but they generally had sufficient perfume where they were. The whole farm smells like just what it is—a big cesspool—and the theory of intermittent filtration is simply a perfect farce.

But to cap the climax one of the horses was taken sick and Mr. Day writes as follows:

Upon returning to the road it was found that one of Mr. Gray's team had been taken sick—not being accustomed to cesspool atmosphere—and had to be carefully driven to Springfield, where a stop was made for supper, to which only one of the party did justice, the rest having apparently lost their appetites. The team had to be walked home and did not arrive until nearly midnight.

LADIES AID FLOURISHING.

They Present a Purse to Rev. George Hauser.

June seems to be a great month for entertainments this year, and the German Reformed church, not to be behind the rest, held one last evening, when the Ladies Aid Association of that church celebrated their yearly anniversary.

The evening opened with a selection on the organ by Professor Schroeder, which was followed by prayer by the Rev. George Hauser, the pastor. Recitations were given by the following: Russell Doerringer, Charles Doerringer, Miss Ida Feller, Miss Joureson, Miss Lillie Haberle, August Wolff, Miss Minnie Heidel and Miss Annie Doerringer, while Professor Schroeder rendered another selection on the organ.

The report of the Ladies Aid Association was then read, which showed the society to be in a flourishing condition. To end the programme Rev. George Hauser, the efficient pastor, was presented with a sum of money from his congregation for which he thanked them with a few appropriate words.

Lemonade and cake were then served and all enjoyed a period of sociability. The committee in charge of the refreshments consisted of Mrs. Mentebach, Mrs. Schlereth, Mrs. Bach, Miss Annie Ptaschinska, and Mrs. Doerringer.

COMMENCEMENT AT DUNELLEN.

Close of the Public School With Appropriate Exercises.

The commencement exercises of the Dunellen public school were held last evening in the chapel of the Presbyterian church. The room was prettily decoratad with flowers, ferns and greens, and the class motto, "Strive for the Best," was gracefully hung in the centre of the wall back of the platform, around which was a pleasing arrangement of flowers. Excellent music was furnished by the school, accompanied by the piano.

The essays and recitations by the graduates were admirably rendered and reflected much credit. Those graduating were: Lillie Gaskil, Mary Touzeau, Bertie Gaskil, Jessie Maltby, Clarence Marlow, Herbert Wyckoff and Fred Giddis. Principal Whitney presided, and Rev. Frank Fletcher presented the diplomas and prizes. A reception followed the exercises, and was largely attended.

A pleasing recitation was given by Miss Bolton of Glen Gardiner. Cake and ice cream were served, and thus closed a memorable event in the school history.

To Build a Railroad.

Civil Engineer Alfred Nelson, of Dunellen, left today for Maine, where he has a contract to construct ten miles of railroad.

BOARD OF TRADE TO MOVE.

WILL OCCUPY ROOMS IN THE BABCOCK BUILDING.

New Board of Directors and Officers Elected for the Ensuing Year—New Members to Join.

The Board of Trade, which has apparently been doing little in the line of actual business, met last evening with a view of regaining their former enthusiasm, and they succeeded admirably.

Many plans were proposed which if carried out will prove a benefit to the town. In the first place they decided to give up their present quarters, as more desirable ones have been secured in the Babcock building. They will have the three rooms formerly occupied by The Sabbath Recorder, and will move about July 1st.

Another subject that received consideration was that of reducing the dues to meet the approval of those desiring to join.

A list of names are in readiness to be presented for membership as soon as the board moves.

The following were elected as board of directors: E. R. Pope, F. W. Runyon, J. B. Coward, J. Fred MacDonald, W. R. Codington, J.C. Pope, J. D. Runyon, L. B. Woolston, J. A. Smith, H. H. Coward, George Griffin. The directors then met and elected the following officers: President—E.R. Pope; first vice-president—J. Fred MacDonald; second vice president—J. Aug. Smith; secretary—Geo. Griffin; treasurer—H. H. Coward.

Republicans Are Glad.

The Republicans of New Brunswick are pleased because of the passage over the Governor's veto of the bill which gives the Mayor the power to cast a vote in the common council in case there is a tie or no majority vote. All that remains to be done before the common council becomes a Republican body is for the Assembly to concur in the action of the Senate, which it is believed will be done. This will give the Republicans in Middlesex county control of two bodies, the common council and the Board of Freeholders. It is understood that the Democrats will test the constitutionality of the bill. Seven attempts have been made by the common council to organize, and another effort will be made on Monday evening.

Look Lifelike.

Two handsome cases are on exhibition at M. C. Dobbins' cigar store. One contains a small calf which was one of six at a birth. Its lifelike appearance is occasion of much note. The other one contains a rare collection of birds, with an exceedingly pretty wooded scene in the background. Both are the work of the late Charles K. Howlett, the celebrated taxidermist, who lived and was well known in Plainfield.

Victory for Plainfield Grocers.

J. A. Smith this morning received a message from Trenton stating that the wife property bill was passed over the veto of the Governor by the Legislature. The Plainfield grocers have been among the most active advocates of this measure and its passage is a victory for them. It holds the property of the wife for the payment of the necessities of life.

Go On, Cranks.

All baseball cranks should not forget the great ball game tomorrow afternoon, on the Crescent oval, between the Plainfield and Orange Y. M. C. A. teams. Go and help the boys along.

The "Small Potatoes" Case.

The famous "small potatoes" case of J. Alfred Potter, editor of the Cranford Chronicle, against the Cranford Township Committee, will be tried before Justice Newcorn next Monday.

Afternoon Dinner Party.

Rev. Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Goodrich will give a dinner party this evening at their home, to a few relatives and friends from New York and Plainfield.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mrs. Thos. Eggers, 139 Florida St., San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result everything else, then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of this medicine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottle at Randolph's drug store. Regular size, 50c and $1.

ENGLAND AND CUBA

A Gunboat To Be Sent To Prevent Filibustering.

Insurgent Ranks Swelling Every Day—Rebels Beginning To Burn Plantations and Levy Taxes—Red Cross President Joins the Patriots. Filibusters Reach Jamaica.

London, June 14.—It is announced by the admiralty that the first class gunboat Partridge of the North American and West Indies squadron will start on June 15 for Bermuda and the Bahamas to relieve the cruiser Mohawk in assisting to prevent filibustering expeditions to Cuba.

Insurgents Increasing Daily.

Santiago de Cuba, May 31, via Key West, June 14.—The state of affairs in this oriental region of the island grows darker and darker every day, and the revolutionists are increasing in numbers daily. They have begun to impose taxes on the planters, sending them letters in which they argue that if the Cubans who do not wish to go to the field wish to see Cuba free they must at least help with money, as it does not seem correct to pay taxes to the enemy and not to them. Of course, some have agreed and have given it very quietly, but others have raised a terrible cry and have denounced the fact to the authorities, showing them the letters they received.

Beginning To Burn Plantations.

The patriots have begun to burn the plantations and small villages very freely. Yesterday they burned a village called Cuatro, near the new American railroad station, La Maya, and five or six country houses in that direction.

Joined the Insurgents.

Havana, June 14.—The French consul here has had a conference with the secretary of the government regarding the case of a French citizen who was killed near San Luis. The president of the Red Cross association has disappeared from Santiago de Cuba, and is supposed to have joined the insurgents. A professor of the institute, Pinarrio Maximo Abaunza, while examining students who presented themselves for graduation, the examination taking place in public, sustained an atheistic thesis upon revolutionary principles, which was unfavorable to the continued rule of Spain over Cuba. The government promptly ordered his suspension, and also suspended the director of the institute for the same cause.

Filibusters Reach Jamaica.

Washington, June 14.—The steamer George Childs, carrying the filibustering expedition from Key West, has arrived at Jamaica. Definite information to this effect has been received here. It was due in a large measure to the sailing of this expedition last week that the administration determined on energetic steps to prevent violation of the neutrality laws, and that President Cleveland issued his proclamation. The information from Jamaica does not tell whether the filibusters are still on board or were landed at some point in Cuba.

ITALIAN PRIESTS WANTED.

Said To Be One of Cardinal Gibbons' Missions to Rome.

New York, June 14.—A morning paper says to-day: It has become known that one of the questions with which Cardinal Gibbons will deal in his interviews with the pope and the cardinals during his stay in Rome is the providing of Italian priests for the members of that nationality who are living in this country. There ought to be at least 500 priests here to meet the needs of the situation, prominent Catholics say, and because they are not here and cannot be induced to turn their steps to America, it is said that the majority of Italian immigrants rarely enter a church until they return to Italy, and if they remain here gradually fall away from religious practices. Cardinal Gibbons will point out to the pope that the United States has only one priest to every thousand faithful, while Italy has 77,000 priests for a population of 40,000,000.

To Represent Connecticut.

Hartford, Conn., June 14.—Gov. Coffin has appointed the following persons members of the committee to represent the state at the Cotton States and International exposition at Atlanta, Ga., Sept 15 to Dec. 31, 1895: Max Adler, New Haven; Frank B. Weeks, Middletown; John S. Jones, Westport, Mrs. Sara T. Kinney, New Haven; Mrs. D. Ward Northrop, Middletown, and Mrs. W. S. Chappell, New London.

Presents for the St. Paul.

Philadelphia, June 14.—Citizens of St. Paul, in whose honor the second of the International Steamship company's new American vessels have been named, not to be outdone by their St. Louis neighbors in the matter of contributing to the popularity of their namesake, have decided to equip the steamship with a first class library. A handsome set of colors will also be provided.

Shutting Down on Petroleum.

Washington, June 14.—George H. Murphy, vice-commercial agent of the United States at Luxemberg, Germany, in a report to the department of state, says a decree issued by the German minister of public works discontinuing, wherever it is practicable, the use of petroleum at railway stations in consequence of the rise in the price of American petroleum.

Sentenced for Bribery.

Detroit, Mich., June 14.—Julius Lychtenburg, ex-school inspector, who was convicted a short time ago of having accepted a bribe in connection with the awarding of a school furniture contract, has been sentenced to two and one-half years' imprisonment.

Rev. H. C. Randall in an Asylum.

Middletown, Conn., June 14.—Rev. H. C. Randall, formerly rector of the Episcopal church in Essex has been committed to an insane asylum in this city. He has been accused of grave misdemeanors, but it is thought they were caused by insanity.

Did Not Report a Contagious Diseas

Syracuse, N. Y., June 14.—Health Officer Sears will bring criminal action against Dr. A. Campbell, of this city, for violation of health ordinances in failing to notify the authorities of a case of scarlet fever that he had attended.

JAPANESE TORPEDO BOAT LOST

All But One, Including Two Americans, Drowned.

San Francisco, June 14.—A letter from Seaman Lawrence of the cruiser Charleston was received by the steamer Peru and addressed to friends on the receiving ship Independence at Mare island, reports the foundering at sea during a severe gale, on the morning of May 10, of the torpedo boat No. 16, Capt. Oseko, of the Japanese navy, off Pang Hun island, in the Pescadores.

All But One Drowned.

All the vessel's crew, excepting one man, were drowned. Among the lost were two English and two American seamen. The latters names were reported to be Alfred Lawson, formerly of Hartford, Conn., and James B. Ransom, of California.

Chinese Fishermen Refused Aid.

The vessel at the time was half a mile from shore. While the sailors were clinging to the torpedo boat which had been capsized, a number of Japanese soldiers and foreign landsmen were rushing about among the Chinese fishermen on the beach offering large rewards for the rescue of the men, but not a Chinese would respond.

ECUADOR'S NEW SILVER COIN.

It Will Be Delivered to the Bankers Who Supplied the Bullion.

Philadelphia, June 14.—The statement made in a Washington dispatch that there was a question as to whom the authorities at the Philadelphia mint would deliver nearly $1,000,000 in silver which they are coining for the Ecuadorian government was refered to Supt. Kretz. He said there were no complications, whatever likely to arise, as the bullion was received from Lazar Brothers, the bankers of New York, who represent the government of Ecuador and the coin as finished will be delivered to them. The fact that all but a few provinces in Ecuador were in the hands of revolutionists made no difference. The metal would be coined and sent to the bankers in lots of $100,000 each month until completed. A shipment would now be made in a few days.

THE SHOOTING AT PRINCETON.

A Subscription for the Defense of the Negro Collins.

Trenton, N. J., June 14.—Since the death of Frederick Ohl, one of the Princeton students who were shot by the negro Collins, detectives have been collecting evidence in the case which will be brought before the Mercer county grand jury to-day. The colored people of Trenton and Princeton are raising money by subscription for the defence of Collins. The infirmary physicians report this morning that Cochran, the other victim of the shooting, is slowly improving.

Senator Daly Retained.

Senator Daly, of Hudson, has been retained by the colored people of Trenton and Princeton to defend Collins. Senator Daly says Collins has a good defense and cannot be convicted of murder.

WILL FIGHT THE LAW.

Street Railway Companies Object To Carrying Policemen Free.

Albany, June 14.—The law passed at the late legislative session which compels all surface and elevated railway companies to carry free any policeman or fireman when on duty, on presentation of a certificate signed by the mayor of a city or the president of an incorporated village, is to be fought and the test case will be made by the Albany railway. This law also compels telephone companies to allow policemen and firemen to use instruments free and telegraph companies are obliged to transmit messages for nothing. That the telephone and telegraph companies will also fight the law on the ground of unconstitutionality is probable.

BRITISH INTERESTS IN AFRICA.

A Protectorate To Be Established from Uganda to the Coast.

London, June 14.—In the house of commons last night Sir Edward Grey announced that the government had decided to construct a railway to Uganda, Central Africa, and to establish a protectorate over the country between Uganda and the coast. He asked the house to vote £30,000 yearly to meet the expense of administering the protectorate. The money grant was adopted by a vote of 249 to 51.

Moody Preaches at Saratoga.

Saratoga, N. Y., June 14.—Three thousand people congregated in Convention hall last night to listen to Dwight L. Moody, who conducted the closing session of the State Sunday School association. For an hour he spoke of the "Bible." In opening he spoke of a class of persons who he said could not speak for themselves, namely "criminal," and said that he was making an effort to place the Bible in the hands of the 750,000 criminals in the country.

SILVER MEN AGREE

Memphis Convention Adjourns in Harmony.

Resolutions Advocating Free Coinage of Silver and Gold at 16 to 1 Adopted—International Co-operation Declared To Be Not Necessary—No Talk About Party Lines.

Memphis, Tenn., June 14.—Notwithstanding the cloud that for a moment threatened to darken the horizon of the free silver convention of southern and western states the end was harmony, and there was no fight over the resolutions after they were read to the convention, for the reason that they carefully avoided any reference calculated to produce discord.

Co-operation Not Necessary.

The resolutions advocate the free and unlimited coinage of gold and silver at the ratio of 16 to 1, declare that international co-operation is not necessary, and attribute the recent hard times entirely to the demonetization of silver. Although nothing was said in the resolutions about abolition of party lines, as proposed by Sibley, Stewart and others, the speakers of the day, almost without exception, took care to assert their democracy, and to repudiate any affiliation with either republicans or populists.

MISS WANAMAKER WED.

The Daughter of the ex-Postmaster-General Becomes Mrs. Warburton.

Philadelphia, June 14.—Miss Wanamaker, daughter of John Wanamaker, postmaster-general in the cabinet of President Harrison, was married yesterday afternoon to Barclay H. Warburton, the publisher of the Evening Telegraph of this city. The ceremony took place at half-past 4 o'clock at Lindenhurst, the home of the bride's parents, at Chelton hills, a suburb of Philadelphia. The Rev. Dr. Charles A. Dickey, pastor of Bethany Presbyterian church, officiated. Miss Elizabeth Wanamaker, the bride's sister, was the maid of honor. Mr. Warburton was accompanied by Franklin Duane as best man, and there were eight ushers. The wedding was a quiet affair, only the immediate members of the two families being present, in addition to those mentioned.

INVESTIGATING COLIMA WRECK

Evidence Showing Carelessness and Stupidity of the Officers.

San Francisco, June 14.—The federal investigation in the matter of the Colima disaster was continued yesterday afternoon. Gustav Rowan, one of the passengers, testified he was in the steerage when the vessel listed very suddenly to one side, no one being able to stand up. He waited to secure a life preserver, but the steward prevented him because he said it would be too much trouble to put them back again. During all the time the vessel was in such danger he said not one of the officers warned the passengers of their peril. The witness also testified that at Manzanillo a freight wagon was put on deck but not lashed. Other freight was put on top of the lumber, but nothing was tied down.

PROMOTION FOR W. L. WILSON.

The Postmaster General's Son Will Succeed Ex-Paymaster Smith.

Washington, June 14.—Assistant paymaster Walter L. Wilson, the son of Postmaster-General Wilson, who was appointed to the navy fifteen months ago by President Cleveland, will be promoted to the next higher grade of his corps by reason of a vacancy caused by Paymaster Smith's dismissal from the service. Mr. Wilson is attached to the Machias on the China station, having joined that vessel for his first service at Norfolk last September.

VOTED TO DIVIDE RELIEF FUND.

Eight of Malden's Best Known Policemen Discharged.

Malden, Mass., June 14.—Eight of the best known police officers of this city, including one inspector, were discharged from the force by Mayor Stevens last evening, his action being unanimously endorsed by the board of aldermen. With one exception the dismissed men voted for the division of the funds of the police relief association among the members thereof, this action being the case given for their discharge.

A Woman on a Long Tramp.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 14.—A female pedestrian, who is walking from Oswego to New York on a wager of $2,000, passed through this city yesterday. She refused to give her name and unlike other pedestrians she steers shy of publicity. She left Oswego last Sunday morning. Her sole companion is a fine bred shepherd dog.

Sportsman Tips Banquet.

London, June 14.—In the issue of the Sportsman to-day its Newmarket correspondent tips Banquet to win the Birmingham handicap. Its Birmingham correspondent says that Banquet is a possible winner. Sporting Life will say that Banquet may do better on the straight mile at Birmingham than he did in the race for the Manchester cup.

Three Men Convicted of Murder.

Lowell, Mass., June 14.—The jury in the case of Patrick Sullivan, Patrick J. Foley and Cornelius Nagle, who were indicted for murder in causing the death of Duroy S. Foster, of Burlington, Mass., by shooting on the highway last September, last night returned a verdict of guilty of murder in the second degree.

FEW KNOW ABOUT THE SHAKERS OF MOUNT LEBANON.

We may not accept their peculiar religious views. We cannot enter into the spirit of their sacrifices, and therefore we do not study their habits of life.

It is not necessary to believe as they do, but we can and do respect their sincerity of purpose and the honor and uprightness which mark all their business dealings.

In one particular the Shakers excel all other men or classes of men. This is in the cultivation of medicinal herbs and plants. They have made it a study for more than one hundred years. They are also expert in extracting from them their characteristic essences and medicinal virtues.

This is their peculiar industry. Their lives have been devoted to it. By it they are supported. They excel in this branch as do the Monks of the order of St. Benedict with their famous liqueur called "Benedictine."

Now, this lifelong study on the part of the Shakers has not been in vain. They have accomplished much good. Their medicinal extracts and cordials are known throughout the world.

The Shaker Digestive Cordial is probably the most useful medicine ever given to the public. It is not a cure for all diseases; it doesn't pretend to be; but one disease it will cure, and that is indigestion. It is not pretended that it will cure anything else, and a sufferer has not long to wait to see the result. The effect is immediate. Almost the first dose will give relief, and, if continued, a permanent cure will follow. The Shaker motto is:—"Prove all things and hold fast that which is good." For this reason the Shakers put into the hands of the retail druggists who sell their remedy small trial bottles, which can be had for ten cents each, so that for this small sum the reader can ascertain whether it is adapted to his case.
